PREFACE.

THE Pronunciation of a Language consists of sounds and articulations; and the greatest difficulty met with in learning to read, arises from the words being written and spelt otherwise than they are pronounced. If then the sounds and articulations of a foreign language, and the combinations of those sounds and articulations, that is, the various ways of representing them in writing, were exhibited in proper tables to the learner, with the corresponding sounds and articulations of his own language, that difficulty would be in a great measure removed*. The nature of the thing itself points out the true method of obtaining the pronunciation.

Of the seventeen sounds of the French language, fifteen are in English, even our nasal vowels, and e, both guttural and mute; eux and un only are not; and liquid g only, as expressed in gueux, is perhaps the only articulation that is not in English: for I dare maintain that our liquid n and l are in the English words minion, billiards, million. I maintain, likewise, that these following English words are exactly pronounced like the French ones underneath:

fat,	hall,	long,	parlour †,	fare,
un fat,	le hâle,	longue,	parleur,	faire or fer,
bell,	pen,	swear,	sum or some,	sweat,
belle,	peine,	soir,	somme,	souhaite, pull,	kit,	we, &c.
poule,	quitte,	oui.

Those who deny it, only proclaim their ignorance of the French pronunciation. The English sounds, that are compared to the French ones in my tables, have been weighed, as it were, in a pair of scales. This comparative view has been the object of above twenty years' meditation; and the sounds

* I say in a great measure, because of the final consonants of words, some of which are always dropt, and some always pronounced; some are sometimes articulated, and sometimes not.

† There is a difference of accent, not of sound, in the pronunciation of these two words.

have been found exactly corresponding to each other, by several English Gentlemen, who have been long enough conversant with people of fashion and character abroad, to become masters of the pronounciation, and who are therefore competent judges of the matter.

This work is divided into three parts: and I have printed in a small character such observations as are not fit for beginners: but must be omitted, in order for them to learn first what is essential to the language; that they may thereby be the sooner enabled to enter into the construing of the French books. Each Part of Speech is treated of, both with respect to its accidance and construction, in a manner that leaves nothing further to be said upon the same subjects. There is not one construction in French, but is taken notice of, and reduced into rules. And I have reserved for an Appendix some more particular observations, that could not be inserted in the body of the work, without interrupting that order which I proposed; but which are nevertheless necessary to the understanding and writing French.

Another advantage that youth and illiterate people will reap from it is, that in learning French, they will at the same time learn the art of speaking, the reason of the words they utter, the economy of all languages. Therefore after a succinct, but clear and exact analysis of the analogy and foundations of languages, prefixed by way of introduction, I give in the sequel true and perfect notions of the Parts of Speech, and other Grammatical terms used in the work: and both the division of the work, and definitions used in it, will be found grounded in the nature of things, and formed after the most exact rules of Logic. This (though the young learner need not at first trouble himself with it) seemed to me the more necessary, as there is no treatise on Grammar fit for youth and illiterate persons; all the English, as well as the Latin and French Grammars, used in schools, being quite defective in that respect, and the definitions in them, for the most part, false, though generally used by Grammarians.

I think, after the generality of Grammarians, that all the words of which speech is composed, may be ranged into eight or nine classes; but I differ from them as to the true species of words, which are the constituent parts of speech. Thus I keep from that number the Participle, which is no distinct species from the Verb, of which it is only a mode; and I admit the Adnoun, which they confound with the Noun, though essentially different, I acknowledge the Particles for one of the Parts of Speech: but I fix them to a particular species of words, which are neither Adverbs, nor Prepositions, nor Conjunctions. How these came to be so confounded by Grammarians, as to be all promiscuously called by one name, to which they have fixed no idea, and be at the same time distinguished by particular ideas, which fix their species, cannot be easily accounted for. Things specifically distinguished must have distinct appellations. Again: I admit of one Article only, and of no case at all in nouns, contrary to all those who have written upon the French language before me. I give my reasons for that singularity. Reason, and the right of the thing, not imitation, is my guide, and the rule which I go by throughout this performance.

And now, having given an account of this work, I shall say something of the method of teaching and learning French, whereon depends the whole success of those who are desirous of attaining to the knowledge of that language: for I am satisfied that the little progress of Learners is often owing to the mismanagement of Teachers, who are so far from being qualified for their art, that they do not so much as suspect that it is one. Teaching French is become the profession of Foreigners of all sorts, who know not how to shift for a living, and often have no qualification at all. The generality of the French know not their mother-tongue: but the few who are masters of it are not, on that single account, capable of teaching it. I have composed this performance, not only for the instruction of the English who learn French, but also for the use of such Teachers as are not masters of that language. I hope it will be advantageous to them in all respects: for they must have the mastery of it, and make the rules familiar to them, that they may readily represent them upon occasion to their scholars, whenever they happen to write or speak wrong. I shall therefore subjoin my own method of teaching, which is grounded both upon reason and experience.

The lesson consists of four or five parts, which ought to keep an equal pace together: the materials of the language, I mean the Vocabulary and Forms of Speech; the way of using them, or the Grammar; the Exercise, which is the practice of the Grammar Rules; and the pronunciation, or reading: to which translating and construing must be added, when the scholar has learnt his Accidence. The lesson must always begin with the pronunciation, and each part always follow in its turn in the same order, for fear of forgetting something.

Before the Master shows his scholars the vowels of the first table, he himself must pronounce distinctly to them each vowel one after another, and make them pronounce the same after him; then make them pronounce the first four together, then four more, and so on: and when he is satisfied that his pupils have got the pronunciation of them all, he must show them in the first table the letters by which those sounds are represented; pronouncing again first the vowel, as he points it out to his pupils, and making them pronounce it after him. He may then explain to them what a vowel is, in the very words of the definition set down in page 5; and tell them that the vowels marked with a circumflex over them, have a much broader and longer sound than the others; and that the nasal vowels are so called, on account of their being pronounced through the nose. Afterwards he must show them the mute e; but must take care not to pronounce it.

When the scholars know their vowels, as represented in the first table, the Master must show them the second, which contains the several ways of representing the vowels; and inform them, that all those combinations of letters, such as ai, ei, oi, et, &c. represent each of them only the sound of the vowel beginning the line, and that ai, ei, oi, et, &c. must be pronounced è. They are to pronounce each combination after him, and then repeat or pronounce them by themselves as he points at each of those combinations. The master must then observe to them, that e mute is represented these three ways, e, es, ent.

The table of the consonants is to be used after the same manner, the Master pronouncing them first with the guttural sound of e (or cu) but very weak, just to show the articulation. They are ranged according to their several efficient causes; those which are produced by the same disposition and motion of the lips or tongue, being placed against each other.

The tables of the syllables must be learnt next, the Master still pronouncing first the syllable, and making his Pupil pronounce it after him, without spelling; that is, without causing him to name first the consonant, and then the vowel of which the syllable is formed. But the learner must read the syllables, not only in their natural order, from the left to the right, but also from the right to the left, from top to bottom, and again from bottom to top, till he is perfect in the pronunciation of them. Next comes the table of Monosyllables: then two other tables to acquaint the learner when the consonants ought not to be pronounced at the end of words and syllables, and when they ought; lastly, the table of the combinations of sounds. The learner must get this last table by heart, and have six or eight syllables, with the words annexed to them, set him every time, as part of his task: and when he has learnt all those combinations, go through them over again after the same manner; adding a rule of the final consonants, with its exception; and thus repeat these tables a third and fourth time, nay, till the Master is convinced, by the pupil's reading, that he has them thoroughly, and they have made a lasting impression on his mind. Afterwards he must make him read the Vocabulary and Forms of Speech (but still without spelling), reading each word first, and making the pupil repeat it after him: and give him a certain number of words and sentences to get by heart, more or less, according to his capacity.

Spelling will not do at all; and is, on the contrary, the greatest hinderance to the learning of the pronunciation. Children must be accustomed to read the words without naming each letter separately, one after another: they will soon learn to read, if they are taught their letters and syllables after the manner contained in the tables. The usual method of teaching children to read, in making them name the vowels and consonants by themselves, is quite absurd. To evidence this beyond contradiction, let us suppose the pronunciation of this word champs is to be learnt. If you make the pupil spell, he will say, cey, ash, â, em, pey, ess, and he will stop of course; because the separate sounds of c, h, a, m, p, s, cannot give him any idea of the combined sound, which is to be pronounced. How should they? Those letters, named singly after one another, make six different sounds and articulations, none of which separately has, or altogether have, any manner of affinity of resemblance to the single articulated sound expressed by champs. The master, seeing his pupil stop after spelling this word, pronounces himself champs to him; and the pupil, echo-like, repeats champs. Spelling, therefore, can only serve to confound the learner, and lead him into error, in intimating to him that there are six sounds in champs, though the teacher is obliged, after all, to convince him by his own pronunciation that there is but one. Let the word be pronounced at first to the learner, and the difficulty is removed; that sound will make a right impression upon his mind; and whenever he sees the same combination of letters, he will remember the sound represented by them, and will pronounce the word right.

Moreover, the names of the letters most commonly offer false notions, nay, sounds and articulations directly opposite to those which are to be pronounced. The letter c is pronounced sometimes k, and sometimes s. Its name cey, leads the learner to pronounce sa for ka, and to read lâce for lac. G is sometimes pronounced gue, as is Gog, Agag, and sometimes jey. The name of gey, which the learner gives it in spelling, leads him naturally to read, Joge for Gog, and Ajage for Agag. Some Masters, hearing a child make such mistakes in reading, are apt to fret, to fall into a passion, and perhaps to abuse him. But how can the child help it, if he pronounces false sounds, into which he is naturally led by those names of the letters, which his master has been at great pains to teach him? He must not blame the child, but his own method only, and reform it.

The method here recommended to the Teacher has experience for its voucher; it has never failed me. But, upon the whole, those that are fond of spelling, may as well make their pupils spell the words of the Vocabulary and Forms of Speech, as a set of unmeaning words of two, three, or four syllables; since those materials of the language cannot be learnt too early. I make my scholars begin with the Adverbs, instead of the common Nouns, that they may have the indeclinable parts of speech, the Adverbs, Prepositions, and Conjunctions, treasured up in their memory, against the time they will be capable of construing French. This is the most difficult and necessary part of the Vocabulary; and, when once learnt, the scholar will meet with nothing to stop him in construing, but the signification of the Nouns, Adnouns, and Verbs, which he will learn of course by dint of translating and construing, besides his usual task out of the Vocabulary.

After minding the pronounciation and materials of the language, the Grammar must be thought of. Therefore the master will set his scholar a lesson out of the Accidence; explain to him what a noun is, that it is of a gender, has two numbers, and is commonly preceded by the article, and what is meant by each of these terms; make him read the four rules for the formation of the plural number (p. 101.) with the two last paragraphs of page 111 about the article, apply the rules to the nouns set down for his pattern (p. 112.) and take notice to him of the conformity of the examples to these rules: then exercise him immediately upon the same, in making him write down the first noun of the Introduction to the Writing of French in French and English, through its three states in both numbers, according to his examples, to show him how to do it by himself; and set him, for his exercise, three or four nouns to be done after the same manner; and give him, besides, those rules about the plural number and agreement of the article with the noun, to get by heart as part of his task. A grown person will easily learn this in one lesson. Young scholars of an indifferent capacity may be made two, or three, or four lessons of the same, and they will have it perfect, before they have done half a dozen exercises upon the accidence of nouns. Afterwards they must learn the rules for the formation of the verbs, (p. 137.) omitting the exceptions at first, which are to be learned only the second time of going through these rules: for, as soon as they have been got by heart, they must be repeated with the exceptions; and the scholar be put to the practice of them, in turning into French the exercises upon the accidence of verbs: and he must prove every tense and person of his exercise by his rules.

The six rules about the Gender of Nouns (p. 105, 106.) are to be learnt next with the exceptions; afterwards the rules for the formation of the feminine gender of the Adnouns (p. 114. & 115.); lastly, those of the construction of the Article (p. 209). When the pupil has learnt so far, he must put the first chapter of the third part of the Exercises into French; and, after his master has corrected his exercise, prove the same by his Grammar rules: but the teacher must first prepare the exercise to his young scholar, after the manner set down in the preface to that book. While he is exercising upon the article, he must learn the rules for the construction of the Pronouns personal; and, as soon as he can say them, be put into that chapter of the Exercises: then return to the Accidence of the Adnouns, and learn also their construction (p. 221. and following); and whilst he is exercising upon the same, learn a new set of rules, in order to be put into the next chapter of the Exercises, and so on, till he has gone through all the Parts of Speech and their principles.

When the scholar has learnt his Accidence, he must construe a French book, and enter into the understanding of the language. He must also repeat his verbs, especially the irregular; conjugate a new verb every time, after saying first where the irregularity of the verb lies; and then learn the observations belonging to each verb. He must likewise go through his Syntax over again, and learn the notes. But the masters must insist upon their scholars learning well their rules, and never suffer them to learn any thing new, before they thoroughly understand, and can readily repeat what is before; which is also a light and help to what follows. The contrary would be prejudicial to children, and rather retard than forward them. They learn fast enough, when they learn well. Sat citò, si sat benè.

But the great difficulty is to procure books fit for beginners. Télémaque, and Molière are excellent books, but never were composed nor designed for learning French. They suppose a thorough knowledge of the language, and are the last books that ought to be read, in order to relish the beauties and delicacies of it, and learn its figurative, idiomatical, and proverbial ways of speaking; and a Teacher cannot more plainly show his want of judgment, than in causing beginners to construe such books. Who would advise a Foreigner, who wants to learn English, to read Milton's Paradise Lost, which a great part of the English themselves do not rightly understand, or some witty play? I say the same of French books of literature. They must certainly be read, but in their turn. The rule in all kinds of learning is, or ought to be, to proceed by insensible steps from what is easy to what is difficult. Beginners must read only books easy to be understood, written in the most plain and natural style, without any thing puzzling, either in the expression or in the turn of the sentences, and the subject ought to be known and agreeable to their capacity: for the whole business at first is to make them learn the true import and proper signification of words, and their general construction.

I recommended, about twelve or fourteen years ago, a book which has gained immortal honour to its author; I mean Comenii Janua Linguarum reserata: a performance contrived with incredible art and pains to promote more effectually the learning of languages; and which has been translated, not only into all the languages of Europe, besides the Latin and Greek, but also into the Arabic, Turkish, Persian, and even the Mogul's language: and has gone through a great many Polyglot editions. The ingenious author, in methodising all the works of nature and art, all that is the object of our senses and understanding, has not only brought under proper heads all the words and common constructions of a language, but also explained things and their differences; so that his performance is a compendious system of learning, altogether proper to form the minds of youth, and enrich them with knowledge, at the same time that they are learning languages. How it comes to pass that so valuable a book is now quite disused in schools, and known only to some Men of Letters, is indeed a matter of wonder. Would it not be worth a Bookseller's while to get that work reprinted in French and English?

As to the first construing book, the scholar must first translate his lesson, then construe it; and the construction must be literal, taking one French word only, then one English word, except the article and noun, the pronoun and verb, which must not be parted. By and by, after he shall have gone through a dozen of pages, he must take three or four words together, so as to make a sense, as the noun and adnoun, the subject and the verb, with its regimen. But this is only one half of the business. The young scholar must now digest his lesson (if I may use the expression), in studying it over again another way; and, after he has construed it, must be called upon for every word, first in French, then in English, according to the order of the parts of speech: noun, adnoun, verb, adverb, preposition, conjunction, and particle. By that means, and the set of words which he is to get by heart every time out of his Vocabulary, a child will treasure up in his memory the words of the language, of which he will understand the divers significations, and of which he will soon find the advantage for speaking French. The master must keep to this method, all the first construing book throughout, taking notice, besides, all along to his pupil, of the constructions of which he has learnt the rules: and when he has gone through his Grammar, make him parse, that is, account for the construction of every word of his lesson, and show how each governs or is governed by another in the sentence.

Of the books which are to be read next, some are to be construed only to the master, the scholar having first studied his lesson, and others to be translated and rendered according to the beauties of the English Tongue; but in both he must pass over nothing unexplained, and that he does not entirely understand. The master must make him render faithfully the true spirit of the author; I say faithfully, and not literally, which is necessary only in the beginning, and when the scholar is at a loss how to find out the sense himself. He must take notice to him of the divers forms of speech, turns, and idioms of the two languages; of the propriety of the French words, that is, their significations both proper and figurative; of the choice of the expressions, in mentioning others almost alike, but which would not sufficiently express the thought, or which might be used in common discourse, but would be unsuitable to the dignity of composition; and especially he ought to explain the use and force of the prepositions, and adverbial ways of speaking, in which consists the idiom of a language, which he must always have in view with his scholars. I cannot swell this Preface with examples, to show by their application that true way of studying French Authors which I here recommend. An ingenious and able teacher, who has his duty at heart, that is, the improvement of the learners, will not be at a loss how to promote it: but there is little to be expected from those who either want the qualifications necessary for their business, or are so bigotted to their own method, as to scorn to listen to any new instructions.

By this time the scholar will pronounce pretty well: therefore he must read with his Master the treatise on the Pronunciation, which makes the first part of this work. He will then see with pleasure the principles of the pronunciation of which he has got the practice already; will easily correct the few defects in his reading; and, in a little time, become entirely perfect therein. He must likewise try to speak French. If he exerts himself he will find that he can speak a great deal more than he imagined, and will be surpris'd at his own progress. But this wants explanation: which will, at the same time, lead me to the resolution of a question frequently put to French masters: In how much time can one learn French?

The term of scholar, learner, pupil, which I am obliged to make use of in this Essay, has a two-fold signification. A scholar signifies, first, a person whose judgment is formed, a man of parts, who, being sensible of the benefit of learning, learns French of his own accord, and therefore acts his part, and pursues his study with diligence and steadiness. A scholar is also a child of ten or twelve years of age, or under, whose understanding is not open yet, of an indifferent capacity, and no inclination at all for learning. A grown person of parts and application will learn his Accidence in a couple of months; be able in less than three to construe a French book, and turn into French the first chapter of the Exercises; and go through the whole course of the language, all along with the Exercises upon the Grammar Rules, in less than a twelvemonth. Such scholars indeed can then exert themselves in the practice of what they have learnt. They understand common French, and can make themselves understood. Yet they are not masters of the French language. They have learnt too fast, without allowing themselves time for digesting their learning. The matters which they have been studying, have only grazed on their mind, without making any deep impression; a new set of rules generally driving away those that were learnt before. Moreover, when they are out of the drudgery of the Accidence, and have once entered into the understanding and writing of the language, they are generally apt to neglect their Vocabulary and Forms of Speech, and forget that the several parts of their business ought to keep an equal pace together. They must therefore go through their principles over again, and keep to their method of studying for twelve months longer: for it is by dint of reading only they can learn the several significations of the words, and make themselves masters of the Idioms.

But supposing a grown person of parts and application can learn French in a twelvemonth; it is also reasonable to suppose that he applies himself to his business, and reads four times more, and takes four times more pains, than a child will, or is able to do; therefore a child cannot be less than four or five years learning the same. There is no proposition in Euclid more evident. It is as plain as that two and two make four.

The learning of a language is the work of time and application. It cannot be learnt in a short time, nor without taking great pains. That is impossible in the nature of the thing: and children learn nothing but by repeating the same thing over and over again. But if they do not learn so fast as grown persons, they generally learn better. They will speak French, of course, after they have learnt how to speak; for we are all apt to show our accomplishments. If both they and their master act their part, you may rest satisfied that they come on well, though they cannot speak. Do not be impatient at the operations of Nature; she works but slowly. Children, in a good state of health, and under a wholesome diet, grow constantly, though their growing is not constantly observable. It is even so with the mind: it improves constantly, so it is properly cultivated; though it is in process of time only that we can perceive the improvement. It is impossible for one not to be able to speak the language, when thus made capable of it; and it is as impossible to be made capable of it, otherwise than by studying its Genius, and learning methodically.

It is a great abuse introduced in most schools to force beginners to speak nothing but French among themselves. They of necessity must either speak wrong (even supposing that they have a competent stock of words and expressions, for it is the utmost absurdity to pretend that they will learn them by guessing), or condemn themselves to silence. The first cannot but be very detrimental to them; since they thereby accustom themselves to a barbarous broken French, which is no language at all, and cannot be worn out without infinite pains. The second is still worse, for it hinders them from disclosing freely their thoughts, and straitens in some measure their understanding; but, above all, gives them the utmost aversion to the language, their books, and master: to prevent which too much care cannot be employed.

It is amazing to see how apt people are to deceive themselves, and how easy to be imposed upon, by designing crafty men, who improve the general simplicity to their own private gain. To this is owing the abuse of which I am complaining. The generality of people, being incapable to reflect duly upon the nature of a language, and the faculties of the human mind, have hardly put their children to the study of the French language, but they expect them to speak it, before they have learnt how to speak: and in case they do not, never fail to task the master either with incapacity or neglect of his business.

The masters, on the other hand, being at a loss to satisfy those unreasonable expectations, and not knowing what to contrive for forwarding their boys, presently begin by making them learn words, dialogues, and phrases, and labour hard to beat into their heads as many common sentences as they can; pretty near after the same manner as parrots are instructed. And, as has been hinted before, the absurdity is even carried so far in some schools, as to confine the poor boys, under all sorts of penalties and punishments, to the talking nothing else but French. The consequence of which is, they acquire the knack of talking a Gibberish, which nobody can make any thing of. The ignorant parents, charmed, however, with the show their children make of their learning, think them great proficient in the French tongue. They recommend the school as one of the best for learning, and so the master gets his ends; but, in truth, the poor boys know nothing of French, and the parents are deceived and imposed upon.

To evidence this, let us observe, that two things are chiefly to be considered in the learning of language: first, the words, then, the using those words conformably to the genius of the language. The one is the object of memory, the other that of judgment and reflection. The learning of words is nothing less than getting by heart the whole Dictionary of a language; and cannot be performed within a small compass of time, even by the best memory that youth was ever blessed with. The right placing and using of words in speech require a constant and steady application of the mind, and cannot be acquired but by much meditation upon the language, either by oneself, or with a teacher; by frequently construing, and turning that language into our mother-tongue, and vice versâ, our mother-tongue into that language, and comparing all along the Genius and Idiom of the two languages. Although it is evident that this must require a vast compass of time, yet it is the more speedily brought about, when one proceeds with method. Afterwards comes the practice of both, to require a due readiness of the mind for writing or speaking.

If nothing more was necessary than to learn to jabber, or to show in company that they can speak some French words and phrases, that, indeed, would not require so much art and method. But as for those who are either designed to be scholars, or to be concerned in some trade that requires a correspondence with foreign merchants; who either intend to travel like rational creatures, with a design to adorn their mind by the conversation of the learned and polite part of Europe; or who, by reason of their birth and qualities, are entitled to those honourable stations, wherein they shall be intrusted, either at home or abroad, with the interest of their King and country: for these, I say, who must of course attain to a mastery in the language, there is much art and method required; though, at the same time, there is seldom any used.

One may daily see in schools young lads who have been learning French for five or six years, and who pass with some for good scholars, on account of that readiness with which they express themselves. But they observe no concord at all; cannot so much as make the adnoun agree with the noun; are utterly incapable of writing four lines, or even to make sense of half a page of a common French book; in short, they know no more than the words and phrases of their own book. Can this be called knowledge of a language, without perverting our ideas of things, and renouncing our own sense and understanding? Whereas, studying half that time, in the manner I propose, would have made them perfect masters of the language, and enabled them to converse and correspond with foreigners upon all subjects.

As to the time, therefore, that children must be put to the speaking of French, these rules, in my humble opinion, ought to be strictly observed. First, that they should have a sufficient stock of words, and even of ways of speaking, to express themselves; and, besides, that they should be capable of using them according to the genius of the language. In the next place, that they should not be suffered to speak French too soon among themselves, without somebody with them to correct them. Therefore, when a master finds a boy capable of speaking French under these two limitations, I would have him discourse himself with him in a way suitable to his capacity, doing it at first in the same sentences and expressions, that he has learnt in his forms of speech, changing only the order of the construction, but keeping to the same words. Moreover, in schools, a teacher should, twice or thrice a week, spend some time in exercising his scholars in the speaking of French, conversing in an easy and friendly manner with them; asking the youngest questions within their reach; helping them to make their answers: requiring, from those that are more forward, descriptions and recitals of what they have heard, seen, or read; and speaking nothing but French to the forwardest and most perfect in the language, nor suffer them to speak English, except to those who cannot discourse with them in French. It is after this manner boys will be effectually brought to the speaking of French, and not at all by using themselves to the aforesaid gibberish that prevails in schools.

It will not be amiss to set before the reader a specimen of that barbarous language wherein School-boys are trained up, under the specious pretence of speaking French.

It now remains to answer the objections that may be made against this method of learning and teaching French.

Some people urge, that the best way of learning a language, is to learn by practice: that it is impossible to make sure rules upon a living language, which is entirely grounded upon use: that these rules are destroyed by the exceptions, which prove that they are groundless: and, in fine, that it is too tedious and painful for children to get such rules by heart: that it is overloading their memory, and losing a great deal of time which may be better employed in making them speak French : and that the rules serve only to puzzle their understanding.

1st, I am so much convinced of the excellency of practice in all things, and especially that a living language is a practical science, that it is for no other purpose I have taken so much pains in composing this Grammar, and the Exercises upon the different rules which it contains, than to put the learner, the sooner and more effectually into the practice of the language ; and thereby remedy the general complaint, that the generality of those who learn French get no other benefit from their pains and application, than that of understanding common French books, without ever being able to speak or write that language. But I also easily persuade myself, that those who make this objection, mistake rote for practice, than which nothing is more absurd.

Practice, rightly understood, consists in exercising oneself, upon what one has learnt, and in the frequent using of the terms and idiomatical phrases of a language. It therefore supposes the previous learning, not only of words to speak, but also of the rules for using them, conformably to the genius of that language. Practice, then, has not learning for its object, but is itself the object of learning, and is no more than the exercise of the mind upon the thing learnt. It is undeniably true, that any one, who has once learnt how to write and speak a language, ought afterwards to speak it, as often as he can find an opportunity, as well in order to retain it, as to use it with greater fluency and ease ; and this only is called Practice. But as to the means of attaining a due exactness and propriety in the writing and speaking of a language for beginners, who most certainly cannot practise what they have never learnt before, unless they come at the knowledge of the words of a language, and the way of using them, by Conjugation, there is no other, I dare maintain, than that of studying methodically the principles and rules of it after the manner I propose.

Neither let it be urged, in support of that wrong notion some people entertain of practice, that infants learn their mother-tongue without being taught, and only by hearing others speak. For without inquiring here into the faculty of the soul in this respect, which would not prove favourable to those who plead this instance, it may suffice to answer, that it is obvious to any body, who reflects ever so little upon the case, that that knowledge which young children have of their mother-tongue, is confined within a very narrow compass : nor does it extend further than merely to express the most common concerns and wants of Nature in that tender age; till, after having learnt to read, they gradually improve in the learning of the words and expressions of their mother-tongue, in proportion as by reading and instruction they improve their intellectual faculties.

As to putting young persons into French families where not one word of English is spoken, or even sending them over to France, both reason and experience convince us, that unless they are previously grounded in the principles, they can receive no other benefit than that of practising common compliments, or exercising themselves in the trifling topics of familiar discourse. For unless they study with some qualified person, who makes them read much, and translate French into English, as well as English into French, pointing out, as they go on, the Genius and Idiom of that language, they will be so far from becoming masters of its Scope and Beauty, that, even after staying ten, nay twenty or more years in France, they will find themselves almost as far from understanding the true spirit of a French Author, or conversing in an intelligible manner upon any material subject, as at their first going thither.

The French Refugees are a striking proof of this. An English Gentleman hearing once an old French Refugee say, that he had been fifty years in England, and expressing his surprise that he could not speak English at all; Lack-a-day, Sir, said the Frenchman, what English can one learn in fifty years? Hélas, Monsieur, qu'est-ce qu'on peut apprendre d'Anglois en cinquante ans? Neither is it an uncommon thing to see English people, who can hardly make themselves understood in French, though they have lived twenty or thirty years in that country.

Should a parent, who is desirous that his son should learn Music, say to an excellent Master of that Art, I will have my son learn Music; but pray do not make him lose a deal of time in learning what you call the principles of your art, without singing a pretty tune. Put him at once in the practice: there is nothing like it. Let your rules alone, your gamuts and keys, which are only the cant of Music. I will have him learn by practice, I say. Sing airs to him, and make him sing. Never speak to him but in singing: he cannot fail of learning to sing when he hears nothing else. His child could never learn Music after this manner. He might perhaps learn how to sing some airs, which he had often heard* repeated to him ; but he could never sing at the opening of a book, for want of having first learnt the nature, use and power, of the several notes that compose Music, which are the rules of Harmony, and guides to the voice. It is the same with a language. Those who are desirous to learn it, must begin with the principles, proceed by the application, and finish by the practice of them. To act contrarily, is to pervert the natural order of things, and attempt impossibilities. To obtain an end in any thing, one must use the necessary means to it ; and that the principles are the necessary means of learning a language, is agreed upon by all judicious men, both ancient and modern.

2dly, I grant, that use alone has, without reason, and oftentimes contrary to it, established several ways of speaking in a language ; but they must know those ways of speaking thus established, for the understanding of the authors that have written, and daily do write, in that language, and conform themselves to them, if they are desirous to write or speak it. These particularities, therefore, which use has thus established, and to which the learner must necessarily conform, must either be in some manner distinguished to him, or he must fix upon them by his own observation : for no other method can be thought of to know them, and yet they must be known. .

Now, who will pretend to learn by himself, and without help, those caprices of use, which make the essence of a language ; by studying deeply the books written therein ; meditating upon the nature and use of every different expression ; taking notice that many hundred nouns are of one gender, many hundred others of another, and many besides used in both genders, but with divers significations according to their gender ; that, among verbs, some require one relation in the noun, and some another ; that they are affected by such and such conjunctions as to their moods ; and remembering all those nouns, verbs, and conjunctions, severally ; and making many more such observations, without which one cannot attain to the knowledge of a language, and which also suppose the knowledge of Grammar ? But though a man might dive in this manner into the bottom of a language, will it not be shorter and easier for him to read only one performance, where he shall find all those observations ready digested in a clear method, so that he needs only reflect upon them to have a key to the entire knowledge of that language ?—All ways of speaking were originally established independent upon any rule ; but they are become by use the very rules of speaking, which make the Grammar of a language : and if they are not studied and entirely known, it is impossible ever to speak or write conformably to use.—As to the exceptions, far from destroying the general rules, they are more particular rules, which oftentimes strengthen and illustrate them.

3dly, It is well known that children do not want memory ; that memory is active in them only, and it is of great moment to cultivate it, in that tender age, in those that have but little. To overload the memory of a child, would be to make him learn too much at once, and things which he does not understand ; but not to give a moderate lesson to get by heart, after having well explained it to him. To learn the examples that attend the rules, and promote the understanding of them, is a very great help to the memory. There is no doubt but some children have more memory and capacity than others, and therefore can be sooner forwarded : but they must all learn the Grammar, since it is the only means to attain to the knowledge of a language, as I have, I think, sufficiently proved. Moreover, must not they learn, sooner or later, the words of the language, which are the mere object of memory ? If so, one of the great benefits which they will reap from this performance is, that in learning the rules of their Grammar, they will at the same time, insensibly, and as if by artificial memory, learn almost all the words of the French tongue ; so much is it calculated for their improvement. Should they learn the words and examples only, without any observation upon them, they could get no knowledge of the language at all, the words being only the materials of it, and its Genius and Idiom consisting in the use of them. And should they learn but few rules, they could know but part of that Genius and Idiom, as this Grammar would be defective, if it did not contain all the observations that can be made upon the language. Besides, there is always in a language matter enough left to be learnt by practice only, which no art can reduce into rules, as may be seen in the Idioms all over my Dictionary. It would be therefore to no purpose to urge that the learning of these rules is too hard for children, and that they can only serve to puzzle their understanding ; for if there be any children that cannot learn them, I declare them altogether incapable, not only of learning French, but of any sort of learning at all. “ The art of Grammar is necessary for children,” says Quintilian ; “ it forms the minds of those who begin.” And as the understanding of languages serves for an introduction to all sciences, so by studying the rules of Grammar, children begin to reflect, to have their understandings opened, and exert their tender and hopeful parts; and thereby render themselves capable of studying in time more difficult sciences.

If, notwithstanding these proofs of the most effectual means of mastering a language, which carry all the conviction in the world along with them, there are people that still continue to be prejudiced against a regular and methodical way of learning, they must be left to their irrational conceptions; my design being to be serviceable to those only who are desirous to make themselves, or their children, perfect in the French tongue, who seek earnestly for the best means to effect it, and are sensible of the benefit of a good guide in the pursuit thereof. And if the method, which I have here proposed, will not bring them to the happy accomplishment of their wishes, I dare insist on it, no other ever will.

SPEAKING FRENCH.

INTRODUCTION.

AN ART is a rational method, a collection of observations digested into convenient order for the teaching and learning of something: and the methodical collection of observations made upon the particular custom of a nation, in the institution, order, and use of the words by which they are used to express the thoughts, is what is meant by a Grammar.

SPEAKING is exhibiting our thoughts; and a LANGUAGE is nothing else than the means towards that end: that is, a language is the manner, or signs, of which a set of men have agreed to make use, in order to express their thoughts.

And because men want to make their thoughts known, not only to those with whom they live, but also to others they are very distant from, or who are to be born many ages after them, they have, for that purpose, invented two sorts of means, or signs; the one instantaneous and transient, and serving only to represent thought actually, SOUNDS; the other permanent, and designed to represent it in all times and places, CHARACTERS.

These sounds and characters, i. e. all that is spoken and written, form SPEECH, which is composed of sentences, sentences of words, and words of syllables.

SYLLABLES, in speaking, are sounds of which words are composed and formed; and, in writing, they are parts of the same words, composed of characters which represent these sounds: as ad-mi-ni-stra-ti-on, that has (in French) six parts, six sounds, six syllables. Syllables are either simple or compound. They are all compound in the word just mentioned: but in the words about, elect, and many others, the first syllable is simple. Sometimes one sound only, one syllable makes a word, called MONOSYLLABLE, as, but, man, it is not; which three last sounds make three words: otherwise a syllable has no signification of itself.

WORDS are images of thoughts. They differ from the sounds and characters, in that men have applied to these last only the general power of making words, without representing other ideas but those of sounds and characters: whereas they have, besides, applied to the words the distinct and particular powers of representing their thoughts. Just as, in painting, colours make of themselves no distinct object that exhibits to the mind other ideas but those of green, red, blue, &c. but being applied with proportion, and according to the rules of art, they make a whole which represents all the figures that one has a mind to draw.

The THINKING FACULTY, which shines so wonderfully in the invention of speech, consists in conceiving and judging. To conceive, or to apprehend, is to have the image of a thing in our mind. To judge, is to unite our conceptions or ideas together in declaring that a thing is or is not such. But, as we can conceive either things, or the manner of being of things; as, likewise, we can judge of them either simply and absolutely, or with restriction and respectively to some circumstance or other; so four things are to be considered in speech:

1st, That which is spoken of, which philosophers call the SUBJECT.

2dly, That which is declared of it, which they call the ATTRIBUTE.

3dly, The DECLARATIVE TERM, or Copula, which joins the attribute to the subject.

4thly, The CIRCUMSTANCES which may attend the subject, the attribute, and the declarative term.

As, for instance, when conceiving what learning is, and what usefulness is, I form this judgment, "Learning is useful;" learning is the subject I speak of: useful is what I declare of it (the attribute); and is—the declarative term, which connects the two other terms together.

Again. When I say, "A guilty conscience is at all times a very tormenting pain," a conscience is the subject I speak of; a pain, what I declare of it; and is—the declarative term, which connects the attribute and subject together. But, besides that, these words, guilty, tormenting, and at all times, are so many circumstances which specify the subject of which I speak, what I declare of it, and the declarative term: for I do not speak of conscience in general, but of a guilty conscience; I do not barely declare that it is a pain, but a tormenting pain; nor do I affirm that it is only a tormenting pain, but that it is at all times a very tormenting pain; the word very being only a circumstance, which specifies the word tormenting, as this last does what sort of pain I judge a guilty conscience is.

Whoever reflects ever so little, will easily be sensible that the whole of speech amounts to the expressing of those four things only, which constitute it, and make all its essence. Therefore several sorts of expressions, or words, must needs have been instituted to represent, not only all the things that can be conceived, and their manners of being, but also the judgments which can be made of them, with the modifications of which they are susceptible. It does not follow, nevertheless, that one can express no judgment, without making use of three or four sorts of words. For men have naturally a desire to express their meaning as quick as they can, and a speech the less encumbered with words being less difficult to be delivered, and even the more perfect, as it draws nearer to the simplicity of thinking; so they have instituted words, in the signification whereof is included, at the same time, the attribute and the declarative term. In others they have, besides, included the signification of the subject. And even they have instituted some, which express at once the subject which they speak of, the attribute which they declare of it, the declarative term, and the circumstances that modify one or all the three other terms.

Thus in this proposition, "Man thinks," the word thinks includes both the attribute which is declared of the subject man, and the declarative term; and is as much as to say is thinking, or is a thinking being. These words yes, no, never, always, certainly, and a great many others of the same kind, which we answer to the questions that are asked us, comprehend those very questions: so that the yes or no which I answer to this question, "Does he study?" is as much as if I answered, "He studies," or "He does not study;" the first of which the Latins expressed by the single word studet, which is equal to "He is studying."

Again. If to this question, "Is a guilty conscience at all times a very tormenting pain?" I answered yes, yes sure, or certainly, it is evident that either of these expressions is as much as if I repeated the whole proposition without interrogation, "A guilty conscience is at all times a very tormenting pain;" and includes therefore a subject which I speak of, the attribute I declare of it, the declarative term, and the modifying terms, or the circumstances which those three terms are attended by.

Neither does it follow that four sorts of words might have been sufficient for expressing all that can be thought of. For as the natural desire which men have to convey their ideas quickly, has induced them to invent terms of abbreviation, which, though ever so short, comprehend, nevertheless, whole and long propositions: so the necessity of making themselves understood clearly, and without the least ambiguity, especially in considering and speaking of the several relations which things bear to one another; and the disagreeableness of repeating the same terms too often, has made them invent many others, both for the more fully expressing all that passes in their mind, with the manner of their conceptions, and how they stand affected by them, and for adorning their language.

All the words that men have instituted for representing their thoughts, may be reduced to nine sorts. Grammarians call them in general PARTS of SPEECH, because speech, or all that is spoken or written, is composed of these nine sorts of words, to each of which they have given particular names, which shall be explained in the Second Part of this Work.

The several words made use of for expressing what one thinks about a subject, are, all together, called by philosophers, a PROPOSITION, and by grammarians a SENTENCE: and several sentences joined together, in such a manner as the one has a coherence with and dependance upon the other, for the making one entire and complete sense, are called a PERIOD by the latter, and ARGUMENT or REASONING by the former.

Hence may appear the injudicious and false definition of Grammar given by most writers. Logic is the art of thinking, conceiving, or forming ideas. Dialect is the art of speaking, exhibiting our thoughts, or expressing ourselves. Oratory, eloquence, rhetoric, (for these terms are synonymous,) is the art of persuading. But Grammar is nothing but the collection of the rules of a language; or (if you like it better) the art of reducing into rules the manner of speaking of a nation.

These things being premised concerning the essence and foundation of languages, we shall consider the sounds and characters of the French tongue, the nature of the words of which it is composed, and the use which is to be made of them in speech: three parts into which this Grammar is divided. The First shall treat of Pronunciation and Orthography, or Spelling; the Second of Etymology, or the nature of the Parts of Speech, as likewise of their power and different forms; the Third of the Construction of the same, or their grammatical order, otherwise called Syntax.

PART I.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

PRONUNCIATION is the expressing the sounds and articulation of a language; as ORTHOGRAPHY is the drawing of them, or representing them with characters.

The sounds are nothing else but the voice, that is, the air emitted out of the lungs, or the breath made sonorous; from which they are called VOWELS, as a, e, i, o, u.

The vowels, in their way through the mouth, receive modifications, or articulations, from the several motions of the lips or the tongue; and as these articulations cannot be expressed, or heard, but jointly with the sounds, they are called CONSONANTS.

For example, a is a vowel, or a simple sound; but ba and ga are articulated, or compound sounds; because the motions of the lips in ba, and of the tongue in ga, affect the vowel a with those modifications, or articulations, heard in the sounds ba and ga: and those differences of sounds which are between ba or ga and the vowel a, are what we call consonants.

The French grammarians usually reckon five vowels and nineteen consonants, constituting the alphabet, or table of the letters of the language, in this order, with their true appellations underneath :

a, b, c, a, e, f, g, h, i, k, l, m, n, o, p, aw, bey, cey, dey, ey, eff, gey, ash, e, kaw, ell, emm, enn, oa, pey, q, r, s, t, u, x, y, z, and & (an abbreviation for et.)
qu. err, ess, tey, u, ix, ee grec, zed

How erroneous this alphabet is, must needs appear from what has just been said of the sounds and articulations of which speech is formed. Parting from those principles, the French language will be found to have seventeen distinct sounds or vowels, though the present alphabet contains these five only, a, é, i, o, u; and the twelve others, namely, e, è, ou, á, eú, é, ó, an, en, in, on, un, sounds as simple as the first five, are not so much as taken notice of to the learner. There are one-and-twenty consonants in the language; but the alphabet contains only eighteen, and acquaints you only with fifteen different articulations, as the letters, c, k, x, represent no other articulations than those represented by other consonants: and there remain four others, of which the alphabet gives no manner of knowledge, namely, ch, gn, ill, and ï represented by two consonants, each of which serve to represent other articulations.

Most vowels and consonants are represented several ways. For instance, the vowel è is represented by ei in peine, by ai in vaine, by oi in foible, &c. the consonant f by ph in philosophe, &c. Some vowels and consonants cannot be represented, for want of proper simple characters, but by several letters. Such are the vowels, ou, eu, eú or eux, and the five nasal an, en, in, on, un, which are also represented several ways, and such the consonants ch, gn, ill, and ï. Now each of the letters, which make up these divers combinations, has not the sound or articulation which it has when pronounced by itself: and these letters blended together represent a sound, which has no manner of affinity with those which each of them represents singly. Thus in au, ou, eú, neither the sound of a, or of o, e, nor the sound of u, are heard, but only another simple sound very different, represented by those combinations of letters, au, ou, eú. If, therefore, the master makes his pupils name each of the letters which make up those combinations, he will make them pronounce false sounds, which, as they have no connection or affinity with the true sounds that are to be pronounced, will serve only to give them a wrong impression thereof; and by that means to puzzle, confound, and quite dishearten them.

Since, then, the present alphabet does not contain all the sounds and articulations of the language, nor all the ways of representing them, and yet it is necessary for those who learn reading to be acquainted with every one of them, a more rational and easy method must be thought of, to facilitate that knowledge. The following Tables will remedy all the aforesaid inconveniencies, and thoroughly acquaint a learner of the lowest capacity, with the pronounciation of the French.

It takes the hissing sound of s in Cadix; and that of z at the end of adnouns before nouns beginning with a vowel, or h mute, as in doux amusement, heureux homme.
- z. This consonant takes the hissing articulation of s in these proper names, Rodez, Sénez, Usez; but it is dropt in Rez, Sèez, and Vivarez (when so spelt).

A TABLE of the combination of letters which compose Syllables, or of the divers forms and various shapes which one and the same sound can receive.

OBSERVE, 1st, that though one and the same sound can receive divers forms, and be represented in writing many various ways, yet one cannot indifferently spell a word or syllable in such or such a manner. Thus an (year) cannot be spelt like en (in); nor dans (in) like dent or dents (teeth); though an and en, dans, dent, and dents, have one and the same sound; this table showing only the circumstances, or rather words, wherein a certain number of letters, coupled together, express only the sound that is at the head of that class.

2dly, That those various ways of spelling one and the same sound, seldom take place, except in the final syllables of words, and that too, saving the observations that shall be made in their proper places, about final consonants.

After exhibiting, in the preceding tables, all the sounds and articulations of the French language, we shall, in the following section, treat of each sound and articulation separately, and consider, in the minutest manner, 1st, the Vowels; 2dly, the Diphthongs; 3dly, the Nasal Vowels; 4thly, the Consonants; and 5thly, conclude with the several Marks used in writing French Abbreviations, &c.

SECTION I.

Of the sounds expressed by the six vowels, a, e, i, o, u, y, when not attended in the same syllable by another vowel, which makes them Diphthongs, nor followed by n or m, which makes them Nasal.

THIS letter receives two alterations or two sounds: the one acute, slender, and commonly short; the other grave, broad, and always long; as they are expressed in these two words, matin, and mâtin, and these English words, at, fat, rat, mad, alley, and all, awe, law. a grave and broad is usually marked over with a circumflex, thus (â): or followed by a single s, thus pas; and its derivatives passer, surpasser, &c. though there are two s's. Whenever a is named or spelt by itself, it is always by the grave and broad sound, (un â, an a).

In the syllables ail, and aïlle, a keeps its sound, as we shall see in its place; and it is always short when it is followed by il only (ail), and grave and long when followed by ille (aïlle). Therefore it takes its acute and short sound in mail, a mall, and the grave and long one in muille, a stitch; except in médaille, aïlleurs, l'aïlleurs, wherein a is acute and short.

This observation is not so strictly applicable to ail and aille when they meet in the middle of words. One may however say in general, that if the word is a Derivative, whether noun or verb, one must consider the final syllable of the Primitive, for ail and aille keep in the Derivative the same sound which they have at the end of the Primitive. Thus a is acute and short in il travaille, and ils travaillent (he works, they work), though at the end of words, because that verb is derived from travail, wherein a is acute and short; and for the same reason it is acute and short too in the middle of the words of the same verb travailler to work, nous travaillons, we work, &c. Thus again, a is grave and long in tailler to cut, tailleur a tailor, paillasse a straw-bed, &c. because it is so too in the Primitive taille cut, paille straw.

As for these persons of aller to go, qu'il aille let him go, qu'ils aillent let them go, a must be grave and long there by its nature, because these persons are irregularly formed, without being derived from any Primitive of that termination.

a followed by y don't make altogether a vowel or a syllable, because y stands for two i's, the first whereof is joined to a, and makes the improper diphthong ai, and the second is blended with the following vowel to make a liquid articulation, or sounds by itself, as in pays country, which is pronounced as if it were written pai-is: the spelling of such words with an i trema (that is, with two dots over it), as is but too commonly met with in books, is contrary to the analogy of the language.

The final aye of paye and abbaye are pronounced very differently: in paye the second i of y is blended with the following e, and sounds yeu (pai yeu); in abbaye it sounds by itself as in pays (a-bai-ie).

This vowel expresses six different sounds, at least, in French; which, for clearness sake, I'll call the first e guttural, on account of its receiving its sound so immediately through the throat; the second mute, because it is not sounded; the third acute; the fourth grave; the fifth circumflex; and the sixth intermediate, that is, open and short; as in belle, dentelle, blesses, peine, halaine, effet, &c. Whenever this letter is named by itself, 'tis always by the acute sound, (un é, an e.)

e guttural is never accented. It is found in the monosyllables je, me, ne: te, le, que, de, &c. in the two first syllables of recevoir spelt by themselves, and in a great many other words, wherein it cannot be sounded like one of the e's accented; I mean, neither acute nor grave, but has a sound peculiar to itself. That e is usually dropt in common conversation when coming after another syllable; as si je dis, if I say, pronounce as if it were spelt j'dis. But when two or three of these monosyllables meet together, one of them at least must be sounded, either the first or the last, as je ne le veux pas, I won't; pronounce je n'le veux pas. In this last sentence, as well as in repeating verses, and especially in the particle de in these words, ordre de demeurer dehors, order to stay without doors, that e expresses a sound exactly the same as that of the improper diphthong eu as expressed in the word jeu, play, these two monosyllables je and jeu being pronounced alike. And the sound e or eu is almost the same sound expressed in the English monosyllable her (which is pronounced almost like the French word heure), and the last vowel of these words, dinner, summer, maker, porter, parlour, &c. these English syllables answering most precisely to the French ones neur, meur, heur, teur, leur. The only difference is, that the English make it an obtuse, deafened, and exceedingly rapid sound, the last consonant of which is articulated very strong; whereas the French do not articulate the consonant so much, and express the sound quite full, and dwell upon it longer. But whether the accent is upon a syllable or no; whether the consonants, which enter into the composition of the syllable, are articulated or not; the sound is, and must needs be, the same.

There is such a vast variety in the contradictions of that e, and wherein it is not pronounced, as can be learnt only by hearing one read and speak who has the true French accent. But besides the dropping of e guttural in the aforesaid syllable, there are more particular cases, as in the middle and end of words, wherein it must not be sounded at all; and 'tis in that quality only it has been hitherto considered by our Grammarians, under the appellation of e mute, or not sounded.

e mute is more particularly met with in the middle and at the end of words, either alone, as in nouns and adnouns of the feminine gender and singular number, as âme soul, belle fine; or followed by s, or even nt, as in all the plural numbers and in verbs, as âmes souls, tu parles thou speakest, ils aiment they love; or, in fine, preceded by another vowel, as in vie life, armée an army. In all which cases e discharges no other part than does the final e of these English words, love, life, done, same, prince, &c.

wherein it is not sounded at all; only in the latter case it causes the preceding vowel to be drawn out somewhat longer.

e is suppressed both in pronunciation and writing.

1st. In all monosyllables before a word beginning with a vowel or h not aspirated, and it is supplied by an apostrophe thus :

l'enfant,	the child,	} instead of	{	le enfant,
l'homme,	the man,			le homme,
j'aime,	I love,			je aime,
il n'aime pas,	he don't love,			il ne aime pas,
l'amour qu'elle a,	the love she has,			le amour que elle a &c.

The apostrophe is also put after parce que, and jusque, when a vowel follows : as parce qu'il est, because he is ; jusqu' à demain, till to-morrow : and likewise after lorsque, puisque, quoique.

2dly, In the adnoun grande before the following nouns, tho' beginning with a consonant,

grand'mère,	grandmother,	grand'pitié,	great pity,
grand'chambre,	large chamber,	grand'part,	great share,
grand'salle,	large hall,	grand'messe,	high mass,
grand'chère,	great cheer,	à grand'peine,	with much diffi-
grand'faim,	great hunger,		culty, hardly,
grand'soif,	great thirst,	ce n'est pas grand' chose,	'tis no
grand'peur,	great fear or fright,		great matter.

It is better, in writing, to make no elision at the end of grande before these words, especially when this adnoun is preceded by one of these particles, une, la, plus, très, fort : nay, excepting, grand'mère, and grand'messe, when une comes before, 'tis better to pronounce grande than grand. Therefore, write and pronounce une grande chambre, la plus grande chère, très-grande peur, &c.

Those cases excepted, never suppress e in writing, nor spell un' indign' action, } for { une indigne action, an unworthy action, entr'eux, entr'elles, } { entre eux, entre elles, amongst them ;
fair' un' éloquent & merveilles' histoire, for faire une éloquente & merveilleuse histoire, to write an eloquent and marvellous history : tho' e is not sounded in all those cases, and you must pronounce as if it were written (in *French) fai ru nélokan, ét mèrvèilleu zistoire.

N.B. Whenever, to represent the true pronunciation of one or many words together, I express them by other letters than those in use, that must always be understood with respect to the French language; it being, strictly speaking, absolutely impossible to represent such words or sentences as if they should be pronounced so with respect to the English. It is sufficient to have shown, as exactly as can possibly be, in the Tables prefixed to this Treatise, all the French sounds with their combinations, and the English sounds that answer to them. To pretend to more, that is, dressing French words and sentences in English sounds and letters, would be willingly running headlong into those gross, shocking absurdities, that are seen in a monstrous book extant, most impertinently assuming the title of a French Grammar.

3dly, e is quite dropt in future and conditional tenses of verbs :
as,

Je serai,	I shall or will be,	} pronounce	Je srai,
tu porteras,	thou wilt carry,		tu portras,
il aimeroit,	he would love,		il aimroit,
nous trouverons,	we shall find,		nous trouvrons.

Except when it is followed by two consonants, the first of which is r, as in je verrai I shall see, il enverroit he would send, wherein e has the sonorous pronunciation that shall be described in the sequel

And in verbs ending in ier, as prier to pray, étudier to study, and even in yer preceded by a vowel, as payer to pay, and employer to employ, it is better to cut off the e not sounded in those tenses, and to write these words as they are pronounced. Je prierai I shall pray, vous étudiriez you would study, il emploieroit he would employ, instead of prierai, étudiriez, employeroit.—It is the same with the nouns derived from those verbs, as remercement for remerciement: from remercier to thank, &c.

4thly, e after g and followed by o, as in pigeon a pigeon, serves only to give g the articulation of j, which otherwise would take the hard articulation of g. For the same reason e is added in spelling before a and o in gerunds, and preterite tenses of verbs ending in ger, as changer to change, manger to eat, juger to judge: in all which cases e is no more sounded than in these words, pigeon, changeable. Therefore, don't write changant, il juga, nous mangons, as according to the analogy of the language, you must write commençant, and commença, from commencer to begin; but changeant, jugea, mangeons, and pronounce chanjant, juja, manjons, pijon, &c.

5thly, e is not sounded in the penultima (the last syllable but one) of nouns ending in té and derived from adnouns; as dureté hardness, honnéteté kindness, derived from dur hard, and honnête kind.

Except in such nouns in té as have e preceded by i, as impiété ungodliness, sobriété sobriety, &c. which are derived from impie, and sobre, &c. e in these words, takes both the acute sound and accent..

6thly, In the penultima of nouns in ment derived from verbs: as jugement judgment, mouvement motion, contentement contentment, derived from juger, mouvoir, contenter.

Except agrément liking, supplément supplement, and these three words clément clement, élément element, and véhément vehement. Vide p. 33.

7thly, In the penultima of adverbs in ment; as franchement frankly, sottement sillily, &c.

Except 1st, these eight aveuglément blindly, commodément conveniently, communément commonly, confusément confusedly, expressément expressly, impunément with impunity, profondément deeply, uniformément uniformly: 2dly, adverbs derived from adnouns ending in é (acute): as aisément easily, effrontément in a bold manner, &c. derived from aisé and effronté, &c.

8thly, In the penultima of the infinitive of verbs ending in eler, emer, ener, eser, eter, ever, enir: as celer to conceal, jeter to throw, semer to sow, peser to weigh, venir to come, &c.

Except in these verbs:

aliéner , to alienate,	s'enquêter , (at present very seldom used for to inquire),	interpréter , to expound,
arrêter , to stop,	entêter , to cause the head-ache, meaning smells,	mêler , to mingle,
bêler , to bleat,	s'entêter , to be obstinately resolved,	prêter , to lend,
blasphémer , to blaspheme,	exceller , to excel,	quereller , to quarrel,
gangréner , to gangrene,	fêter , to celebrate,	quêter , to go begging,
décéder , to decree,	fouetter , to whip,	regretter , to grudge,
égréner , to take out the grain,	guetter , to spy,	se rebeller , to rebel,
empiéter , to incroach upon,	hébéter , to besot,	répéter , to repeat,
étrenner , to hanel,	inquiéter , to disquiet,	réfréner , to refrain,
s'endetter , to run in debt,		révéler , to reveal,
		sceller , to seal,
		seller , to saddle,
		tempêter , to storm.

'Tis to be observed, that tho' e is not sounded in the penultima of those verbs mentioned in the last observations, yet it takes the intermediate sound of è in the penultima of such tenses of the same verbs, wherein the final er of the infinitive becomes e not sounded, or when it becomes the antepenultima; as je sème I sow, je pèserai I shall weigh, j'appellerois I would call.

9thly, In the penultima of nouns in eur, derived from the verbs of the same terminations as those of the last observation; as receleur one that receives stolen goods, semeur a sower, from semer and receler; as likewise in the penultima of nouns ending in tier, as pelletier a skinner, cabaretier one who keeps an ale-house, &c.

10thly, In the syllable re, in the beginning of words, wherein it denotes reiteration or reduplication of the action expressed by the word: as redire to say again, refaire to make again, ressortir to go out again, &c.

Except, first, when the reduplicative particle comes before words beginning with e sounded, or any vowel, or h not sounded; in which case e is sounded, and marked over with the accent acute, and the particle re loses its final e: as récrire to write again, from écrire; ressuyer to wipe again, from essuyer; réunir to reunite, from unir; réhabituer to use again to a thing, from habituer, &c.

2dly, When the word implies reiteration or reduplication, tho' the particle re cannot be said to be added to it, because, without it, it would not be a French word; such as these words and their derivatives,

réduplicative,	reduplicative,	réhabiliter,	to reinstate,
récapituler,	to resume,	réparer,	to repair,
récidiver,	to relapse,	réclamer,	to reclaim,
réciter,	to recite, to say by heart,	récolte,	the crop,
répéter,	to repeat,	récollection,	recollection,
réitérer,	to reiterate,	réconcilier,	to reconcile,
récollement,	a re-examination,	répercussion,	repercussion,
récrimination,	recrimination,	résipiscence,	amendment of life,
rédimer,	to free, to exempt,	résumer,	to resume, to sum up,
réfléchir,	to reflect,	réverbération,	and réverbère,
régénérer,	to regenerate,		reverberation.
réintégrer,	to restore,

In réconfronter and réformer, e also is sounded, tho' we say confronter and former.

11thly, In the syllable re followed by a double s, as ressembler to resemble, se ressouvenir to remember, &c.

Except réussiciter to rise again, and résurrection, wherein the first e is acute.

12thly, Sometimes, but in conversation only, e is not sounded in the pronouns demonstrative, ce, cet, cette, ceci, cela, this, or that; nor in the pronoun personal le, after a verb at the imperative, when the word is a polysyllable; as cela that, ce livre this book, cet enfant that child, cette femme that woman, cherchez-le, look for it: pronounce sla, slivre, stenfant, stefemme, cherchez-l'; and never cherchez lé or lè. But when the verb is a monosyllable, or ends with mute e, le is sounded; as dis-le, fais-le; dites-le, faites-le.

13thly, e is not sounded in the penultima and antepenultima of these words and their derivatives:

henét,	booby,	genou,	the knee,	meneuse,	a nurse's
besogne,	work,	guenille,	a rag,	deputy,
besoin,	want,	guenon,	a monkey,	menotte,	handcuff,
caqueter,	to prattle,	hallebarde,	an hal-	menoux,	hog's feet,
chaperon,	a hood,	bert,		neveu,	nephew,
chenil,	a dog-kennel,	hameçon,	a fish-	passe-temps,	pastime,
chenille,	a caterpillar,	hook,		pelisse,	a furred
chenet,	an hand-iron,	hanneton,	a cock-	cloak,
chemin,	a way,	chafer,		pelote,	pincushion,
cheminée,	a chimney,	hoqueton,	a sort of	petit,	little,
chemise,	a shirt,	serjeant,		retour,	etern,
cheville,	a peg,	levain,	leaven,	secourir,	to succour,
fenêtre,	a window,	menin,	a minion,	taffetas,	taffety.
fenouil,	fennel,

¶ It must be observed that the above words and such like should be preceded by an article or another word not ending with an e mute: in le chemin, la cheminée, ma chemise, ta besogne, sa fenêtre, &c. the middle e is mute; but not in votre chemin, grande cheminée, une chemise, bonne besogne, cette fenêtre, &c. because e not accented cannot be dropt or mute in two successive syllables, and being final in votre, grande, une, bonne, cette, it must be dropt in preference.

For the very same reason the middle e not accented cannot be mute in Arlequin Harlequin, arsenal an arsenal, arsenic arsenick, fort nent strongly, ferment firmly, fermeté firmness, proprement neatly, propreté neatness, justement justly, simplement simply, &c. because it comes after two consonants, the first of which is sounded, and the sounding of a consonant always supposes the dropping of an e mute. It seems, however, to be dropt in forgeron smith, forteresse fortress, on account of the rapidity with which it is sounded; but very few words admit of such glibness of utterance.]

Lastly, e not accented is not sounded (save the exception above stated) in any of the derived words that have it from their primitives. As, therefore, all adnouns feminine end with an e mute, and likewise the first person present tense indicative mood of most verbs, so that final e is not sounded neither in the words derived from them; as in naïvement ingenuously, from naïve ingenuous, grandement greatly, from grande great, étrangement strangely, from étrange strange, extrêmement extremely, from extrême extreme, honnêteté honesty, from honnête honest; arrangement ordering, jugement judgment, logement lodging, &c. from j'arrange, je juge, je loge, &c.

Except the adverbs mentioned above (7th parag. p. 31), aveuglement, communément, &c. In agrément an agreement, and j'agrèrai, j'agrèrois, I shall, I should like, and supplément supplement, e is acute, because they are derived from agrèer and supplèer, whose first persons are j'agrée, je supplée, and the first e only is kept in the derivatives.

This e, that has the sound of a in hate, face, fate, made, should always be marked over with an acute accent, as it is really at the end of nouns of both numbers, and of the second person plural of verbs, when it is spelt with an s; for it is at present generally spelt with z, leaving out the accent: as bonté kindness, aimé loved, bontés kindnesses, ils sont aimés they are loved, vous aimez you love.—In words wherein that é is before another vowel, as in géant a giant, réunir to reunite, &c. it denotes for certain, that the two vowels keep each of them their proper sound.

er, at the end of infinitives, is sounded like é acute; as likewise at the end of nouns in ger, cher, ier, and ied: as,

parler,	to speak,	}	Pronounce	{	parlé,
danger,	danger,				dangé,
cocher,	coachman,				coché,
barbier	a barber,				barbié,
piéd,	a foot,				pié.

Except 1st, In all monosyllables in er, as mer sea, cher dear, fer iron, &c. wherein e is grave, and r strongly articulated.

2dly, In these following words:

amer,	bitter,		cuillier,	spoon,		hiver,	winter,
belvédér,	a belveder,		enfer,	hell,		hier,	yesterday.
cancer,	a cancer,		fier,	proud,

3dly, At the end of all Latin, and foreign proper names, as Jupiter, Luther, Gunter: but not in French proper names, as Didier, Roger, &c. pronounce Lutèr, Rogé, &c

At the end of a sentence, es in the pronoun les takes both the grave sound and accent; as also in dès preposition; as renvoyez-les, send them back again, and not renvoyez-le; dés qu'il eut fait, as soon as he had done, and not dé qu'il, &c.

As e is often met with in the beginning and middle of words, but, through the carelessness of printers and authors, not marked over with that accent which should denote its pronunciation, in order to supply that defect, we make the following observations:

1st, All e's that have the sound of e acute at the end of a word, keep it also in any syllable whatever, in the derivations and in flexions of the same word. Thus e being sounded acute in the end of aisé easy, must be so too in aisément easily. Thus again e having the resonant sound of e grave in amer bitter, must have it too in the second syllables of amèrement bitterly, and amertune bitterness.

Except only in verbs in er, wherein e is never pronounced in future and conditional tenses, as we have said.

2dly, e is acute é, dé, pré, and tré, first syllables of a word : as éclat a crack, noise, été been, écrit writing, dépit spite, détourner to deter, prélude a prelude, préparer to prepare, trépas death, trésor a treasure, &c.

Except, 1st, pre in premier first, and its derivatives, and these persons of the verb prendre to take, prenons, prenez, prenois, &c. wherein pre is pronounced with the guttural sound of e, but short.

2dly, de in the following words and their compounds, wherein e is not sounded in a rapid conversation :

deman,	to-morrow,	depuis,	since,	devancer,	to outrun,
ãmeurer,	to live,	Denis,	Dionysius,	devise,	motto,
demander,	to ask,	dedans,	within,	deviner,	to guess,
demi,	half,	dessus,	upon,	devoir,	duty,
demeurant,	dwelling,	dessous,	under,	il devient,	he becomes,
demoiselle,	a miss,	devant,	before, tho' de in devenir has the guttural sound of e, and the second e is almost dropped. e in de, first syllable of dégouter, to make to loath, is acute, and in dégoutter to drop.

N. B. Words beginning with des fall under the last observation : as, désabuser to undeceive, désavouer to disavow, désespérer to despair, désigner to denote, désister to desist, désoler to vex.

3dly, e is sounded acute but short before rer in infinitives in érer : as espérer to hope, digérer to digest, modérer to moderate, &c.

4thly, e is sounded acute in the syllable re in the beginning of words, wherein it denotes neither reiteration nor reduplication of action : as récent recent, réfugier to fly for refuge, altho' it is mute in refuge.

Except the following words and their derivatives, wherein e is mute in re :

rebut,	cast out,	recommander,	to recommend,
rebelle,	rebellious,	reconnoissance,	gratitude,
rebellion,	rebellion,	recourir,	to have recourse,
rebours,	the wrong side of a thing,	recevoir,	to receive (but not récipient , nor réception).
rebrousser,	to go back,	reculer,	to draw back,
rebufade,	rebuff,	redevable,	indebted to,
rebuter,	to dishearten,	redoute,	a redoubt,
recéler,	to receive stolen goods,	redoutable,	dreadful,
recoin,	a by-place,	refrain,	burden of a song,
recueil,	a collection,	refrogner,	to knit one's brows
recueillir,	to collect,	refus,	denial

regarder,	to look,	renom,	renown, fame,
regimber,	to kick,	repaire,	a lurking hole,
regret,	regret,	repartir,	to set out again,
relais,	post-stages,	repas,	a meal,
relent,	musty,	se repentir,	to repent,
reléguer,	to banish,	repic,	repique,
relégation,	banishing,	réplique,	reply (but not répliquer , to
relief,	relievo,	reply),
relier,	to bind,	repos,	rest,
relique,	relick,	reprandre,	to correct,
reliquat,	remnants,	représailles,	reprisals,
religion,	religion (but e is acute in	reproche,	reproach,
irreligion,	irreligion),	retrancher,	to cut off,
reluire,	to glitter,	requête,	a petition,
remarquer,	to remark,	requérir,	to request, (but not in ré-
remède,	remedy,	quisition,	request),
remercier,	to thank,	retenir,	to keep (but not in réten-
remettre,	to remit (but not rémission ,	tion,	retention), remitting),		retenue,	moderation,
remuer,	to stir,	retentir,	to resound,
renard,	a fox,	se retirer,	to retire,
renégat,	a renegado,	revanche,	revenge,
renier,	to disown,	revêche,	froward,
renifler,	to snuff up one's snout,	revers,	the reverse.
renoncer,	to renounce,

Some words have different significations, according as the e of their first syllable re is pronounced and marked over with the accent acute, or not pronounced at all; as, répondre, to answer, repondre, to lay eggs again, repartir, to divide, repartir, to reply, or to go back again.

Observe besides, that ez denotes only the sound of é acute; as assez enough, nez nose: as doth likewise the conjunction et or & and.

This e, the sound of which is sonorous, or resonant, is found,

1°. In the prepositions dès from, près near, the adverb très most, and in all nouns ending in ès, as abcès abscess, profès a professed monk.

2°. In all these monosyllables des, les, mes, tes, ses; as likewise the syllables of words wherein it is followed by r pronounced, as in mer the sea, fer iron, enfer hell, amer bitter, ouvert open.

But it has the sound of the following é in the last syllable of the plural number of the words wherein it is indifferently resonant in the singular; as sing. effet effect, plur. effets effects; projet project, projets projects.

e circumflex is always marked over with the accent which characterises it; and it is exceedingly broad and long, especially when it makes the penultima of a word, the last syllable whereof is e mute, as may be observed in bête beast, ébété stupid; grêle hail, grêler to hail; bêche a spade, bêcher to dig; pêche a peach, pêcher a peach-tree; tête head, entêté strong-headed; même even, champêtre rural, &c. And both the grave è and circumflex é express the same sound as e in there and where; or in these other English words, fare, tare, which exactly correspond, as to sound, to these French ones, faire, taire.

The intermediate sound of è.

It is found 1°. in monosyllables, and all syllables of words where it is followed by any other consonant than r pronounced. Thus e has the intermediate sound in bec beak, sel salt, effet effect, projet project. I said in the last paragraph but one, that the final syllable of these words is very broad and long in their plural: I shall observe further here, that et is more open in il met he puts, than in mettre to put, but not so broad as je mets I put, tu mets thou puttest, which is the sound of the conjunction mais but.

2°. Before two consonants, or x in the beginning and middle of words, as infecter to poison, ils prennent they take, ancienne ancient, examen examination, and examiner to examine, tho' in these two last e takes a little of the acute sound.

Except when n or m is one of the two consonants with which it is followed: for they then denote either the nasal sound, as in entrer to enter, emplir to fill; or the third person plural of verbs, where the final ent is mute.

This intermediate sound of e is expressed in the English words bell, sed, less, progress, effect, protect, amen, examen, &c.

The e of the penultima of the words, the last syllable whereof is e mute, is either most sonorous, as in grêle hail, problème a problem, tempête a tempest; or but a little sonorous, as in chandelle a candle, mèche match, trompette a trumpet.

Except in these five words, collège college, liège cork, piège snare, privilege privilege, and siège seat, wherein the e of the penultima is acute and long.

All the words just mentioned prove how necessary the accents are to our e's, in order to show their pronunciation; and that the perpendicular accent proposed of late years by some Grammarians would have been as necessary as the acute, the grave, and the circumflex. But as it has not been adopted by the French Academy, and it is not to be found in any book, we have omitted it throughout in this present edition. See p. 89.

From these observations it follows, that the improper diphthong ai, which is naturally sounded like é acute, receives the same alterations of sounds as e; and is more or less resonant in a word, according to the consonants that follow it: as faire to do, maître master, naître from naître to be born.

This vowel has almost the same sound in French as in the English words, bit, fin, pin, filial, &c.

i followed by n or m in monosyllables, or in the beginning of words of two syllables, gives a sound like to that of an in thank, en in length, or ain in saint; as vin wine, Indes Indies, pronounce vain, ainde; and likewise in imbu imbued, impur impure, ingrat, ungrateful, infini infinite, imprudent imprudent.

i in the particle conditional si is contracted, both in writing and speech, before and with the pronouns il and ils only; and never before any other vowel, not even before i in any other word: as s'il vient if he comes, instead of si il, &c. s'ils disent if they say: but write and pronounce si elle vient if she comes, si illustre so illustrious, si après cela if after that; and not s'elle vient, &c.

i is not sounded in encoignure corner, pronounce encognure.

i is not sounded, and makes no diphthong with the preceding vowel, when it is followed by l or ll; it then serves only to give l or ll a particular articulation, called the liquid articulation of l: as in soleil the sun, travail work, veiller to sit up, travailler to work. That liquid articulation of l is the same that is heard in English in the articulation of the double ll of the words million, billiards: all the difference is, that that i which causes the liquid articulation is in French before l, whereas it is after it in English.

This vowel receives two sounds as well as a; the one acute, stenger, and commonly short; and the other grave, broad, and always long, as they are expressed in these words, cotte, or cotillon, a petticoat, and côte a coast. o acute and short has the same sound as in the English words bog, bottle, not, pot, rob, &c. and ô grave and long, as in globe, robe, old, &c. or oa in coast, roast, &c. ô long is usually marked over with a circumflex thus (ô), or followed by a single s, thus chose: gros, and its derivative grosse, grossir, &c. tho' there be two s's. Whenever o is named or spelt by itself, it is always by the long and broad sound of ô (un ô, an o.)

1. o is almost dropt in the second syllable of accommoder to fit up, and raccommoder to mend; and in the first of commander to command; is pronounced, as it were, cmandé, acmodé; but in conversation only.

2. In coopérer to cooperate, coobligé, &c. each o makes a syllable.

3. The pronounciation of notre and votre is worth observing. These words are pronounced with the broad and long sound of ô in the pronouns substantive, le vôtre, la vôtre, yours; le nôtre, le nôtre, ours; and o is marked over with a circumflex. When they are only pronouns adjective, or rather possessive articles, they are sounded with the short and slender sound of o, without being marked over with a circumflex: and if the substantive begins with a consonant, r is not pronounced in votre and notre; as votre livre your book, notre maison our house; pronounce rotte livre, notte maison: but when the noun begins with a vowel, pronounce as it is spelt, votre ami your friend, notre affaire our affair: as also in Notre Dame Our Lady, and in the Lord's prayer, Notre Père, qui es, &c. Our Father, which art, &c.

This vowel, which is expressed in bu, tu, lu, statut, volume, is the very same sound that the English express in prostitute, imposthume, volume; only the English u of these words is shorter and more obtuse.

ui makes a proper diphthong in buisson a bush.

u in foreign or Latin words that are become French, followed by m, takes the nasal sound of on; as un factum a plea, pronounce facton.

un has likewise the sound of a nasal o in junte a junto, but not in défunt dead, wherein it is pronounced as in the monosyllable un one.

y, generally speaking, has no other sound but that of the French i, and is used in French in the following circumstances only :

1st, As adverb of place or pronoun, and then y makes a word by itself; as il ya, there is; y pensez-vous? do you think of it?

2dly, In the beginning of these four words only, yacht, pron. Iaque yacht, yeux eyes, and yeuse a holm-oak; ypreau Dutch elm. Some add indeed yvre got drunk, yvoire ivory, and yvraye tare: but these words are now generally spelt with i by the best writers, ivre, ivoire, ivraie.

3dly, In the middle of some words wherein y stands for two i's, the former whereof makes with the foregoing vowel an improper diphthong, and the latter with the following, or is sounded by itself, as in royaume kingdom, pays country, and its derivatives, paysage a landscape, and paysant a peasant, wherein ay is sounded as ai, with another i before s; Abbaye abbey, essayer to try, voyons let us see, Royal, ayant, &c. which words are pronounced as if they were written pai-is, pai-izant, abai-ie, essai-ier, voi-ions, Roi-ial, ai-iant, &c.

The following words, wherein a keeps its natural sound, making a vowel by itself, and i takes a liquid articulation as in you, are written now with an ï trema, that is marked over with two dots :

aïeul , grandfather,	faïence , Delft-water,	Baïonne ,	} (proper names.)
baïonnette , a bayonet,	glaïeul , corn-flag,	Blaïe ,
camäieu , a camaieu,	païen , a pagan,	Caïenne ,
caïeu , a sucker,	tavaïols , a mantle,	Maïenne ,
coïon , a trifling fellow	Aïen ,	Maïence ,
coïonner , to trifle,	Baïard ,	Caïette ,
coïonnerie , trifling,	Baïeux ,	La Faïette ,

The two dots over ï show that the vowel makes a syllable by itself, as haïr to hate, naïf no way counterfe't, héroïque heroical, Laïs, &c. whereas otherwise it makes, with the foregoing vowel, an improper diphthong, as in je hais I hate.

Most writers preserve still y in the words derived from Greek, to show the etymology; as in these words, étymologie, analyse, mystère, syllabe, &c.

SECTION II.

Of Diphthongs.

THE meeting of many vowels in one and the same syllable, is called Diphthong. When many vowels together keep each of them in the syllable their particular and proper sound, they are called Proper or Syllabic Diphthongs; as lui he, lier to tie. When they all together make but one single sound, they are called Improper or Orthographical Diphthongs; as air air, eau water.

Proper Diphthongs.

All that can be said of these Proper Diphthongs amounts to this: that though these vowels, united together, make really two distinct syllables, each of which keeps its natural and peculiar sound, yet they are sounded and pronounced as quickly, and in as small a compass of time, as a single ordinary syllable. Therefore never pronounce in two syllables Di-eu God, di-able devil, li-er to tie, vi-olon a fiddle, jou-er to play, rou-et a spinning wheel, fu-ir to avoid, ro-i king, ou-i yes, Rou-en: but sound the two vowels in one syllable quickly: Dieu, diable, jouer, rouet, &c. N. B. ouen in St. Ouen is not pronounced as in Rouen (a city in Normandy), but like oin in foin hay.

There is an exception to this, viz. when those diphthongs come after two consonants, the last of which is r or l; as nous prions we desire, vous voudriez you would, il plioit he bent, and the word hier yesterday, which are pronounced like two syllables. Nevertheless the adverb hier is sounded in one syllable only, when it comes with the other adverb avant (avant-hier, the day before yesterday).

In coadjuteur a coadjutor, coactif coercive, coaguler to coagulate, cloaque a common sewer, croasser to croak, Croatie Croatia, Croate, retroactif retroactive, and in Goa, Moab, Soares, and other foreign words, which are the only words wherein oa is found, each vowel makes a particular syllable; but in aio and Aiol, a makes a syllable by itself, and io a proper diphthong.

Improper Diphthongs.

ae, ai, ay, ao, au; ea, eai, eau, ei, eo, eu; æ, œu, oi, ou; ui, uei.

Observe first, that when these vowels together do not make the same syllable, but two distinct ones, two dots are put over that which begins the last syllable; as in hair, Pirithoüs; or an accent over the first vowel when it is an e: as in géant a giant, déisme deism, météore a meteor, Géorgie Georgia, Léonidas, &c.

œdy, That, excepting eu and ou, the natural and peculiar sound of the other improper diphthongs is quite the same as, and not at all different from, that of some of the five vowels treated of before.

ae is found only in Caen, the name of a city, wherein a nasal only is sounded (Can).

In dérien, aérér, Danaé, Ticho-Braé, and such other words, the accent that is over é shows its pronunciation, and that it makes a vowel by itself.

æ or Æ is now out of use in French words derived from the Greek and Latin, written formerly with æ, being at present written with an e sounded like é acute; as Egypte for Ægypte, Egypt, Equinoxe for Æquinoxe ai and ay.

ai or ay denotes the sound of e, sounded sometimes acute, sometimes grave, and sometimes intermediate. Nay, it is not sounded at all in the gerund, present, and imperfect tenses of the verb faire to do; ai being now converted into e mute. Faisant doing, je faisais I did, nous faisons we do; pronounce fezant, fezois, fezons.

1st, ai or ay, being the two last letters of a word, is sounded like é acute; as je parlai I spoke, je dirai I say; pronounce parlé, diré.

Except in these four words, vrai true, essai an essay, délai delay, Mai, May, wherein ai has the intermediate sound, being pronounced as in English in the word May. But observe that the adnoun vrai true, takes the grave and broad sound of è long, when it comes before its noun, as in le vrai sens d'une loi, the true sense of a law; pronounce vrès, or vrais: whereas, when it is not followed by a noun, or when it terminates a sentence, it only has the short sound of è, as in c'est vrai, it is true; il est vrai que, it is true that, &c.

2dly, ai being followed by s, ts, x, (ais, aits, aix), or e not sounded (aie) at the end of a word, takes the most resonant sound of è grave; as jamais never, des faits facts, paix peace, plaie a wound, vraie true, (fem).

3dly, ai in the middle of a word, and followed by a consonant, is more or less resonant according to the consonant that follows. (See the observation at the end of the paragraph of è grave.)—ai has the most resonant sound of è in haine hatred, traître a traitor; and in the words wherein ai comes before r, as in faire, braire to bray, &c. pronounce fër, &c.

4thly, in ai followed by a double or single l, a keeps entirely its proper sound, i serving only to give l or ll a liquid articulation; as in bail a lease, vaillant courageous.

ai is likewise sounded as a single a in St. Aignan (a proper name).

In the interjection ai (for pain), i takes the liquid articulation of y, so that ai is pronounced like aï in aïeul, or Blaie.

ait has the same pronunciation in il fait, plaît, pait, naît, and braît (third persons of faire to do, plaire to please, paître to graze, naître to be born, and braire to bray): but fait (a participle or noun) has the pronunciation of the intermediate è: as Il fait beau, It is fine weather; J'ai fait, I have done; C'est fait, It is over; C'est un fait, It is fact. On the contrary, ais in the two first persons of savoir to know, and ait in the third, have only the pronunciation of é acute. Je sais, tu sais, il sait, pronounce je sé, tu sé, il sé.

ao is found in the following words: 1st, In aorte (an artery), aouara (a fruit), Aonie, Aonides, Aorne, Baao, Laocoon, Lao-damie, Laodicée, Laomédon, Laonice (proper names), and extraordinaire extraordinary, wherein a and o make each a syllable, and keep their proper sound.

2dly, In paon a peacock, faon a fawn, Laon (the name of a city), which are pronounced with the nasal sound of a, as if they were spelt pan, fan, Lan.

3dly, In aorasia, aoriste, aoste, Saone, wherein a is quite lost, these words being pronounced orasia, oriste, oste, Sône.

4thly, In taon ox-fly, which is sounded with the nasal sound of o, like the pronoun ton.

5thly, In Août August (a month), which is pronounced ou, or in English oo; but a is sounded in its derivative aoûter; not in the other derivative aouteron, wherein a is silent: pronounce then Oût, aoûter, outeron. Raoul (a proper name) is pronounced Ra-oul.

au and eau.

au and eau at the end of words are sounded a little more open than the short and slender sound of o, as chapeau a hat, marteau a hammer, &c. but not quite so broad as the word eau water, and the particle au to the, which have the long and broad sound of ô, or au followed by d, t, x, in the last syllable; as chaud hot, défaut, defect, chapeaux hats.

au, in the middle of dissyllables, always has the broad and long sound of o, as in beauté beauty, baudrier a belt, faucher to mow: but in the beginning of words it is pronounced sometimes like ô long, and sometimes like o short.

au has the slender and short sound of o in the beginning of the following words:

auberge,	an eating-house.	austère,	austerè.
audace,	audaciousness.	austral,	austral audience,	audience.	authentique,	authenticall auditoire,	congregation.	automate,	automaton
auditeur,	auditor.	automne (m is silent),	autumn.
augmenter,	to augment.	autorité,	authority.
augure,	omen.	autoriser,	to authorise.
augurer,	to augurate.	auxiliaire,	auxiliary.
Aurore,	Aurora.	mauvais,	bad.

But au has the broad sound of ô in the beginning of the following words:

aubade,	waits.	autruche,	ostrich. aubaine,	escheat.	auteur,	author
aube,	dawn of the day.	autour,	about.
aucune,	none.	autre, other , with its derivatives.
auguste,	august.	auvent,	a pent-house. aujourd'hui,	to-day.	aumône,	alms. aulique,	aulick.	auprès,	near, by.
aumuce,	an amice.	auspice,	auspice.
aune,	an ell.	aussi,	also.
auparavant,	before.	autant,	as much.
Autriche,	Austria.	autel,	altar.

Beau has the broad sound of ô: as Cela est beau, That's fine; Voilà un beau coup, That's a fine stroke: pronounce sla é bó, voilà un bó cou.

fléau a scourge, is pronounced like a proper diphthong, flé-au; as likewise préau a little meadow, and éaux in Despréaux (a proper name), wherein s is mute; and in féaux, plural of féal trusty, (used only in royal patents, proclamations, &c.)

ea is found only in the words Jean and Jeanne, John, Jane; e is left out in the diminutives Janot, Janette, Janneton. Jean is pronounced with the nasal sound of a, as Jan; Jeanne with the long and broad sound of â, as Jâne; and Janot, Janette, and Janneton, with the short and slender one.

ea is also found in some verbs after g, as in mangea, wherein (as we have seen before) e loses its sound, and serves only to make g take the articulation of j, as if it were spelt manja.

eai is found only in the word geai a jack-daw, and in the same verbs just mentioned after g, wherein eai, or rather ai, takes the sound of e intermediate (un jè); e serving to the same purpose as in the words of the last paragraph; eai takes the sound of é acute in je mangeai I did eat: pronounce manjé.

ei, or ey, denotes the same sound as in English e before a consonant, as in the word pen, which answers exactly to the sound of this French word peine pains.—Except in Reine a queen, seize sixteen, and seizième sixteenth, wherein ei has the most resonant sound of è long.

In ei followed by l or ll, e keeps its sound (the resonant sound of the intermediate è), and i serves only to give l or ll the liquid articulation; as in soleil sun, veiller to sit up. (See the paragraph of i.)—eil in orgueil pride, recueil a collection, and cueillir to gather, is not pronounced as in soleil, but as eu in deuil mourning: but it keeps its proper sound in its derivatives orgueilleux proud, &c.

eo is found in the verb asseoir to sit down, in the syllable geon or geons of some verbs, and in the word geolier a jailor, and George; in which cases e quite loses its sound, and the preceding g is sounded like j. Pronounce asseoir, Jorge, &c. (See the 4th paragraph of e not sounded.)

Observe, that when there are two dots over o, or an accent acute over e as in géographie and météore, both vowels keep their proper sounds.

eu receives two sounds; the first of which is the guttural sound of e, and is found in feu fire, il peut he can, &c. which is (I say) the very same sound as e in the English monosyllable her. (See page 28.)—x joined to eu (eux) gives it another peculiar sound not to be found in English, but not hard to express.—eu in jeune young, filleul and filleule a god-child, is sounded as in feu; but in jeûne and jeûner fasting, it is sounded as eux, tho' not in déjeûner to breakfast. eu in Hebreu is pronounced like eux.

The second sound of eu is that of the vowel u, and is found only in these two or three words, eunuque an eunuch, Eustache (a proper name), gageure a wager, and eu had, and the other tenses of avoir to have. Pronounce unuc, ustache, gajure, u, vous utes.—We now write vu seen, vue sight, sûr sure, mûr ripe, reliûre binding, tu pusses thou could'st, and all participles without e, instead of the old way of writing veu, veue, seur, relieure, tu peusses, &c. eut in il veut he is desirous, is not sounded as in il peut he can, but like eux in je veux, but it is in that word only: and eus or eux in je peux I can, is not pronounced as in je veux. but like eut in il peut he can.

æ is found in cœur heart, and chœur choir or chorus, mœurs manners, œuf egg, œuvres works, sœur sister, and vœu a vow, in which words o quite loses its sound: and in œil eye, its derivatives œillade an ogle, and œillère (les dents œillères, the eye-teeth); as also in aillet a pink, æ takes the first sound of eu. Some authors think it better to write all these words without o, but the contrary custom is prevailing. Therefore pronounce keur, meur, euil, euillè, &c.

æ denotes only the sound of é acute in æconomie, æcuménique, and Ædipe, which even now are spelt as pronounced with é, économie *œ*conomy.

o and e in poëte a poet, moëlle marrow, and other such like words, wherein e is marked over with two dots, make a proper diphthong, wherein e takes the intermediate sound of è; as likewise in coercible, coercitif, and coertion. In coégal coequal, coéternel coeternal, &c. the acute accent over the é shows its pronunciation; and is a proof at the same time that the e of the preceding words should be marked over with the straight accent.

oi and oy are sometimes improper diphthongs that take only the resonant sound of e grave ; but more commonly they are proper diphthongs expressing the two distinct sounds of o and è or é.

oi is an improper diphthong ; 1st, in the imperfect and conditional tenses of verbs : as j'aimois I loved, tu dirois thou would'st say, il parleroit he would speak, &c. pronounce aimais, diruis, parleret.

2dly, In verbs which have more than two syllables in the infinitive, as paraître to appear, connoître to know, and their derivatives ; pronounce parêtre, connêtre.

3dly, In these words foible weak, foiblesse, weakness, foiblement weakly, affoiblir to weaken, roide stiff, roideur stiffness, roidir to stiffen, harnois harness, and monnoie coin, pronounce fèble, fèblesse, rède, harné, monné : but pronounce oy like a proper diphthong, in monnoyé coined, thus : monnoi-ié.

These persons of être, sois, soit, soyons, soyez, soient, and even the verb croire throughout, je crois, il croit, nous croirions, &c. froid cold, froideur coldness, froidement coldly, adroit skilful, adroitement skilfully ; the adnoun droit right ; the adverb tout-droit straight along, endroit place, étroit narrow, nettoyer to clean, croître to grow, throughout, with its derivatives, and all monosyllables, are pronounced with the sound of the proper diphthong o-è. Some people, I know, thinking themselves fine speakers, adopt the affected utterance of the petites maîtresses, and pronounce in an effeminate way craire, crâître, fraid, sayons, que je sais, qu'ils sayent ; which is very bad, as in repeating verses, in the pulpit, and at the bar, those words are pronounced with the double sound of o-è. In the conjunction of soit either, or let it be so, soit que whether, in the phrase ainsi-soit-il so be it, tant soit peu ever so little, and in the beginning of the Lord's prayer, soit is pronounced with the two sounds of the proper diphthong, even by those who pronounce oi like ai in the afore-said words.

But oi and oy are always proper diphthongs sounded like o-e in the noun droit right, in effroi fright, effroyable frightful, un noyer a walnut-tree, and se noyer to drown oneself ; and before g and n, as témoigner to show, joindre to join. Therefore pronounce, like a proper diphthong with the two sounds, the following monosyllables and other words ·

moi,	I,	foire,	a fair,	poison,	poison,
toi,	thou,	fois,	time,	une oie,	a goose,
soi,	oneself,	voir,	to see,	miroir,	looking-glass,
quoi,	what,	soin,	care,	mouchoir,	handkerchief,
roi,	king,	soir,	evening,	mademoiselle,	miss,
loi,	law,	joie,	joy,	écritoire,	a standish,
foi,	faith,	pois,	peas,	devoir,	duty,
bois,	wood,	poids,	weight,	recevoir,	to receive
choix,	choice,	poix,	pitch,	Je reçois,	I receive,
voix,	voice,	moitié,	half,	concevoir,	to conceive,
croix,	cross,	poitrine,	breast,	appercevoir,	to perceive,
foie,	liver,	poisson,	fish,	&c.

oi takes only the sound of o short in poignet wrist, poignée hand-ful, poignard a dagger, and poignarder to stab, coignée a hatchet, and coigner to knock (when these two last are spelt with i).

ois takes the most resonant sound of è grave in the following names of nations and countries :

Anglois,	English.	Milanois,	Milanese.	Bourbonnois,	} (Inhabitants of provinces.)
François,	French.	Lionnois,	of Lyons.	Charolois,
Ecossois,	Scotch.	Béarnois,	of Bearn.	Orléannois,
Irlandois,	Irish.	Nantois,	of Nantes,	Nivernois,
Hollandois,	Dutch.	Rouennois,	of Rouen.	Soissonnois,
Polonois,	Pole.	Caennois,	of Caen.	Ferrarois,
				Piémontois,

But it is sounded like the proper diphthong oè in Bavarois, of Bavaria, Chinois, Chinese, Génevois, of Geneva, Danois, Dane, Danish, Suédois, Swede, Swe-Gaulois, a Gaul, Hongrois, Hungarian, dish, Gallois, Welsh,
Liégeois, of Liege, Hessois, Hessian, Carthaginois, a Car-
Siamois, of Siam, Génois, of Genoa, thaginian, Crétois, Dunois, Rémois, Gantois,
Japonois, Navarrois, Gatinois, Condomois,
Iroquois, Arragonois, Angoumois, Vermandois, Maroquois, Narbonnois, Champenois, Rhételois, Hibernois, le Modénois, le Blésois, Valois,
Vaudois, le Barrois, l'Auxerrois, Bazadois,
Malthois, Crémonois Agénois, Bruxellois, Comtois, Albigeois, Artois,
Franc-Comtois, Rochelois, Valentinois,

Sénonois and Châlonois, if ever used, as likewise all names of cities and towns in France ending in oi, oie, or ois, are pronounced like the proper diphthong o-è: as Blois, Croie, Foix, Mirepoix, Roie, Rosoi, Rocroi, &c. But we say, un Maloin, and not Malois (of St. Malo), un Lorrain, (of Lorraine), un Prussien, a Prussian, un Russe a Russian, and un Moscovite a Muscovite, un Suisse a Swiss, un Croate a Croatian, &c.

Observe that ois in the proper name François, Françoise, Francis, is sounded o-è, like a proper diphthong, and not with one sound only as the noun or adnoun of the nation, un François a Frenchman, une Françoise a French woman.

oît takes the most resonant sound of broad and long è in il paroît it appears, and il connoît he knows, which are pronounced like the first persons parois, connois: every where else oit has the sound of e intermediate.

ou is sounded as u in pull: the French word poule a hen, being pronounced exactly like the English word pull. Nay the English have the same improper diphthong in could, would, should, you.

ui.

ui (improper diphthong) is found only in the words vide and vider to empty, wherein u is quite lost. These words are now written and pronounced vide, vider.

uei is found only before liquid l, and then it takes the first sound of eu; as in recueil a collection, cueillir to pick. N. B. These words are, and very properly, written by some cœuillir, recœuil; orgœuil, orgœuilleux, &c.

cui is found in deuil mourning, feuillet a leaf, &c. wherein, as in the above uei, i only serves to make l liquid.

SECTION III.

Of Nasal Vowels.

BESIDES the vowels that have been considered in the first section, the French have five others derived from them; each of the vowels having its nasal one that answers it, and makes really a quite different vowel. (See the forms of those nasal vowels in the Tables.)

That difference of sounds which the English are at a loss now to express (tho' they have them in their language except nasal u or un), consists only in being formed through the nose, whence they are called nasal; that is, in causing a part of the air, in expressing them, driven by the lungs to pass through the nose, instead of causing the whole to pass through the mouth; but observe that your mouth must still be open, and your teeth not close.

The Nasal Vowels with their corresponding Sounds.

Nasal Vowels. English words where the same sounds are expressed.

an ,	}	want .
en (after i) or		length, strength,
in and ain ,	}	thank, saint,
in and im ,		loving, doing, reading, &c.
on ,		won't.
un ,		* * *

a, e, i, o, u, followed by n or m, take the nasal sound; or in other terms, n or m usually gives the nasal sound to the vowels which come before them; as an year, ambre amber, rien nothing, instruire to instruct, bon good, un one. Except, 1st, In some proper names, as in Amsterdam, Cham, Abraham, though not in Adam.

2dly, When n and m are between two vowels; as in animal, émeraude an emerald, wherein each of these three letters a, n, i, and é, m, e, keeps its proper sound and articulation: whereas in enfant a child, emploi an employment, rien nothing, en, an, em, and ien, are nasal.

3dly, When n or m are followed by another n or m; for then the foregoing vowels a, e, i, o, are not sounded nasal, but keep their peculiar proper sounds; as année a year, homme a man, bonne good, ennemi an enemy: pronounce a-née, o-me, bo-ne, en-mi: except that in ennui weariness, emmener to carry away, and in the beginning of like words that have more than two syllables, eu and em are sounded like the nasal an. Thus pronounce annui, am-mener; but condamner to condemn, enflammer to inflame, femme a woman, innocent innocent, innocence innocence, solemnel solemn, solemnité, indemniser to indemnify, with indemnité, hennir to neigh, hennissement neighing, are pronounced condâné, enflamé, fame, innocent, solanel, indamniser, indamnité, hanir, hannisement.

In Grammaire a Grammar, and Grammairien a Grammarian, the first a is nasal; but it is not nasal (and therefore the double m is articulated) in Grammatical and Grammaticalement, Grammatical, &c. In lemme a lemma and dilemme a dilemma, the first r is pronounced with the most resonant sound of è grave (dilème)

In some few words the two mm's or nn's are articulated, as in inflammation inflammation, and annotation annotation.

Observe here, that the doubling of m in all adverbs derived from adnouns in ent, causes the foregoing e to be sounded as a short, as in innocemment innocently, from innocent: ardemment eagerly, from ardent eager; prudemment prudently, from prudent prudent, &c. pronounce arda-ment, pruda-ment, &c.

en and em before any other consonant but n, take the nasal sound of an: as enfant a child, emploi business: pronounce an fan, amplai; but to this rule there are three exceptions.

1st, In the syllable ien not ending with t in its original or root: as rien nothing, tu viens thou comest, il tient he holds. I say not ending with t in its original or root: for viens, tient, and their compounds il convient, il soutient, &c. being derived from their first persons je viens I come, je soutiens I maintain, the final t serves only to characterise the third person of the singular that keeps the same sound as the first, which I call here its original or root. Whereas ent is sounded ant in Orient East, patient patient, &c. because t ends the last syllable of these words which are not derived from any other.

Observe all along what has been said several times before, that ent, in the plural of verbs, far from taking any nasal sound, is quite dropt like e not sounded; as ils disent they say, pronounce il dize: and you may know that a word, the last syllable whereof ends in ent, is the third person plural of a verb, and therefore that ent is not sounded, when the e of the penultima, or the syllable coming before (when 'tis e) has or should have either the grave accent or the intermediate one, as in ils diffèrent they differ, ils précèdent they go before: whereas in the adnouns différent different, and précédent foregoing, the accent acute of the penultima shows that the last syllable is sounded with the nasal sound of an. Again, the third persons plural of verbs have always the pronouns ils, elles, or a noun plural before them, which the other words ending with ent have not.

2dly, en is pronounced ein, or ain, in Benjamin, Agen, benjoin, placenta, agenda, and commensurable, as likewise when it is preceded by é (at the end of words in éen), as in Europé-en, Galilé-en, &c.

3dly, en and em keep the peculiar sound and articulation of e, and n and m in foreign words, and such as have passed entire from the Latin and Greek languages into French, both in the middle and end of words; as abdomen, amen, examen examination, hem, item, Hymen, Jérusalem, Matusalem, Empédocle, Agamemnon, &c.

but in Encyclopédie, enclitique, and nomenclature, &c. en keeps the nasal sound of a. Mentor is pronounced Maintor.

Observe, moreover, that the proper sound of e nasal (en) is not (as one might happen to mistake it) the same as that of a nasal (an), but that which is in rien; e having two nasal sounds, which must be carefully distinguished from one another, according to the aforesaid observations.—The true sound of e nasal is never found in the beginning of words, but only in the middle and end, and after i; as bien well, il vient he comes, je viendrai I'll come: whereas in enfant, and entendre, en takes the sound of a nasal. The true sound of e nasal is in the words of the second observation just mentioned, Benjamin, agen, benjoin, &c.

The nasal in and im, which (as has been said in the paragraph of i) express a sound like that in the English termination ing, take also the sound of ain and en in rien; but in and im, beginning a word, are pronounced with their proper nasal sounds in and im, which one must take care not to mistake for the other nasal sound of ain or ein. Thus pronounce imbu imbued, inhumain inhuman, with the proper sound of i nasal, and not as if it was spelt aimbu: but pronounce Indes, as if it was spelt aind. The true and proper sound of nasal in and im are found only in the beginning of words, never in the middle nor end. Inde and Indien are the only words excepted. (See further what has been said concerning the letter i.)

In final im and in, m and n are articulated in intérim, and all foreign names, as Ibrahim, Selen, Aïn, the desert of Sin, &c.

There is hardly any thing to observe about the nasal un but its sound, the only nasal French sound that is not in English: it is in the French words parfum perfume, chacun every one.

But um and un are pronounced like the nasal on in factum, as also in some proper names, as Humbert, Dunkerke; and like omme in these two Latin words frenchified, opium and Te Deum.

But concerning the spelling of those nasal vowels observe, that as to the choice between the several combinations serving to the same sound, m is always used before b, p, and n before the other consonants; as ambassade an embassy, emploi an employment, symbolique symbolical, tomber to fall, humble humble; antimoine antimony, endormi sleepy, intérieur inward, songe dream, &c. but in immolé sacrificed, immense immense, im is not nasal, and the two m's are sounded.

Again, ant is consecrated to the gerunds, and ent to the nouns and adverbs.

SECTION IV.

Of Consonants.

B always keeps the same articulation as in English, except that before s and t it sounds pretty near p; as observer to observe, obtenir to obtain. Pronounce opserver, optenir.

b is found at the end of these three words only, plomb lead, romb de vent (a sea term), and radoub the refitting of a ship. It is not sounded in plomb; but it is in romb and radoub, as also in foreign names; as Achab, Job, Caleb, &c.

b is hardly doubled but in these two words, besides foreign names; abbé an abbot, and Sabbat, wherein bb is pronounced only like b; but the two b's are strongly articulated in abbatial, Sabbatique, Barabbas, and other foreign names.

c before a, o, u, and the improper diphthong ai, and the consonants l, r, t, denotes the articulation marked in the table, which is properly that of k: but before e and i, it takes the hissing articulation of s; camard a flat-nosed man, cochon a hog, cure a cure, caisse a chest; céder to yield, civil civil; clou nail, &c. pronounce kamar, koshon, kaïsse, kure; sédé, sivil; klou, &c. It takes also the hissing sound of s before a, o, u, when there is a cedilla under it thus (ç); as in força he forced, garçon a boy, reçu received; pronounce garson, ressu, forsa, &c.

c is kept in the word contracter to contract, though left out in the root contrat contract. It is likewise dropt, as well as t, at the end of instinct instinct, and succinct, and in succinctement succinctly, when spelt with c before t. It is quite turned out of bienfaiteur benefactor, and bienfaitrice benefactress. It is preserved still in amict (a sort of vestment), but without being articulated.

c takes the articulation of g, especially in conversation, in Claude Claudius, and Claudine, Czar, and Czarine, second second, secondement secondly; seconder to second, to assist, secret secret, secrettement secretly, secrétaire a secretary, secrétariat a secretary's office or place; and in the second syllable of cicogne stork.

Therefore pronounce Glaude, Gzar, segon, secondé, segret, sigogne.

c is pronounced in respect, only at the end of a sentence, or before a word beginning with a consonant; and the second e has the intermediate sound of e; as sans respect without any respect, le respect que je lui dois the respect which I owe him; pronounce sans respèc, le respèc que je lui dois. When the next word begins with a vowel, c likewise is articulated, but not the final t; as portez respect à qui il est du, respect or reverence your betters: pronounce respèc à qui il, &c. and in the plural (respects) cts are altogether mute, the final s being not articulated even before a vowel: but e has the most resonant sound of e grave; as présentez mes respects à madame, present my respect to my Lady; pronounce mes respè à Madame.

In lacs nets, c is mute and a is broad; but it is articulated when that word signifies lakes, and a is not broad.

c is articulated at the end of words, as roc a rock, sac a sack, avec with, &c. Except, 1st, in un sac de blé, a sack of wheat, though it is articulated in un sac de farine, &c.

2dly, At the end of the following words, accroc a rent, almanach an almanack, arsenic arsenic, brock a large jug, cotignac marmalade of quinces, clerc a clerk, croc a hook, estomac stomach, tabac tobacco, marc (weight of eight ounces, or the gross substance that remains of any thing strained), and porc pork. But in porc-épic porcupine, c is articulated at the end of porc, and not at the end of épic; as also in Marc (a proper name), and in croc-en-jambe, the tripping up one's heels.

3dly, At the end of such words as have a nasal vowel before c: as banc bench; donc then, in the middle of a sentence; il convainc he convinces. Except blanc white, and franc free, when before a conjunctive beginning with a vowel; as du blanc au noir, going upon extremes, franc arbitre free-will, franc alleu free-hold, allodial lands: pronounce fran kalleu, du blanc kau noir, &c. but pronounce ban, don, convain, and other like words ending in c, without articulating final c: unless in reading verses, when the next word begins with a vowel. Except also donc beginning a sentence, which is a consequence drawn from two or more premises, as donc vous vous imaginez, therefore you think, &c.

c doubles in the beginning of words between the vowels a, o, u, when one of them begins the word, and l or r comes between the consonant and the latter vowel: as also when this last makes a diphthong jointly with another; as may be seen in accabler to overcharge, accommoder to fit, accumuler to heap up, occurrence emergency, acclamation acclamation, accrédité in authority, accroissement increase, accoucher to lay in, accueillir to make welcome, &c.

Except in acabit good or bad taste in fruit, acanthé bear's foot, acariâtre peevish, âcre acrid, acrimonie acrimony, ocre oker, acrostiche acrostic, académie academy, with their derivatives.

After e and i, c is always single; as in écarter to scatter, écouter to hearken, écolier a scholar, écume the scum, écrevisse a crawfish, iconoclaste image-breaker.

Double c is pronounced only before e and i, the first with the articulation of k, and the other with the hissing articulation of s; as in accident accident, accélérer to accelerate, succéder to succeed: pronounce ak-sidan, akséléré, suksédé. But the two c's are always articulated in proper names, as in Accaron.

d is not articulated, nor even written at present in amiral admiral, amirauté admiralty, blé wheat, and Piémont Piedmont.

d final is articulated only, 1st, at the end of sud south, and foreign words, as Ephod, David, &c.

2dly, At the end of the word fond, in this expression only, de fond en comble utterly to the ground; of quand when, before pronouns of the third person; and of adnouns before nouns beginning with a vowel or h mute: as grand esprit great wit, grand homme a great or tall man, quand il or elle parle when he or she speaks, quand on dit when they say: in which cases final d has the articulation of t; quan ton di, gran tespri, de fon tan comble, gran tome, quan til parle.

3dly, At the end of the third person singular of verbs, but only when they are immediately followed by their pronouns subjective il, elle, on; as prend-il or elle, does he or she take? répond-on, do people answer? pronounce, articulating d like t, répon ton, prenti: but pronounce il répon en Norman, for il répond en Normand, he answers like a Norman, without articulating d at all.

d before re in the infinitive of verbs (dre), is cut off in the two persons singular of the present of the indicative of the polysyllables, but is kept in monosyllables, except in the same persons of plaindre to pity, craindre to fear, and joindre to join. Thus write je vends, tu vends, from vendre to sell; je défens, tu défens, from défendre to defend; je répons, from répondre to answer, &c.

but write je plains, tu plains; je crains, tu crains; je joins, tu joins; instead of je plains, je crains, je joins.

d is double in some words derived from the Latin only; as addition addition, reddition reddition, wherein the two d's are articulated.

f is articulated at the end of words; as chef chief, vif alive, soif thirst, suif tallow, bœuf an ox, nerf sinew, &c.

Except, 1st, in chef-d'œuvre a master-piece of work, clef a key, cerf a stag, and at the end of apprentif an apprentice, and baillif bailiff, which are at present spelt apprenti, bailli.

2dly, At the end of these words in the plural number, bœuf an ox, neuf new, and auf egg: as des bœufs oxen, des habits neufs new coats, des œufs à la coque eggs in the shell; un nerf de bœuf a bull's pizzle; but pronounce with the articulation of f de la corne de cerf, hart's horn.

f is articulated at the end of neuf nine, when that word of number is alone, or at the end of a sentence; as j'en ai neuf I have got nine. But when in a sentence neuf is followed by a word beginning with a consonant, as neuf guinées, or neuf livres sterling nine guineas or pounds sterling, f final is not articulated at all: and when it is followed by a vowel, as neuf écus nine crowns, neuf ans nine years, f takes the soft articulation of v. Therefore pronounce neu guinées, neu récu, neu an.

f doubles after the vowels a, e, o, and the syllables di and su in the beginning of words; but double f is only articulated like single f, as in affaire an affair, affront affront, effroi fright, effet effect, offense an offence, office an office, dissamant defaming, différent different, difficile difficult, diffus prolix, suffisant sufficient, suffrage vote, &c.

Except in afin to the end that, basouer to abuse, café coffee, défense defence, réforme reform, réfaire to do again.

This consonant has three different articulations, all included in the word gagnages (a hunting term which signifies the ploughed grounds where cattle and deer are used to feed).

g immediately before a, o, u, and the improper diphthong ai, and consonants except n, takes an articulation very near like k, except that it is not quite so hard. Nay, in gangrene gangrene, the first g is articulated quite like k: and very likely this word will be spelt in time with c, as it is pronounced; as has been the case with others.—There are two different articulations of g expressed in the word Gregory: the others are in garni garnished, gorge throat, aigu acute, cargaison a cargo, &c.

g before e, and i, ea, eo, and eu, denotes the articulation of j consonant; as manger to eat, régir to rule, mangeons let us eat, il jugea he judged, gageure a wager; pronounce manjé, juja, gajure, &c. e, in the improper diphthongs, serving only to give g the articulation of j which falls upon a or o, it being quite dropt before these two vowels, as has been already said, except it is marked over with an accent, as in géant.

When after g there follows u, followed too by another vowel, g keeps its hard articulation (in English ghee), which falls not upon g, that is then quite dropt, and serves only (as Dr. Wallis says) to make g a palate letter, but upon the following vowel; as in guérir to cure, guide a guide, anguille an eel: pronounce ghéri, ghid, anghille. Except in aiguille needle, aiguïser to whet, and their derivatives: cigüë hemlock, contigüë contiguous, ambigüë ambiguous, and ambigüité ambiguity, argüër to argue, Guïse and Guide (proper names). In which case two dots are put over the vowel that follows u, or rather upon ü, as Güïse, Güide, Cigüë; to show that the articulation of g falls upon u, which is drawn out upon the account of the final e not being sounded: whereas, when that e or that u is not marked over with two dots, as in figue, vogue, &c. g has no other articulation than that of the final g in the English word fig: the English have the same syllable and articulation in fatigue, vogue, plague, &c.

g is not articulated in doigt finger, legs legacy, vingt twenty.

gh is articulated like gu in these proper names, Berghen and le Ghilan.

gn expresses a certain liquid articulation like that of n between two i's in English (minion), as in mignon delicate, digne worthy, compagnon companion, régner to reign.

Except in agnat and agnation, cognat and cognition, bagnauder and bagnaudier, Gnidien, Gnome, Gnomonique, Gnostique, magnésie, magnétisme régicole, Pregné, and other proper names, wherein g and n keep each their proper articulation.

g at the end of words is not articulated.

Except, 1st, in zig-zag, and at the end of proper and foreign names: as Agag, Sarug.

2dly, In these expressions, suer sang & eau, to labour with might and main, le sang & le carnage, the blood and slaughter, long espace, a long space; and at the end of the words sang blood, rang rank, joug yoke, only in repeating verses when the next word begins with a vowel: in which cases g is quite articulated like k. Therefore pronounce san ké eau, un lon kespace, le san ké le karnage.

Double g is always pronounced, as in suggérer to suggest; except however in aggrave, aggraver, and réaggrave: but it is not an easy matter to determine when g is double, and when it is single.

h in the beginning and middle of words is either aspirated, or not aspirated; that is, either it is pronounced with a hard aspiration, as in host, hunting, or not pronounced at all, as in hour, honour: for, strictly speaking, h is no letter, but only a mark of aspiration, though not always so in our modern languages.

In order to know in what cases h must be aspirated, and when it must not be heard at all, French Grammarians have laid for a constant principle, that the words beginning with h, that are derived from Latin, in the beginning of which Latin words there is also h, have that h not aspirated; and that, on the contrary, h is aspirated in words merely French, and by no means derived from Latin. Thus honneur honour, being derived from the Latin word honor, beginning with h, you must pronounce without h, and write with the elision l'honneur, and not le honneur; haut is indeed derived from altus; but as there is no h in the Latin word, you must pronounce it hard in French, and read with aspiration en haut up, and not en nhaut; la hauteur the height, and not l'hauteur: honte shame, is not derived from Latin; therefore you must pronounce with aspiration, and write without elision la honte, and not l'onte, nor l'honte.

From French words derived from Latin, beginning with h, wherein however h is aspirated, seven are excepted; héros (though h is not aspirated in its derivatives heroïne, héroïque), &c. hennir to neigh, hennissement neighing, harpe a harp, harpie a harpy, hargneux morose, haleter to breathe short, hareng herring. And from words merely French, or derived from Latin words not beginning with h, wherein however h is not aspirated, eight also are excepted: hermine an ermine, hermite an hermit, huit eight (with its derivatives), huître oyster, huile oil, huis a door, huissier usher, and hièble wallwort.

This observation, though ever so infallible, being of no use to youth, and especially to young ladies, who oftentimes prove the best French scholars, I will, for their sake, make, at the end of this treatise, an exact list of all the words of the language wherein h is to be aspirated, and wherein it is not. You must only observe here, 1st, That h is not aspirated in the middle of words, or in compound words, when it is not aspirated in the beginning of the simple; as honneur, honorer, déshonneur, déshonorer, to dishonour; pronounce onorer and dézonoré. On the contrary, as it is aspirated in the beginning of hardi bold, it must be so too in hardiment boldly, and enhardir to embolden; except in the word exhausser to raise higher, which is pronounced as exaucer to grant, though being derived from haut.—h in trahir to betray, trahison betraying, envahir to invade, and other like words not compound, is left out also in the pronunciation, and serves only to cause both the vowels to be sounded as two distinct syllables (tra-ir).

2dly, That h is aspirated in the plural of the word Henri (les Henris), as likewise in its derivative la Henriade, in Hesse, and la Hollande, Hongrie, when these words have not the particle de before them; for when they follow that particle, h is not aspirated. Thus, though we say la Hollande & la Hongrie, and not l'Hollande & l'Hongrie, yet we say de la toile d'Hollande Holland cloth, du fromage d'Hollande Dutch cheese, la Reine d'Hongrie the Queen of Hungary, du vin d'Hongrie wine of Hungary, and not la Reine de Hongrie, du fromage de Hollande. We say, however, venir de Hollande to come from Holland.

3dly, Though h is not aspirated in huit eight, nor in its derivatives, huitième eighth, huitain (a stanza of eight verses), and huitaine (a space of eight days), yet we don't say or write with the elision l'huit, l'huitième, as we do l'huile, l'huître; but le huit, le huitième, un huit, un huitième, la huitaine, &c. as if h were aspirated.

h following c (ch) answers the English sh, and expresses the same articulation; as chats cats, chérir to cherish, chiffre cypher &c. pronounce as in English shaw, shiff, &c. We now write as we pronounce colère anger, colique colick, caractère character, without h; but we write still chaos chaos, to distinguish it from cahot jolt.

But the difference is however to be observed in regard to the pronunciation of the following words derived from Greek and Hebrew, as some being pronounced according to the proper articulation of ch:

and ORTHOGRAPHY.

Chimère,	Chinaëra, Zachée,	Zaccheus.

But ch is articulated like k in the following words, and all other foreign names, which therefore should be better spelt with k, especially if we consider what an idle letter k is in French.

Achaie,	Achaia, Archéarnasse,	Archearnassus,
Acheloüs,	Achelous, Archestratus,	Archestratus, and the syllables in chal of foreign words become French; as Monachal , &c.

ch is pronounced in catéchèse, and catéchisme a catechism, and it is articulated like k in catéchumène. We pronounce machine and stomachique French like, and mécanique and stomachal, Greek like, when these words are spelt with h.

We now write pascal, instead of paschal.

Chypre Cyprus, is sometimes spelt and pronounced with ch, and sometimes with c only, according to the circumstances of the time spoken of; for if one speaks of something relating to ancient geography, one must spell and pronounce l'île de Chypre, the island of Cyprus; and l'île de Chypre, if what one says relates to modern geography. Therefore we always say de la poudre de Chypre, powder of Cyprus: as likewise,

Caton fut envoyé par le peuple Romain dans l'île de Chypre, Cato was sent by the Roman people into the island of Cyprus.
Les Turcs se rendirent maîtres de l'île de Chypre sous Sélim II.
The Turks made themselves masters of the island of Cyprus under Selim II.

ch, in common conversation, is articulated like j in j'achète, with the two other persons sing. of acheter to buy, and revenge revenge. Pronounce revenje, j'ajète.

ch before r is articulated like k in chrême chrism, Christ, and other words beginning with chr, wherein it is pronounced as in English Christ.

lh takes the liquid articulation of l in these two proper names, Milhaut and Pardalhac.

h after p (ph) is articulated like f, as in philosophe philosopher. But ph is no longer found, except in proper names, and some scientific words, as in Phaéton, Philippe, Physicien, Pharmacie, Phénomène, Phthisie, Physionomie: as to the others used in common discourse, they are spelt French like, in spite of their Greek derivation. Thus we write fantaisie fancy, fantôme a phantom, faisan a pheasant, frénésie phrensy, &c.

h after r or t is not pronounced at all; as rhétorique rhetorick, thèse thesis; pronounce tèse, rétorique.

h in hiérarchie is aspirated: it is not in hiéroglyphe and hiéroglyphique. We now write Jérusalem, Jérôme, jacinthe, instead of Hiérusalem, Hiérôme, hyacinthe.

Final h is found only at the end of Auch (a city in France), and some foreign and chiefly Hebraic words, wherein it is not pronounced; as in Abimelech, Enoch, &c. At the end of Joseph, it forms with p the sound of f. Pronounce Josef, Enoc, &c. ch is dropt at the end of almanach: but Auch is pronounced ôche.

In the interjections ah, eh, oh! h is sometimes pronounced with aspiration, as if it were the first letter.

j consonant is of the same use in French as in English, but is articulated like s in the words pleasure, leisure, &c. It differs from the English j, in that one must express no articulation of d before, no more than before g; for these two consonants are pronounced in English with a double articulation.

k is used in French only in the word kyrielle, which signifies, in familiar discourse, a long and grievous series of things in a story, and abusively formed from the litany Kyrie eleison. As to the foreign words wherein k is found, as in Stoekholm, k is articulated as in English.

l is not articulated in fils son ; it is silent also in quelque some, quelquefois sometimes, quelqu'un somebody, but only in conversation ; though it is always pronounced in quelconque any body whatever. Neither is it pronounced in Chaulnes (a proper name).

Double l is no otherwise articulated but as a single l, as in mollir to soften, salle a hall. Except in the following words, and when i comes before double l in the beginning of words, as illustre illustrious, illégitime illegal, &c.

Allégorie,	allegory, ébullition,	ebullition,
allusion,	allusion, ellébore,	ellebore,
allision,	allision, flagellation,	scourging,
appellatif,	appellative, flageller,	to scourge,
Apollon,	Apollo, Gallicane,	Gallic,
Bellone,	Bellona, imbécillité,	imbecility,
belligérant,	at war, intelligence,	understanding,
belliqueux,	warlike, intelligent,	intelligent,
bellissime,	extraordinary fine, intelligible,	intelligible,
circonvallation,	circumvallation, intellectuel,	intellectual,
collatéral,	collateral, millénaire,	millenary,
collateur,	one that has a living millésime,	the year or date of a in his gift,	medal,
collation,	collation, Magellanique,	Magellanic,
collationner,	but not in collation,	nullity,
a meal, &c.	nullité,
colloquer,	to rank, Palladium,	Palladium,
colliger,	to collect, Pallas,	Pallas,
recueillir,	to recollect, but not pallier,	to palliate,
in récollection,	polluer,	to pollute,
collusion,	collusion, Pollux (and all proper names
collusoire,	collusory, spelt with double l),
constellation,	constellation, pusillanime,	pusillanimous,
	pusillanimité,	pusillanimity.

Therefore pronounce il-lustre, il-legitime, Pal-las, bel-liqueux, intel-ligent, pel-licule, &c. but pronounce mollir, salle, &c.

You may pronounce syllogisme a syllogism, as you please ; but it is better to pronounce the two ll's.

It is not therefore an easy matter to determine when l doubles in words. It may be said only in general for the adnouns, when the masculine ends in l, it is doubled in the feminine ; but remains single, if the final l of the masculine is followed by e not sounded ; as,

M. *bel, F. belle, handsome. M. cruel, F. cruelle, cruel.
 M. *mol, F. molle, soft. M. fol, F. folle, fool.

* Old Masculines still used before nouns beginning with a vowel.

M. and F. fidelle faithful, tranquille quiet, utile useful, frivole frivolous, &c.

There is another exception from nouns in il, as vil vile, subtil subtle, &c. in whose feminine vile, subtile, l is not doubled.

i before double l in the middle of words, denotes only the liquid articulation of l; as in fille a daughter, sillon a furrow, except in these words,

Achille ,	Achilles,	Gilles ,	St. Giles ,	Séville ,	Seville,
argille ,	clay,	imbécille ,	feeble, an	syllabe ,	a syllable,
armillaire ,	armillary,	idiot,		vacillant ,	vaciller , &c.
camomille ,	camomile,	mille ,	a thousand (with	reeling,
il distille ,	he distils,	its derivatives),		ville ,	city, town.
idylle ,	idyl,	pupille ,	an orphan,

l takes the liquid articulation at the end of Avril April, babil rattling, bénil, Brésil Brasil, grésil (a sort of rime or hoarfrost), mil millet, and pénil peril; as likewise at the end of the improper diphthongs ail, eil, ueil, euil, and ouil: as de l'ail garlic, mail mall, soleil sun, deuil mourning, fenouil fennel; and in gentilhomme nobly descended: but l is quite dropt in the pronunciation of the plural of that noun gentils-hommes, which is pronounced jantizom; and likewise in fils son, which is pronounced fi (as has been said before).

Double l takes likewise the liquid articulation in these two proper names Nulli and Sulli; as also lh in these two others, Milhaut and Pardalhac.

l is pronounced at the end of words; as sel salt, fil thread, royal royal.

Except, 1st, in

baril ,	barrel,	gril ,	gridiron,	pouls ,	pulse,
chenil ,	dog-kennel,	nombril ,	navel,	soul ,	fuddled,
fusil ,	a gun,	outil ,	a tool,	sourcil ,	eye-brow,
gentil ,	genteel,	persil ,	parsley.

2dly, In the pronoun il before a consonant in common conversation, (nay il coming after its verb don't articulate its l even before a vowel); and in the plural ils, even before a vowel, and final s before a vowel is articulated like z: as il dit he says, ils ont fait they have done, parle-t-il encore? is he speaking still? Pronounce i di, i zon fai, parl ti encor: but to avoid double meanings, the best is to sound l: besides, in reading, it cannot be silent. In the phrase ainsi soit-il, l must be articulated.

We spell and pronounce fou for fol a fool, sou for sol a penny, cou for col a neck, and mou for mol soft. But we still spell and pronounce sol soil, le col d'une chemise the neck of a shirt, un col a stock, as likewise when col signifies a défilé, or narrow passage between two hills; as le col de Tende the straights of Tend; as also le col de la vessie & de la matrice the neck of the bladder and matrice; and un b mol a b flat in music.

We say, in terms of hawking, that un oiseau a fait un beau vol for vol, the bird has made a fine flight.

m after a vowel, and followed by a consonant, serves, like n, to give the nasal sound to the vowel; as prompt quick, sembler to seem; pronounce pron sambler. Except,

1st, amnistie amnesty, hymne hymn, Amsterdam, and some other foreign words, wherein m keeps its peculiar articulation, though followed by a consonant.

2dly, immédiat immediate, immoler to sacrifice, and all words beginning with im followed by another m, wherein both m's must be articulated; pronounce am-nistie, im-médiat im-moler.

3dly, om followed by m is not nasal, but o keeps its slender and short sound, and the two m's are pronounced only by a single one; as in commun common, commander to command, commode convenient, sommer to summon, &c. pronounce comande, comode, &c. but articulate the double m in these four words, commuer, commutation, commutatif, and incommuniquable.

Neither is am nasal in damner to damn, nor in its derivatives, condamner to condemn, &c. pronounce dâner.—m is articulated in indemniser to indemnify, and indemnité indemnity; but it causes the foregoing e to take the sound of slender a (indam-nité).—It is not articulated in solemnel solemn, though the foregoing e is sounded like a (solanel).

m at the end of words sounds like n, to give the nasal sound to the vowel: as nom name, parfum perfume; pronounce non, parfun.

Except in the interjection of hem, wherein h and m are articulated hard; in item, and in foreign words; as Matusalem, Amsterdam, Stockholm, wherein m keeps its peculiar articulation: though at the end of Adam, and Absalom, final m gives the preceding vowel the nasal sound; as also doth n at the end of Salomon.

m is commonly doubled after im, com, gom, pom, hom, som, beginning a word; as immense immense, comme as, commerce trade, gomme gum, pomme an apple, sommet the top, homme a man, sommer to summon, &c.

Except in these words, comète a comet, comite (an officer on board a galley), comité a committee, comédie a comedy, comique comical, concomitance concomitancy, homogène homogeneous.

m is also doubled in these six words, dommage damage, femme a woman, lemme lemma, dilemme a dilemma, nommer to name, nommément namely; pron. domage, jame, léme, dilème, nomé, &c.

Double m is articulated in foreign words, as Ammoniac, Ammonite, after the same manner as in French words beginning with imm, as im-médiat immediate, im-moler to sacrifice, immense.

n keeps its peculiar and proper articulation (such as it is expressed in the English monosyllables not and in), 1st, when it begins a syllable, or is between two vowels, as in nonagénaire one fourscore and ten years old, inimitié enmity.

2dly, When in, beginning a word, is followed by another n; as in innover to make innovations: pronounce in-nover, in-i-mitié, &c.

Except innocent innocent (with its derivatives), which is pronounced as if it were spelt with a single n, i-nocent.

In all other cases n serves only to give the nasal sound to the foregoing vowel, as has been said in the third section about nasals: where we have seen, that in beginning a word, and followed by a vowel, is not nasal; i and n keeping each of them its peculiar sound and articulation, as in inattention want of attention, inouï unheard of; pronounce i-nattention, i-nouï.

n at the end of words is not pronounced before consonants; but as for those words beginning with a vowel, make these following observations:

bien well, and rien nothing, articulate in a particular manner their final n before a vowel, even in common and familiar discourse. Therefore pronounce

bien néloquent, bien nétudier, ne rien napprendre, rien nau monde,	}	for	{	bien éloquent, very eloquent. bien étudier, to study well. ne rien apprendre, to learn nothing. rien au monde, nothing in the world.
---	---	-----	---	---

But custom is against pronouncing final n in the noun bien, in the pronouns mien, tien, sien: in vin wine, dessein design, and rien before ouï heard. Therefore don't pronounce

je n'ai rien nouï dire, un dessein nadmirable, du vin nexcellent, le mien nest meilleur, un bien na désirer,	}	but	rien ouï dire, I've heard nothing, dessein admirable, a marvellous design, du vin excellent, mighty good wine, le mien est meilleur, mine is better, bien à désirer, a thing to be wished for.

en, either preposition or pronoun relative, always articulates its n before a vowel; as,

en un clin d'œil, in a trice, en entrant, as he went in, en êtes-vous sûr, are you sure of it? j'en ai dit assez, I've said enough on't,	}	pro- nounce	en nun clin d'œil, en nantrant, en nêtes-vous sûr, j'en nai dit assez.
---	---	----------------	---

Except after the imperative: as donnez-en à tous, give some to every body, and not donnez en nà tous. Parlez-en encore, not en nencore, speak of it again.

on always articulates its final n before a vowel, except in sentences of interrogation: as,

on observe, on en peut être as- suré,	}	pronounce	on nobserve, it is observed, on nen peut, &c. one may be sure of it.
--	---	-----------	---

But when a question is asked, pronounce

en peut-on être sûr, apprend-on avec joie,	}	and not	en peut-on nêtre sûr, can one be sure of it? apprend-on navè joie, can one hear with gladness?

un articulates its n before its noun beginning with a vowel: but never when it is a noun of number. Therefore pronounce un narbre for un arbre a tree, un nami for un ami a friend, il n'y a qu'un homme there is but one man; pronounce un nome. But il y en eut un assez hardi, and not un nassez hardi there was one so bold as to, &c

As to the other final nasals, they articulate n before a vowel in all words, especially adnouns immediately followed by their nouns; as d'un commun accord unanimously, mon âme my soul, certain auteur a certain author, ancien établissement ancient establishment; pronounce mon nâme, commun accord, certain nau-teur, &c.

Nay bon and divin seem to lose entirely their nasal sounds before their nouns beginning with a vowel; as bon orateur a good orator, divin amour divine love; pronounce bon orateur, divi namour;

as also bien aise very glad; pronounce bié-naise.—Bénin benign, and malin malign, are seldom met with before nouns beginning with a vowel, except that malin esprit (an evil spirit) are construed together.

n is pronounced at the end of foreign words, or those derived from Latin; e (as has been said) being not nasal in these words, hymen, examen, &c.

n is quite dropt in all the third persons of the plural number of verbs before e; as ils aiment they love, ils aimoient they loved; pronounce izaime, izaimé; nt serving to make that syllable a little longer than it is in the third person singular; il aime he loves, il aimoit he loved. That final t is articulated in repeating verses before the next word beginning with a vowel, as elles aiment à parler they love speaking; pronounce el zaimé tà parler.

We write couvent a convent, and Marmoutier, instead of the old manner of convent, Marmontier (a proper name).

n is, of all consonants, that which is most frequently doubled in words, though it is single in a great many cases. Generally speaking, it does not double between two o's. Thus we write with a single n, sonore sonorous, honorable honourable, and honorer to honour; though we write with a double n sonner to ring or resound, honneur honour, honnête honest, &c.

We most commonly double it in derivatives, when the primitives end in n coming after a, e, o; as an, année year, le mien, la mienne mine, pardon pardon, pardonnable what is to be forgiven, occasion occasion, occasionner to occasion, marron a horse-chestnut, marronnier a horse-chestnut tree, savon soap, savonnette a wash-ball, &c. But when that final consonant comes after i or u, or any diphthong, it remains single in the derivative; as badin wanton, badine; fin fine, fine; brun brown, brune; soin care, soigner to take care, &c.

Double n is pronounced in these words only, annale annal, annuité annuity, annulaire annular, annuler to annul, inné innate, innover to innovate, connexité connexion, connixer to connive, and their derivatives.

p is not pronounced in baptême baptism, baptiser to christen, baptistère and baptiste: but it is in baptismal and baptismaux.—It is not articulated in sept seven, but it is in its derivatives septante seventy, septuagénnaire one seventy years old, and septuagésime septuagesima.—Neither is it pronounced by some people in pseaume psalm, pseautier psalter, nor in psalmiste psalmist, tho' it is in psalmodie psalmody, and psalmodier to sing.

p is likewise dropt in

corps ,	body,	manuscript ,	manu-	sculpture ,	statuary,
compte ,	account,	script,		with its deriva-
compter ,	to reckon,	prompt ,	quick,	tives,	sculpter and
exempt ,	free,	promptitude ,	quick-	sculpteur ,
exempter ,	to ex-	ness,	promptement ,	symptome ,	symptom,
empt,		quickly,		temps ,	time,

But p is pronounced in dompter to tame, exemption, impromptu, accepter, rédempteur, contemptible.

p at the end of words is not articulated; as drap cloth, loup wolf, champ field, &c.

Except these, cap a cape, Gap (the name of a city), julep a julep, jalap jalap; and the adverbs beaucoup much, and trop too much, before a word beginning with a vowel; as beaucoup aimé much loved, trop obligeant too obliging; pronounce dra, lou, tro poligeant, julep, Gap, cap, jalap.

Good writers double p in most words, only to preserve etymology: in proper names, as Appius, &c. it is sounded.

q is always followed in words by u (qu) even before another u, and articulated like k or c in call; as quatre four, quelque some, qui who, quintal, piquure, pricking, &c. pronounce katr, ki, &c. but in questeur questor, équestre equestrian, équiangle equiangular, the first syllables of Quinquagésime Quinquagesima, Quirinal, Quintilien, Quinte-Curce Quintus Curtius, and the third of ubiquiste, with their derivatives, pronounce ku-esteur, écu-estre, cu-incouagésime, ubicu iste: and in aquatique marshy, quadragénaire one forty years old, quadragésime quadragesima, quadrature quadrature, quadruple four-fold, quadrupède a quadruped, équateur equator, équation, and the second syllable of quinquagénaire one fifty years old, and quinquagésime, qua is pronounced like quoua, or kwa. Therefore pronounce akwatic, ékwateur, kwa-dratur, &c. It is not amiss to observe here, that ua is likewise pronounced like oua, in linguale, la Guadeloupe, and la Gadiane.

qu followed by nasal i (quin), is pronounced in Charles-quin Charles the fifth, and Sixte-quin Sixtus the fifth, like Kent without sounding the final t.

q takes the articulation of g hard in souquenille a frock, as also in Don Quixotte, which is pronounced Don Ghishot.

q is articulated like k at the end of coq a cock ; but it is not pronounced in coq d' Inde a Turkey-cock ; nor at the end of cing five, when in a sentence the next word begins with a consonant : but when cing comes before a vowel, or at the end of a sentence, final q is articulated, as in coq. Therefore pronounce un coq, co-dinde, cin soldâ for cing soldats five soldiers, cin kofficié for cing officiers five officers, j'en ai cink for cing I have got five.

Pronounce also cink in cing pour cent, five per cent.

r is not pronounced in common discourse, in votre your, notre our, quatre four ; as also most times in autre other, immediately followed by their nouns beginning with a consonant. Thus pronounce vote sœur your sister, note maison our house, quate guinées four guineas, un aute cheval another horse. Otherwise, that is, when those words meet before a vowel, or alone, or at the end of a sentence, r is articulated ; as, c'est votre ami & le nôtre he is your friend and ours, un autre ouvrage another work, quatre écus four crowns, il en a quatre he has four.—r is also pronounced in Notre-Dame Our Lady, and in the Lord's prayer, Notre Père qui es aux Cieux Our Father which art in heaven.

Sometimes, in common conversation, r is not pronounced in the first syllable of Mercredi Wednesday, in the second of chirurgien a surgeon (though it is articulated in chirurgie surgery), and the last of volontiers willingly (no more than the final s). Pronounce Mècredi, volantié, chirugien, and chirurgie.—It is usually dropt in common conversation, in être to be, before a word beginning with a consonant ; as il doit être convaincu que je l'estime he ought to be persuaded that I esteem him ; pronounce il doit ète convaincu, &c. The ear only is to judge when r in être sounds too harsh, as in the aforesaid example.

r is articulated at the end of words, as car for, bonheur good fortune, pur pure, avoir to have, &c.

Except, 1st, In monsieur, sir, and its plural messieurs gentlemen, though it is articulated in sieur and sieurs : pronounce monsieu, messicié, le sieur, les sieurs.

It is indifferent to articulate it or no in sur, and to pronounce su la terre, or sur la terre, upon the earth.

2dly, At the end of infinitives in er, even before a vowel, except in reading verses ; as chanter to sing, pronounce chanté un air to sing an air.

3dly, At the end of nouns in er ; as danger danger. (See in the paragraph of é acute, what concerns those words and their exceptions.)

r doubles after a, e, o: as in arracher to pluck out, guerre war, horrible horrid: except in some words, as araignée a spider, aride dry, mère mother, sonore sonorous. It is doubled also in résurrection: but the two r's are articulated only in Corrégidor, corroder to corrode, corrosif corrosive, corroboratif corroborative, corroborer to corroborate; errant, errata, errer, and erreur; horreur, (though not in horrible, &c.) irrégulier, &c. irréligion, irrésolu, and in all words beginning with ir followed by another r: as likewise in the future and conditional tenses of courir and mourir. Therefore pronounce courrois, mourra, snoring half a dozen of r's between your teeth.

This letter has two articulations. s in the beginning of words, and in the middle before a vowel, and after a consonant, expresses the same articulation as s in so or slow (which articulation I shall call the hissing articulation of s), as si if, persécuter to prosecute, &c.

Except in these five words, Alsace, balsamine, balsamique, balsam, and balsane.

And when it is between two vowels, it has the articulation of z: as also at the end of the preposition trans, followed by a vowel, as in transaction transaction, oser to dare, baiser to kiss: pronounce ôzé, baizé, tranzaction.

Double s between two vowels, denotes only the hissing articulation of s; as baisser to stoop, ressort a spring, &c.—s in the following words keeps its hissing articulation, though between two vowels, because, they being compounds, it is considered as if it were in the beginning of the simples:

Melchisedech ,	resaisir ,	to seize again,
monosyllable ,	monosyllable, tournesol ,	turnsol,
polysyllable ,	polysyllable, vraisemblable ,	} likely,
préséance ,	precedence, vraisemblablement ,
parasol ,	an umbrella, vraisemblance ,	likelihood,
présupposer ,	to presuppose,

Pronounce préséance, &c. whereas it is pronounced with the soft articulation of z in réserver to reserve, résister to resist, and présumer to presume, though these words are compounds, because their simples are not in use.

sc are articulated before a, o, u, and any consonant, as in scapulaire scapulary, scorpion scorpion, scrupule a scruple; but before c and i, or when e has a cedilla under it (ç), they take the hissing articulation of s, as science science, sceau seal, çavoir to know, (when so spelt, for it is generally spelt savoir).

s is not pronounced in the beginning of schisme schism, nor in its derivatives; pronounce chisme, and chismatique a schismatic. But it is articulated in scholastique scholastic, scholiaste scholiast, and scholie, when the words are so spelt.

s at the end of words is not pronounced, even before a vowel; as un bras estropié a maimed arm; pronounce bra estropié. Except, 1st, In un as an ace, l'as de pique the ace of spades, un ours a bear, une vis a screw, and le cens (census) but not in deux cens, trois cens, &c. two hundred, three hundred, &c.

2dly, At the end of foreign words and proper names, as Aloës, Fabius, Vénus, Daphnis, Cérès, Pallas, Esdras, Josias, &c. except Barnabas, Judas, Lucas, Mathias, and Thomas. It is likewise pronounced in these Latin words, become French, ânus, agnus, bis, bibus, bolus, blocus, calus, fœtus, iris, gratis, orémus, phébus, rébus, sinus, virus (but not chaos) at the end of which s is pronounced with its hissing articulation.—s is articulated in Mars, the name of the god of war. It is pronounced in Thémis, des Jacobus (but not in des Carolus). It is articulated at the end of Rheims, Sens, and Senlis (cities of France); but not of Charles, Jules, and Pâques, when spelt with s.

3dly, At the end of articles, pronouns, and prepositions before a vowel, or h not aspirated, and the imperative before the pronouns en and y only, in the other persons of verbs, it is omitted in common discourse; as les enfans the children, nous aimons we love, viens-y come thither, faites-en make some, dès à présent from this time forward, j'avois été I had been, vous avez eu mes habits you have had my coats, nous irons à Paris, &c. we shall go to Paris; give it the sound of z, and pronounce dè za présen, vien zi, nou zémon, j'avois zété, vou zavé u mè zabits, nou ziron à Paris, &c. But when nous and vous are used interrogatively, we don't pronounce their final s before the next vowel. Therefore pronounce, without sounding s, avons-nous à manger have we something to eat? viens avec moi come along with me, lis encore read again.—Neither is s pronounced at the end of the pronoun les before a vowel, but only gives e the most resonant sound of è grave; as donnez-les à votre sœur give them to your sister: pronounce donnez-lé à votre sœur, tho' we pronounce il lé za donné for il les a donnés he has given them.

4thly, In the first syllable of vis-à-vis over against, and de temps en temps from time to time, as also most commonly in that of pas à pas step by step, de pis en pis worse and worse, and de plus en plus more and more.

5thly, s is not pronounced in puis then, nor depuis since, even before a vowel. It is articulated in puisque since, and lorsque when.

Observe besides, 1st, that excepting ûs, ours, viz, le cens, and foreign words wherein final s is pronounced with the hissing articulation: in all other cases wherein it is pronounced at the end of words, it is always with the soft articulation of z.

2dly, There were formerly a great many French words spelt with s, though not pronounced at all. They particularly used to write with s all the preterite tenses of the subjunctive; fût for fut were, vist for vit, aimast for aimât loved, and abysme for abyme abyss; chrestien for crétien christian, mesme for même even, maistre for maître master, naistre for naître to be born, &c. But the new orthography having suppressed s, which was useless in all those words, and substituted in its place the syncope (^) over the foregoing vowel, and there being no modern book or dictionary but what is conformable to this new way of spelling, so s is not now found in the middle of words, but when it is necessarily pronounced; except in est is (3d pers. pres. of être to be), and Basle (the name of a city when spelt with s).

3dly, s, which is pronounced in Christ (as well as t), when that word is alone, is dropt with the final t when they come after Jésus, the final s whereof is never articulated neither. Therefore pronounce Jésu and Jésu Cri.

4thly, s in the middle of words has the soft articulation of z before b, d, v, g, called weak consonants; and the hissing articulation before c and k, f, m, p, q, t. Thus Asdrubal, presbytère parsonage, &c. are pronounced Azdrubal, prezbytèr: but do not pronounce Jazpe, jazmin, austère, prezque, for Jaspe Jasper, jasmin jessamin, austère austere, presque almost, &c.

You may pronounce it or not in enregistrer to register; but it is never pronounced in registre, when this noun is spelt with s.

s is not sounded in this word tous all, when it is followed by some other words; as teus vos livres all your books, pronounce tou vô livr: but when tous is at the end of a sentence, s is sounded, as je les ai vus tous I have seen them all, pronounce je lè zé vu tous.

t followed by i (ti) before a, e, o, in the middle of words, has the hissing articulation of s; as in action action, martial warlike, patience patience, &c. pronounce paciencie, accion, &c. but ti keeps its proper articulation.

1st, After x and s; which extends only to these twelve words:

bastion ,	a bastion, hostie ,	a victim,
bestial ,	bestial, indigestion ,	surfeit,
bestiole ,	a little beast, mixture ,	mixture,
bestion ,	the head of a ship, question ,	a question,
combustion ,	combustion, suggestion , which is	} suggestion,
digestion ,	digestion, pronounced sug-
gestion ,	management, gestion ,

and these two proper names, Ephestion and Sébastien.

2dly, Before en, being the proper sound of nasal e, and not that of nasal a; as je tiens I hold, soutien support.

3dly, After en pronounced like a nasal, or an, as in entier entire, entièrement entirely. Therefore the spelling essenciel and essenciellement, pénitencier and pénitenciel, with t instead of c, is contrary to all analogy.

4thly, In verbs; as châtier to chastise, nous étions we were, vous battiez ye did beat, &c.

5thly, In words ending in tie, tié, and tier; as partie a part, amitié friendship, métier a trade.

Except minutie, impé itie, ineptie, inertie, and some names of countries; as Dalmatie, Galatie, Nigritie; and other words derived from the Greek, as primatie primacy, prophétie prophecy, aristocratie: pronounce aristocraci, prophéci, Dalmaci, &c.

But t keeps its proper articulation in Corinthie and Gothie, wherein thie is articulated as in partie; and these three proper names, Fortia, Nantia, and Santia.

t as well as h is suppressed in asthme asthma, and asthmatique; pronounce asme, asmatic.

In the plural of monosyllables ending in nt in the singular; as sing. un enfant a child; plu. des enfants children; un bâtiment a building, des bâtiments buildings: sometimes t is left out, and you may write likewise enfants, bâtiments: but monosyllables retain it; as un pont a bridge, des ponts bridges; une dent a tooth, des dents teeth. Except cent and tout, which makes in the plural cens and tous.

t is put between two hyphens (-t-) between a verb and the pronouns il, elle, on, when questions are asked and the verb ends in a vowel; y a-t-il is there? parle-t-elle, does she speak? va-t-on, do they go?

t is pronounced at the end of these words only:

brut ,	rough,	correct ,	correct,	rit ,	a rite,
dot ,	portion,	direct ,	direct,	sot ,	a fool,
exact ,	exact,	un fait ,	a fact,	tact ,	touching,
échec & mat ,	check-	indult ,	indult,	zénit ,	zenith,
mate,		lest ,	ballast,	zest ,	zest,
fat ,	a dunce, fop,	pact ,	pact,	Apt	(the name of
est and ouest ,	east and	rapt ,	a rape,		a town).
west,

t is also pronounced at the end of the impersonals, il faut, il plaît; and of vingt twenty, prêt ready, and some other adnouns; but is only when the next word begins with a vowel; as il faut y aller one must go thither, s'il plaît à Dieu if God pleases, vingt écus twenty crowns, savant esprit a learned mind.—And yet we do not only pronounce t in vingt & un one and twenty, but also in vingt-deux, vingt-trois, &c. and what is still more remarkable, we do not pronounce it in quatre-vingt un, quatre-vingt-deux, &c. pronounce vin-té-un, vint-deux; quatre-vingt-un, quatre-vingt-deux, &c. t is also pronounced in est is, before a vowel; as likewise at the end of a verb, when a question is asked; as c'est un grand fou he is a great fool, que fait-on what are they doing? doit-il does he owe? pronounce doi ti, fai ton, c'é tun gran fou.

t at the end of cent is pronounced only before a noun beginning with a vowel: as cent écus a hundred crowns, cent hommes a hundred men; but never in cent un one hundred and one, cent onze one hundred and eleven, un cent ou deux one hundred or two.

t is articulated in the first syllable of mot à mot word for word; pronounce mo ta mo.—t is not pronounced at the end of contrat; c and t are articulated in contracter to contract.

In avant-hier the day before yesterday, some pronounce t, but the best way is to drop it.

t is not pronounced in Dantzique (the name of a city), in Metz (another name of a city), nor in Retz (that of a cardinal), wherein e has the most resonant sound of e grave, and tz that of the hissing articulation of s (méss). Neither is it pronounced in the plural of nouns that end their singular in t: as un chat a cat, des chats cats; un habit a suit of clothes, des habits suits of clothes: pronounce un sha, des shaw, dè zabi; s serving only to make the syllable long in the plural, which was short in the singular.

This word fort is sometimes an adnoun, signifying strong; sometimes an adverb, signifying very. When it is an adnoun, as fort & grand strong and tall, the final t is silent, and r only is joined to the next word beginning with a vowel, and you pronounce for-é-gran: when it is an adverb, as fort aimable very amiable, t is joined to the next word beginning with a vowel, and you say fort aimable: in fort & ferme stoutly, t is sounded likewise.

t is never pronounced in the enclitic et or & (and), which is sounded like é acute; and et at the end of words is sounded like ai in May; as net clean, placet a petition.—t is articulated in sept seven, and huit eight, when alone, or at the end of a sentence, and before a word beginning with a vowel: as sept ou huit seven or eight, pronounce both final t's; as also in j'en ai sept I have got seven; but do not pronounce it in sept guinées, seven guineas.

Two t's together (tt) are sounded like a single one; as frotter to rub, attirer to attract: t is doubled only to make the foregoing syllable short t hardly doubles but after a and o (tho' not always), as in attaquer to attack, combattre to fight, botte a boot, botte foolish, sottise, &c. but write with a single t: établir to establish, citron citron, brutal brutish, tutélaire tutelar, and other words wherein t comes after e, i, u, &c. though we also spell with a single t: matière matter, latitude latitude, and some others: and with a double t: bette beet, betterave red beet.

The two t's (tt) are sounded in Attique, Atticisme, Atticus.

There is no occasion for any particular observations upon the consonant v, it having in French the same articulation, and being of the same use as in English.

x has the articulation of cs, in all proper names, both in the beginning, middle, and end; before consonants, except h; and between two vowels, except when the word begins with e; as Xavier, Xerxès, Ximénès, Alexandre, Mexique, axiome, axe axis, extrait extract, maxime, luxe luxury, flexible, &c. pronounce acsiome, Alecsandre, Csersès, ecstrai, lucse, &c.

x has the articulation of gz between two vowels, the first whereof is e, even tho' the second vowel should be preceded with h, as in examen, exil, exarque, exaucer to grant, exemple example, exhumer to unbury: pronounce egzil, egzumé, &c.

x in soixante sixty, and soixantième sixtieth, takes the hissing articulation of s; but the soft one of z in deuxième second, deuxièmement secondly, dixième tenth, dixaine ten, dixain a stanza of ten verses, and dixièmement tenthly, dix-huit eighteen, dix-neuf nineteen, sixième sixth, sixièmement sixthly, and sixain a stanza of six verses. Therefore pronounce soissante, deuzième, sizain, &c. nay we write sizain and dizain.

x takes also the hissing articulation of s in the following names of places, which even are commonly spelt with s; Xaintes, Xaintonge, Bruxelles, Flexelle, Auxerre, Auxonne, St. Maixant, Uxell, ou Uxelles, and the second x in Xerxes: pronounce Saintes, Brussels, Xersès, &c.

x takes the articulation of sh in Don Quixote, which is pronounced Ghishot.

x has the articulation of cs at the end of these Greek and Latin names only, Ajax, Alix, Anthrax, Béatrix, du borax, Contumax, Felix, index, Linx, Lârinx, Phénix, Onyx, Pollux, Sphinx, Styx, Storax, Syphax, préfix prefixed, and perplexe perplexed.—It has the hissing articulation of s at the end of Cadiz, but that of z at the end of adnouns before nouns beginning with a vowel, or h mute, as doux amusement sweet amusement, heureux homme happy man: as likewise at the end of plural nouns that have no x in their singular, when they are followed by an adnoun beginning with a vowel, as cheveux épars dishevelled hair. Those aforesaid cases excepted, x is not pronounced at the end of words; as des choux cabbages, toux cough; pronounce chou, tou: but in the former dou zamuseman, &c. Aix (the name of a city) is pronounced like Aisse, or est-ce.

There are three observations to make upon x at the end of dix ten, six six.

1st, x is not pronounced at all in dix and six before nouns beginning with a consonant; as dix guinées ten guineas, six livres sterling six pounds sterling.

2dly, dix and six, being at the end of a sentence, or in the middle before words beginning with a consonant, but not their nouns, articulate their final x like hissing s; as j'en ai dix I have ten, les six que vous avez the six which you have. It is also after this manner that x is pronounced in dix sept seventeen.

3dly, x in dix and in six, before nouns beginning with a vowel, takes the soft articulation of z; as also in dix-huit eighteen, and dix-neuf nineteen. Therefore pronounce diz-huit, diz-neuf; di-zécu ten crowns, dis-set, siss, diss, di guiné, si livres, &c.

z is used only in the four following cases: 1°, In the end of the second person plural of verbs, as vous aimez you love, vous faisiez you did, &c. 2°, In these three words only, le nez the nose, assez enough, chez at: for we no longer write with z un dé a die, un pré a meadow. 3°, In the beginning of some words derived from the Greek; as zèle zeal, zéphire zephyrus, &c. and in the numbers onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze, and seize, with their derivatives. 4°, In the end of these proper names, wherein it takes the hissing articulation of s; Booz, Rhodes, Sénez, Usez; except Sées, Rèz, Milanèz, and Vivarèz (when so spelt, for they are better spelt with ois), wherein z is not pronounced at all: but the foregoing e has the most resonant sound of è grave.—In l'Abrozze, the double z takes the hissing articulation of s, as if it were l'Abrousse.

z is not pronounced (except in solemn speech and reading verses) at the end of the few words wherein it is used before a vowel: assez aimable agreeable enough, vous avez eu you have had: pronounce asse aimable, avé u; but it is never pronounced after nez nose.

All that has been said throughout this last section concerning final consonants, is to be understood only of the pronunciation practised in common conversation; for in declamation, that is, in the pulpit, or at the bar, as also in reading verses, we always pronounce before vowels final consonants that are quite dropt in common conversation. And as we make it our chief task in this treatise to instruct the learner in that true, familiar, and ordinary way of speaking, which Tully calls Sermo quotidianus, and make him perfect master of it, he must, in order to speak properly and politely, observe the following rules as constantly true:

1st, That when the final consonant of a noun is not pronounced in the singular number, it is also mute in the plural, as well as the final s, which only serves to make that syllable long, or longer, in the plural, which was short, or already long, in the singular; as sing. un chat, a cat; plur. des chats cats; sing. un bourg a borough; plur. des bourgs boroughs: pronounce shaw and boorc.

2dly, That final consonants are always pronounced in words immediately before their conjunctives, beginning with a vowel; as,

First, The article and adnoun before its noun (les amis the friends, sot ouvrage silly work, franc animal mere brute or blockhead).

Secondly, The preposition or adverb before its regimen (chez eux at their house, bien habile very learned, fort adroit very skilful, trop irrité too much incensed.)

Thirdly, The pronoun personal before its verb (il aime he loves, vous offrez you offer, on apprend we learn): pronounce on naprend, i laime, tro pirité, ché zeux, so touvage, lè zamis, &c.

3dly, That final consonants are pronounced in proper and foreign names; as Jacob, Périclès, Stanislas, Norris, &c. Except, 1st, when it is s after e not sounded, as in Athènes; or after i in common French names, as Paris, Louis (tho' s is pronounced in Pâris, Priamus's son). 2dly, When there is a nasal vowel before the final consonant; as in St. Cloud, St. François, Pharamond, &c. pronounce St. Clou, la ville de Pari, le perfide Pâriss, Athène, Périclès, Stanislass, &c.

As to orthography, or spelling, we generally leave out all those useless consonants which are not pronounced, when the suppression of them causes no ambiguity. Thus we write avis advice, ajouter to add, lait milk, sujet subject, répondre to answer, tête head, &c. instead of the old way of spelling advís, adjouster, laict, subject, respondre, teste, &c. Some authors write a circumflex over most of those syllables, to show that a letter has been suppress; but first, to act consistently with themselves, they should put the circumflex over all those syllables, in âvis as well as âjouter, and laît. In the next place, it is using an useless mark to show, to no purpose, that an useless letter is suppress: the scholars don't want that mark to know the etymology of the word, and the illiterate are not a bit the wiser for it: and, finally, that mark may occasion a false pronunciation; for, as it is also used to denote long syllables, people are apt to think that ou in ajouter is long, as e in tête, which is the Norman accent and pronunciation.

If we keep still some useless consonants in some words, it is both to denote their derivation (etymology), and distinguish them from other words that are pronounced alike. Thus we spell poids weight, with d, to distinguish it from pois peas, poix pitch, which have the same sound; compte account, with p, to distinguish it from comte earl, and conte a story.

And as to the double consonants (which are pronounced in some cases only), observe, moreover, that these seven consonants never double h, j, k, v, x, z; neither do the others double after a long vowel, or marked over with a circumflex, or after a vowel nasal, or an improper diphthong (except however these three, l, r, and s); and it is therefore after short vowels only double consonants may come. Thus we write with single consonants côte coast, bâtiment building, tête head, encourager to encourage, enfanter to be delivered, entendre to hear, traiter to treat, goûter to taste, &c.

But we spell these following with double consonants, bouffon a buffoon, botte a boot, battre to beat, nette clean, affecter to affect, syllabe syllable, &c.

The characteristic consonant of verbs must be kept in the tenses, such as it is in the infinitive; that is, if it is single in the infinitive, it must be so too all along the verb, and double if it is double in that root. Therefore j'abhorre I abhor, vous luttez you wrestle, nous promettons we promise, il donne he gives, ils se rebellent, they rebel, &c. are spelt with double consonants, because the consonants are double in their infinitives abhorrer, lutter, promettre, &c. and je colore I colour, vous rebutez you repulse, nous dotons we endow, ils volent they fly, &c. are spelt with a single consonant, because there is but one in their infinitive.

Except épeler to spell, appeler to call, and a few others.

I shall conclude this treatise with two tables of the Terminations wherein the Penultima is pronounced short, and wherein it is pronounced long; which will be a great help to attain to the harmony of the pronunciation.

TERMINATIONS whose PENULTIMA is short.

Terminations.	Words of the same terminations, with their exceptions.
abe and able .	syllabe, table, érable, aimable, agréable, &c. Except diable, sable, fable, cable, rable, and accable.
acre .	diacre, fiacre, massacre, &c. Except âcre.
ade and adre .	fade, malade, pommade, salade, ladre, &c. Except Câdre.
age and ache .	page, courage, image, nage, rache, tache, panache, nager, &c. Except âge, fâche, tâche, and others, whose a is circumflexed.— a is likewise long in âgé, fâcher, tâcher, &c.

- Terminations.* Words of the same terminations, with their exceptions.
- afe and aphe.* agrafe, épitaphe, géographe, paragraphe, &c.
agne. campagne, montagne, Ascagne, &c.
Except gague, with gagner, and other derivatives.
- ale, alle, and acle.* balle, halle, scandale, ovale ; spectacle, receptacle, &c.
Except râle, pâle, le hâle, mâle, râcle, and râcler, &c.
- ane, anne.* cane, chicane, canne, &c.
Except âne, crâne, mânes, manne, and damne, &c.
- ape and aque.* attrape, frappe, cloaque, &c.
Except Jaques and Pâques.
- arbe, arbre, arde.* barbe, marbre, bâtarde, moutarde, &c.
- arme, arte, asme, astre.* carte, charme, désastre, asthme, cataplasme, &c.
- ame.* dame, lame, polygame, nous aimames (and all persons plural of the perfect tense of the 1st conjugation).
Except l'âme, flamme, infâme, blâme, pâme, pâmer, blâmer.
- ate, atte, and attez.* pirate, patte, agate, gratte, and gratter ; battez, battons, &c. and the termination of the second pers. plur. perf. of the 1st conjugation, priates, animates, &c.
Except pâte (dough), gâte, hâte, hâter, gâter, &c.
- attre and atre.* battre, quatre, &c.
Except l'âtre, théâtre, blanchâtre, noirâtre, &c. châtre, and in châtrer, and châtier.
- ave.* brave, cave, rave, lave, laver, &c.
Except esclave ; but both a's are short in esclavage.
- aite, ette, ede, and aide.* défaite, retraite, &c. sonnette, remède, laide, &c.
Except faite.
- cil, eille, oil, oile.* soleil, veille, and veiller ; poil, toile, voile, and voiler, &c.
- oible and oide.* foible, roide, &c. with their derivatives, foiblesse, roidir, &c.
- oine and oite.* avoine, pivoine, il boite, boiter, with deriv.
- ome and one.* homme, personne, colonne, &c.
Except atome, Dôme, Jérôme, Vendôme, prône, trône, and others wherein ô is circumflexed.
- ole, otte, oxe.* monopole, polyglotte, botte, cotte, paradoxe, &c.
Except pôle, côte, and others wherein ô is circumflexed.

Terminations. Words of the same terminations, with their exceptions.

ouble,ouple,ouille. double, couple, souple; rouille, la Trimouille, &c.

ourse and ousse. bourse, je tousse, &c.
Except pouce, and je pousse, &c.

ourpre,ourve, and ouvre. pourpre, couve, couvre, Louvre, as likewise in couver, couvrir, and their derivatives.

ougue,igue,ugue,uge. fougue, figue, iugue, déluge, refuge, &c.

ique, uque, uffe. domestique, perruque, tartuffe, &c.

TERMINATIONS whose PENULTIMA is long.

abre. cabre, sabre, délabre, &c. (a is long likewise in délabrer, and deriv.) Except cinabre.

are and arre. barbare, barre, gârre, &c.
Except égare, mare, fanfare, pare, répare, compare, and derivatives égarer, &c. N. B. These words are not excepted, because the a of the Penultima is short; but because it is sounded with the slender sound of a, though long.

ace,asse,ase,&aze. espace, grâce, tasse, base, gaze, &c.
Except besace, glace, coriace, bécasse, liasse, chasse and chasser; agace and agacer.

aine and éne. chaîne, entraîne, gêne, &c.
Except vaine and veine.

aille. bataille, raille, taille, vaille, &c.
Except médaille, and travaille, &c. from travailler.

ape and apre. rape, as also raper, &c. câpre, &c.
Except attrape, with its deriv. from attraper, and Satrape.

aindre,eindre,inde, contraindre, feinte, feindre, coq d'Inde, cylindre, einte. dre, &c.

aire, erre, oire. chaire, faire, terre, &c.

aïse,aïsse,est-ce,èse, bien-aïse, thèse, baise, baisse (from baiser and eze, oïse, oïsse. baisser, wherein ai is long too), qu'est-ce, l'Oïse, croisse, &c.

âtre and ôître. maître, connoître, cloître, &c.

aube, auce, ausse. daube, sauce, exauce, and exhausse, with derivatives.

auche, aude, ause. gauche, Claude, cause, &c.

Terminations.	Words of the same terminations, with their exceptions.
auge, aule, ôle.	sauge, gaule, drôle, &c.
aume, aune.	baume, jaune, with derivatives , embaumer, &c.
aure, ore, aute, autre, and ôtre.	centaure, aurore, haute, saute, apôtre, un autre, &c.
auve and auvre.	chauve, pauvre, &c.
êche and aîche.	bêche, fraîche, as also in bêcher. Except brèche, flèche, mèche, sèche.
ême.	crème, extrême, &c. but not in sème; and others without a circumflex.
enre and endre.	genre, entendre, défendre, &c.
êpe and épre.	guêpe, Vêpres, &c. Except lèpre, and Dieppe.
ête and être.	bête, prêtre, fenêtre, &c. but not in the terminations in ete, or ette, as sonnette.
éune.	jeûne (fast) but not without a circumflex, as jeune young.
euse and euze.	gueuse, heureuse, scrupuleuse, &c.
ympe and uimpe.	olympé, guimpe, &c.
imple and ymphe.	simple, nymphe, &c.
ingle and inte.	épingle, pinte, &c.
ire, uire, ivre.	lire, détruire, confire, vivre, suivre, &c.
ise and ize.	église, frise, dise, from dire, and friser , &c.
oindre, ointe.	joindre, pointe, &c.
oire, oivre.	boire, croire, poivre, &c.
ôme and aume.	dôme, royaume, baume, &c.
ose and osse.	repose, grosse, &c. Except bosse. o is also long in engrosser.
oule and oudre.	foule, coudre, moudre, &c. Except boule.
ourre.	il fourre, bourre, &c.
ouse oute, outre.	blouse, croûte, coûte, goûte, &c. Except doute, goutte, route, tonte.
ure and use.	coupure, foulure, muse, amuse, &c. but not u in amuser.

Moreover, first, the penultima is long in terminations made of two vowels, the latter whereof is e not sounded; as in armée, voie, joie, vue, rue, jolie, aimée, and all participles feminine.

2dly, The last syllable of words terminating in a consonant or diphthong, which is short in the singular, becomes long in the plural, by the addition of s or x; as sing. chef, fagot, lieu, trait, sac, &c. plur. chefs, fagots, lieux, traits, sacs, &c.

Sdly, a being a monosyllable, or the last syllable of a word, either absolutely, or with one or more consonants, is short and slender, so s be not the final consonant; as il a, sac, chat, animal, dard, magistrat, &c. but in the plural number, or with a final s, it is long and broad; as sacs, chats, magistrats, tu vas, tu feras, un bas.

Except les arts, darts, regards, renards, and the monosyllable bras in the singular, with je bats, which are short.

So much concerning the termination of words, considered with respect to prosody. As to the quantity that syllables bear in the middle of words, it may be said in general, that they are all short; as abus, abréger, babil, babiller, catcher, deviner, flatter, hostie, plaidier, juste, loger, peler, docile, frapper, couper, fánfaron, cousin, douter, peste, quitter, triste, voisiner, &c. Except those which consist of nasal vowels; as entrer, chambranle, branler, montrer, instruire, tremblant, trompons, tomber, &c.

a is also long and broad in the middle of words before a double r, or single r followed by e not sounded; as barreau, bigarreau, parrain, &c. as likewise before the termination tion or ssion, as in nation, création, passion, &c.

a is short and slender in Paris (the name of the capital of France), and long and broad in Pâris (a man's name).—It is short and slender in Madrid, and long and broad in Cadiz and Calais.

Most of the aforesaid observations would be needless, if the long vowels were always marked with a circumflex; which is the true, and ought to be the only, use of that accent, as will be proved in the following section.

SECTION V.

Of the several Marks used in writing French.

THESE marks are of six sorts: the Elision, Hyphen, Cedilla, Dialysis or Diaeresis, Accents, Capital Letters, and Stops

ELISION is the cutting off of a final vowel before a word beginning with a vowel, or h mute; and the vowel thus cut off is supplied by a comma, called Apostrophe, and set above the empty place, thus (').

These three vowels, a, e, i, suffer elision in French.

a and e are çut off in la and le, whether articles or pronouns ; in all monosyllables, as je, me, se, te, de, ce, ne, que ; and the conjunctions composed of que, as jusque, parceque, puisque, &c. and i in the conjunction si if, before il and ils only.

Thus we write

l'âme,	} instead of	la âme,	the soul
l'héroïne,		la héroïne,	the heroine
l'homme,		le homme,	the man.
l'esprit,		le esprit,	mind.
J'aime,		je aime,	I love.
je l'estime,		je le or la estime,	I esteem him or her.
m'entendez-vous,		me entendez vous,	do you understand me?
s'en aller,		se en aller,	to go away.
c'est fait,		ce est fait,	it is done or over.
l'âge d'or,		le âge de or,	the golden age.
n'allez pas,		ne allez pas,	do not go.
qu'a-t-il dit,		que a-t-il dit,	what did he say?
jusqu'au soir,		jusque au soir,	till night.
quoiqu'il dise,		quoique il dise,	altho' he says.
puisqu'il sait,		puisque il sait,	since he knows.
lorsqu'il vit,	lorsque il vit,	when he saw.
s'il vient,	si il vient,	if he comes.
s'ils veulent,	si ils veulent,	if they please.

But when si coming after & (& si) signifies yet, i is not contracted with the next vowel ; as il le sait, & si il n'en dit rien, he knows it, yet he says nothing of it.—We also write and say m'amie and m'amour (love), for ma, or rather mon amie, mon amour, and quelqu'un for quelque un.

There are two cases wherein le and la and ce don't suffer elision .

1st, The articles le and la and the pronoun demonstrative ce before onze and onzième, and oui yes. Thus we spell and pronounce le onze du mois the eleventh of the month, il est le onzième, elle est la onzième, he or she is the eleventh, le oui qu'il prononça the yes which he spoke, ce oui-là lui a couté cher that yes has cost him dear : but it is only le and la and ce which suffer no elision before these two words ; for all the other monosyllables do. Thus we spell and pronounce je n'en ai qu'onze, and not que onze, I have got but eleven, je dis qu'oui, and not que oui, I say yes.

Observe moreover, concerning onze and oui, that the final consonant of the particles coming before these two words, is not articulated as it is before any other word beginning with a vowel.

Therefore pronounce without joining s, les onze mille vierges, un oui, des oui; not lè zonze, &c. un noui, de zoui.

2dly, le and la being pronouns governed of an imperative, do not suffer elision, unless they are followed by either of these two other pronouns en and y; as Portez le au logis carry him or it home (tho' we pronounce portél au logis); Máriez-la au plutót marry her as soon as possible. But we write and pronounce Tirez l'en au plutót get him, her, or it, from thence as fast as you can; Laisser l'y aller let him or her go thither.

HYPHEN is a short line across, marked thus (-), and used, 1st, to join pronouns expressing the subject with their verbs, especially in interrogations; as likewise the particles en and y, and other conjunctive pronouns, with an imperative: as que dit-elle what does she say? irons-nous shall we go? vient-il does he come? vas-y go thither, prends-en take some, sauvons-nous let us take to our heels, allons-nous-en let us go away, donnez-les-lui give them to him.

N. B. When the verb ends in a or e, the expletive t ought to be inserted between two Hyphens, between the verb and pronoun subjective or the particle on, in order to soften the pronunciation; as parla-t-elle did she speak? va-t-on do they go? mange-t-il does he eat?

2dly, To join the particles ci, là, çà, to the words which are attended by them, and from which they cannot be properly parted in speech; as likewise ce after être; as celui-ci this, celui-là that, cet-homme-ci this man, cette femme-là that woman, demeurez-là stay there, là-haut above, là-bas below, venez-çà come hither, est-ce-là le livre is that the book? sont-ce-là vos gens are these your servants?

3dly, To join together the parts of a compound word: as porte-manteau portmanteau, arc-en-ciel rainbow, c'est-à-dire that is to say.

4thly, At the end of a line, to denote that a word is parted which could not be writ entirely in the line, and that the remain der of it is at the beginning of the next line ; as in this word présentement presently. But note, that whenever a word is thus parted, the part which begins the next line must always begin with a consonant.

CEDILLA is a short curve line, or a comma, put under c before a, o, u, to divest it of the articulation of k, and give it the hissing articulation of s, which it always has before e and i; as in menaça he threatened, leçon lesson, conçu conceived.

DIALYSIS } is two dots put over the last of the two vowels DIÆRESIS } that meet together in a word, to part them into two several syllables : as hai hated, makes two syllables ; whereas je hais I hate, makes but one. In Saül the king of Israel, a and ü make two syllables, and so distinguish it from Saul (Paul) wherein au makes but an improper diphthong.

e, i, u, are the only vowels on which the two dots are marked, custom having not as yet prevailed to put them over o in géomètre, and other such words wherein e and o make two distinct vowels, very differently pronounced from the same in geolier. It is therefore sufficient to mark the preceding e with an accent, to make it keep its proper sound, and at the same time part it from o.

It is moreover usual to put the two dots over e final, not sounded, in aigüë, ambigüë, cigüë, &c. or better upon the u, as aigüe, cigüe, to denote that the hard articulation of g falls upon u, as it does in aigüille a needle, and so distinguish it from that which gu has in figue, guide, guérir, guenon, &c. (See the letter g in the treatise on the pronunciation.) These cases excepted, never put the two dots over any vowel that makes but one and the same syllable with the foregoing vowel, as in jouer to play, avouer to own, &c. which some writers very viciously spell joüer, avoüer, as if these words were to be pronounced avo-u-er, jo-u-er, and not avoü-er, joü-er: whilst, on the contrary, others, in omitting, the two dots over the second syllable of aigüille, induce the reader to pronounce it as in anguille an eel.

ACCENT is a note put chiefly over our e's, to denote their several pronunciations ; as likewise over some words, to distinguish their nature and signification.

There are three sorts of accents ; Acute (´), Grave (`), and Circumflex (^).

The accent acute is put over all e's which our Grammarians have been pleased to call é masculine ; as in prémédité premeditated.

The accent grave over those called è open; as in très most, près near, dès from; and the last syllables of words ending in ès, as excès excess, après after, &c.

With what ground our Grammarians have distinguished our e's by these several appellations of é masculine, é feminine, é open, e shut, é French, and é Latin, I am not able to apprehend, and therefore have chosen to call them by that accent which distinguishes them. When two syllables made of e follow one another, without having any accent over them, the first is always to be pronounced grave, and the last is not sounded.

The nature of these following particles is distinguished by the accent grave, being both articles and adverbs, verbs, or prepositions, or conjunctions.

a,	has,	à,	at or to,
la,	the,	là,	there,
de la,	of or from the,	de là,	from thence,
des,	of or from the,	dès,	from,
ça,	come on,	çà,	hither,
ou,	or,	où,	where,

It is also usual to mark over with the accent grave these two particles, holà hold, and oui dà ay, ay.

The accent circumflex is used in words, over a syllable which has lost a vowel or an s of its own spelling, and the circumflex makes that syllable long; as âge age, bête beast, être to be, le nôtre ours, vû seen, &c. which were formerly spelt aage, beste, stre, le nostre, veu, &c.

The last syllable of the 3d pers. sing. of the preterite subj. is also marked over with a circumflex, to distinguish it from the same person of the pret. ind. qu'il aimât, parlât, fût, crût, entendît, vît, &c. of which s is cut off; but these syllables are not pronounced long.

Some other words take also the circumflex, to prevent one's mistaking their signification; as dû, from devoir to owe, to distinguish it from du of the; crû, from croître to grow, to distinguish it from cru believed; sûr sure, to distinguish it from sur upon: but this practice is not generally received.

The tone of words is not then the proper object of accents in our language. Their office is not to mark the raising or sinking of the voice on syllables: they were at first introduced only to ascertain the pronunciation of our e's. Our forefathers, surprised to see different sounds represented by the same sign, bethought themselves of remedying that disorder, by adopting the accents which the Greeks and the Latins had instituted, though for a different purpose. This practice, had it been carefully observed, would have effectually supplied the want of other signs : but it was no sooner established, than it was again almost entirely laid aside, through the negligence of Printers and Authors. It has however been insensibly re-established, and even perfected. A perpendicular accent* has moreover been introduced for some years, to mark the intermediate e, that e which has a middle sound between the sonorous e and that which is most sonorous : so that as these accents characterise our e's, so they are more essential to them than the dots over our i's, of which I know not the use.

And indeed our e is either guttural, or mute, or acute, or grave, or circumflex, or intermediate, or nasal. There can be no possibility of mistaking the e guttural and mute in reading, if the others are accented ; and a few observations will sufficiently enable us to distinguish the mute e from the guttural. The whole difficulty lies in being acquainted with the others, so as to pronounce them according to their powers : now the accents entirely remove this difficulty. The e which is called fermé is marked with an acute accent. The e called ouvert, is (according to the authors of these denominations) either simply open, or most open, or keeps a medium between these two sounds. If it is simply open it is marked with a grave accent, as in très, après, père, mère. If most open, with the circumflex, as in bête, grêle, même, pêche. And the intermediate e is marked with the perpendicular accent, as in règle, fidèle, flèche, amène. As this same accent serves likewise to distinguish, without confusion, the true nasal e, from that which has only the sound of nasal a, one can no longer mistake the pronunciation of the following words, bièn, rièn, soutièn, je vièns, il tiènt ; prudent, entièrement, orient, patient, &c. ger is not pronounced in léger, as in bèrger. As the termination eve is pronounced quite differently in these three words sève, Geneviève, Genève, so the accent determines their true pronunciation. The acute accent on the penultima of différent shows it to be an adnoun, and the grave in diffèrent to be a verb. The same rule holds good with respect to précédent adnoun, and prècèdent verb, and many other words, which cannot be distinguished in writing otherwise than by the accent. The grave and perpendicular accents show moreover, that the e following or preceding them is mute, as in amèrement, tellement. They indicate also, that in the words, fièl, manière, tièrs, muèt, &c. the vowel that precedes the e forms with it a proper diphthong, and not an improper one, as happens very frequently in the English.

* As custom has not authorised that perpendicular accent, we have laid it aside in this new edition ; particularly as it is not to be found in any book printed since the French Academy have published a new edition of their Dictionary (in 1762).

Custom has not yet authorised our affixing the acute accent to the last syllable of the infinitive and nouns ending in er, as parlér, dangér. It would certainly be more uniform to mark all the e's with the accent that determines their pronunciation: but after all, the omission of the accent on these occasions, where the eyes are not accustomed to see it, can produce no great inconvenience, if it is not omitted on the others. The true use and destination of the circumflex is to mark a long syllable: therefore it ought to be set over not only the long e's, but also over all the other long vowels; as in the words âme, île, abîme, côte, côté, les autres, nós, hûre, ils pûrent; as likewise over these improper diphthongs, chaîne, rèine, haîne, séize, je fais, whose pronunciation is thereby distinguished from the same syllables, when this improper diphthong is short, as in the following words, *laine, peine, une plaine, elle est pleine, fontaine, tréize, il a fait, c'est un fait.

To conclude; it is evident from the aforesaid observations, that the accents show the pronunciation of our vowels, and ought to be the most essential part of orthography. Their omission bewilders the reader: nay, I have strong reasons to believe that it is often owing to the ignorance of the writer. I myself have been sometimes at a loss how to read some words, which I never heard read or spoken, and have therefore applied to the French Academy, to be informed of their pronunciation. An accent over an e would have cleared the point.

Such is the use of our accents; from whence it appears, that accent in French is of a very different use than in English, wherein it denotes that the tone, or stress of the voice in pronouncing is upon the syllable over which it is placed, and therefore serves only to show the quantity of syllables. The French language has indeed its quantity: the length and shortness of syllables must be so carefully observed in pronouncing, that the mistaking a long vowel for a short one is enough, in some words, to change their signification; as aveuglement, which is a noun signifying blindness when the penultima is short, or (as the English phrase it) when the accent is over the last syllable but two; and an adverb signifying blindly, when e is long with an accent acute over it, or (according to the English) when the accent is over the last syllable

but one. Mr. Rollin observes, that the vowel e in these words, sévère severe, évêque bishop, repêché got out of water, and revêtir to put on, has three different sounds, and three quantities, of which perhaps no instance can be found in the Greek and Latin tongues; and it is by their accent, so different from the true French accent, that the people of the divers provinces in France are known. But notwithstanding what I have said of that quantity which syllables have in words, and the great help which I have laboured to give the learner to attain the harmony of the pronunciation, it is altogether impossible to become master of it, otherwise than by hearing such speak and read who have the true French accent, and are perfect masters of their language.

A late writer, who, some years ago, read Lectures on the English Language in the City, the design of which was, as far as I could apprehend, to convince his hearers and readers of this great and important point, namely, that the English, as well as other nations, spell otherwise than they pronounce; and who has been since labouring very hard to make the two Universities learn reading English; advances, in his Lectures on Elocution, that the French have no quantity, or, which is the same, that they make all their syllables long*. The contrary is so evident to any body who has the least tincture of French, that it is difficult to say which is the most amazing, the ignorance or assurance of the author, who treats of matters to which he is quite a stranger: for in those very lectures, all notions of Grammar and Oratory are confounded and mistaken. The French Language abounds in Dactyles, Iambes, Troches, Anapests, and Choriambes. The Spondees are few in comparison of the other metres, the variety of which makes it a most harmonious language. And notwithstanding its nasal sounds, and guttural e, which, though a little grating to the ear, an able Poet and Musician can nevertheless use to advantage, it may claim the preference of all modern languages, without excepting even the Italian. But this same writer has, by an extraordinary effort of reason, found out that England never could have been, or continue to be, a flourishing nation without a revelation*. Risum teneatis? A true Comedian indeed!

* The best way of seeing clearly the difference between the genius of the French tongue and ours in this respect, will be to sound a number of words immediately borrowed from them, and see in what the diversity of pronunciation consists. Such as ābāndōn, ābandōn; cōmbāt, cōm'bāt; collēge, collēge; cōm'mun, commōn; cōmpāgnōn, compan'ion; Eūrōpe, Eūrōpe; obstacle, ob'stācle; sōlide, solid; Dōcteūr, Doct'or; faveur, fāvoūr; hōnneūr, hon'oūr; &c. in most of which words the syllables are all long in the French, and short in the English, as the accents are placed on the vowels in the French, and on the consonants in the English. This it is which makes most of their words appear to an English ear to have as many accents as syllables, by obliging them to give an equal stress to them. A Course of Lectures on Elocution, Lect. 3d, on Accent.

CAPITALS OF GREAT LETTERS are used,

1st, In the beginning of a sentence in prose, and every line or verse in poetry.

2dly, All Christian and proper names of persons, places, ships, rivers, arts, sciences, dignities, titles of honour and professions; as also adnouns derived from them, begin with the great letter; as George Roi George Rex, un Mathématicien Anglois an English Mathematician, un Tailleur François a French Taylor.

3dly, Such nouns in a sentence that bear some considerable stress of the author's sense upon it, to make it the more remarkable and conspicuous. The introduction to this work contains several examples of such words. Sometimes the Italic letters are used for that purpose: tho' these are particularly appropriated to distinguish the words and sentences cited as examples of what is advanced. Those cases excepted, do not begin with a capital any common noun, as was most generally, and abusively too, done in English some years ago. At present the other extreme is prevailing, and every noun is printed in a small letter, even to the very names of countries and professions: yet is it not as absurd to write king and god with a small k or g, as bread and beer with a capital B? The writing the initials of the nouns mentioned in the second paragraph with a small letter, or those of appellatives with a capital, is nothing less than entirely disfiguring our writings, whether in manuscript or from the press, and totally abolishing that distinction which different characters should preserve.

* If ever a divine revelation was necessary to man, it was more particularly so to the British nation, than to any other upon earth: it was impossible without such a revelation, we should ever be, or continue to be, a great and flourishing people: and the system now nominally established amongst us as the revealed will of God, were it really believed to be such universally, and accordingly practised, would raise us above all other nations that either do, or ever did, exist upon earth, and preserve us unalterably such to the end of time, provided that system continued to retain its due influence. British Education, Book I. Chap. XIV.

This system was not only calculated in the most exact manner for all the purposes of society in general, but peculiarly adapted to the particular circumstances of this country above all others. Ibidem.

STOPS are of six sorts, whose names and shapes are thus :

une virgule	,	a comma	,
un point-virgule	;	a semicolon	;
deux points	:	a colon	:
un point	.	a period or full stop	.
un point d'interrogation	?	a note of interrogation	?
un point d'admiration	!	a note of admiration	!

The use of these stops, which the French call Punctuation, seems pretty arbitrary, and to differ not only according to the genius of languages, but also according to the style of authors; yet as they are necessary to avoid obscurity, and prevent misconstructions, and therefore for the better understanding of what we write and read, here follows the use which the generality of the learned make of them; which use is itself grounded upon reason.

A comma is used to distinguish the several parts of a sentence, and give the reader a proper time for breathing; as likewise to distinguish, in enumerations, the things that are enumerated, whether they be of the same or of a different kind: as,

Si tant de gens se plaisent à lire des bagatelles, c'est peut-être que leur esprit ayant peu de force, ils aiment les choses aisées à comprendre.

Les neuf parties du discours sont le nom, l'adnom, le pronom, le nombre, le verbe, l'adverbe, la préposition, la conjonction, & la particule.

On ne devient point savant, que l'on n'étudie constamment, méthodiquement, & avec application.

If so many people take a pleasure in reading trifles, it is perhaps because, being of a little genius, they like things easy to understand.

The nine parts of speech are these; noun, adnoun, pronoun, number, verb, adverb, preposition, conjunction, and particle.

One cannot get learning without studying steadily, methodically, and with application.

A semicolon is used likewise to distinguish a part of a sentence of a pretty good length, but in such a manner, that the remaining part of the sentence is not necessary to make a complete sense, which is perfect at the semicolon: as,

Le siècle d'Auguste a tellement été celui des excellens Poètes, qu'ils ont servi de modèles à tous les autres; cependant il n'a point produit de Poètes tragiques.

The Augustan Age has in such a manner been that of excellent Poets, that they have served as models to all others; yet it has produced no tragic writers.

A colon marks a sense that seems to be complete, but so that something may still be added to it. The colon and semicolon may sometimes indeed be used promiscuously; but when the sentence is tolerably long, or the period composed of four or five sentences, one must observe to make the pauses in the order of the aforesaid stops; finishing by the full stop, when the sense of the sentence is quite out. More examples would be needless.

A note of interrogation is used when a question is asked; as, Quelle heure est-il? What o'clock is it?

A note of admiration is used when we express our wonder or admiration of something; as, O temps! O mœurs! O times! O manners!

There are besides some other figures in writing: as,

PARENTHESIS, which is a distinct sentence interposed in the main sentence within these two figures (), which being left out, the sense of the sentence is entire. If the occasional sentence is a short one, it is not necessary to use the two aforesaid figures, but only to inclose it in two commas. But the parenthesis is of no use in French, because no long occasional sentence is suffered in the style.

INDEX ☞, the fore-finger pointing, signifies that passage to be very remarkable against which it is placed.

OBELISK (‡) and ASTERISK (*) are used to refer the reader to some remark in the margin, or at the foot of the page. And several stars set together  signify that there is something wanting, defective, or immodest in that passage of the author. In dictionaries, Obelisk commonly denotes a word to be obsolete, or little used.

QUOTATION (“) or a double comma turned, is put at the beginning and end of such lines as are quoted out of another author in his own words.

SECTION or Division (§) is used in subdividing a chapter or book into lesser parts.

PARAGRAPH (¶) is the part of a section or chapter, comprehending several sentences under one head or subject.

CARET (^) is placed underneath a line between two words, to denote that some letter or syllable, or word, has, by inadvertence, been left out in writing or printing. Several points , or a dash —, denotes a reticence, or a sense that is imperfect.

PART II.

Of the PARTS of SPEECH.

THE French Tongue may be considered as composed of, and every word of which is comprehended under, one of the nine parts of speech following :

Noun,	}	{	Adverb,
Adnoun,			Preposition,
Pronoun,			Conjunction,
Number,			Particle.
Verb,

Of which the first five receive several variations in their terminations, and are therefore called declinable: the four last receive no such variations (except the Article), and are therefore called indeclinable.

CHAP I.

Of NOUNS.

THE Noun is a part of speech which serves to name every thing that can be considered, as subsisting either in nature, or in our ideas or imagination, which one can possibly speak of.— Nouns are also called substantives; as un homme a man, une femme a woman, une maison a house, un arbre a tree, &c.

Three things called Accidents are to be considered in nouns; the NUMBER, the GENDER, and the extent of the sense in which they are taken, denoted by the ARTICLE.

Nouns have two numbers, the singular and the plural.

A noun is said to be of the singular number, when it denotes one thing only; as un homme a man, une femme a woman, &c. It is said to be of the plural, when it denotes two or more things at once; as des hommes men, des femmes women, &c.

SECTION I.

Of the formation of the PLURAL number of Nouns.

Generally speaking, in French as in English, the plural number differs from the singular only by the addition of s: as,

Sing. Numb.		Plur. Numb.
un homme,	a man,	des hommes,	men,
une maison,	a house,	des maisons,	houses,
un jour,	a day,	des jours,	days,
une dé,	a thimble.	des dés,	thimbles.

Nouns ending their singular in s, or x, have their plural alike, without any alteration or addition: as,

Sing. Numb.		Plur. Numb.
le fils,	the son,	les fils,	the sons,
une voix,	a voice,	des voix,	voices,
un nez,	a nose.	deux nez,	two noses.

Nouns ending in é acute might formerly take indifferently for their plural either s or z, leaving out the accent of the singular, as bonté kindness, bontés or bontez kindnesses; which sort of spelling some authors keep to still. But the best writers keep to the general rule of forming the plural by adding s to the singular of nouns in é, reserving ez for the second person plural of verbs only; as vous aimez ye or you love.

In nouns ending in nt, it is become usual to leave out the final t in the plural before s; as enfant child, enfants children, instead of enfants; prudent prudent, prudens, &c. but monosyllables retain it; as des ponts bridges, des dents teeth, from pont and dent; Except cent and tout, as deux cens hommes two hundred men, tous les ans every year.

Exceptions.

1st, Nouns ending in au or eau, eu or œu, and ieu, take x instead of s for their plural: as,

Sing.	{	chapeau,	hat,	{	Plur.	chapeaux,	hats,
		jeu,	game,			jeux,	games,
		lieu,	place,			lieux,	places.

Except the adnoun bleu blue, which keeps the s, and makes bleus.

Nouns in ou take also x instead of s: as un chou a cabbage, des choux cabbages, le genou the knee, les genoux the knees, &c. Except trou hole, cou neck, clou nail, filou pickpocket, fou fool, matou a large cat, mou soft, hibou owl, licou halter, and loup-garou a were-wolf, which follow the general rule, and make trous, clous, matous, &c.

2dly, Nouns ending in al and ail, change al and ail into aux for their plural: as,

Sing.	{	animal, a living creature,	{	Plur.	animaux, living creatures,
		travail, work,			travaux, works.
ail garlic, makes aulx , though very seldom used

Nevertheless these six, bal a ball or masquerade, cal (or rather calus) a hard skin, carnaval carnival, pal pale (a term of heraldry), régal a noble treat, bocal a kind of vessel or bottle, follow the general rule, and make in their plural bals, locals, cals, carnivals, pals, régals: as also proper names in al; as deux Juvenals two Juvenals, trois Martials three Martials.

The following nouns in ail follow also the general rule:

attirail ,	train.	éventail ,	fan.	portail ,	front-gate of a
camail ,	a sort of priest-	épouvantail ,	scarecrow.		church.
dress.		gouvernail ,	helm.	sérail ,	seraglio,
détail ,	particulars.	mail ,	mall.

These two, bercail sheepfold, and poitrail the breast of a horse, have no plural. — Bétail cattle, is a noun of multitude singular without a plural; as bestiaux, a noun plural of the same signification without singular.

These following adnouns in al have no plural in use for the masculine:

austral ,	southern.	frugal ,	frugal.	nuptial ,	nuptial.
boréal ,	northern.	joyial ,	joyial.	pastoral ,	pastoral.
claustral ,	claustral.	lustral ,	lustral.	pascal ,	paschal.
conjugal ,	conjugal.	littéral ,	literal.	total ,	total.
diamétral ,	diametral.	matinal ,	early.	trivial ,	trivial.
fatal ,	fatal.	nasal ,	nasal.	vénal ,	venal.
filial ,	filial.	natal ,	native.	spécial ,	special.
final ,	final.	naval ,	naval.	libéral ,	liberal.

Except that we say les arts libéraux liberal arts, and des cierges pascals (large wax-tapers burnt in churches at Easter among the Roman Catholics).—Neither is martial warlike, used at all in the plural.

We do say des armées navales sea-armaments: but instead of combats navals, or batailles navales, we say des combats sur mer.—We say les pseauxmes pénitentiaux the penitential psalms; but not un pseauxme pénitentiel or pénitentiel, but un des pseauxmes pénitentiaux, one of the penitential psalms, that adnoun being not used in the singular.

3dly, ciel, heaven, }
œil, eye, } make { *cieux, heavens, aïeul, grandfather, } in the { yeux, eyes, gentil-homme, one nobly } plural { aïeux, grandfathers, descended (l is liquid), } { gentils-hommes, nobly descended (l is silent).

* However, we say, in painting, le ciel, les ciels; but we mean only the air, the clouds, not the skies or heavens.

Loy and loix, as also Roy and Roix, are quite obsolete: we now-a-days spell loi a law, and Roi a king, and their plural lois and Rois are regular.

When a compound noun is formed of a noun and adnoun, both take the mark of the plural. Thus we say, un arc-boutant, a buttress; des arcs-boutans, buttresses.

un cerf-volant, a paper-kite; des cerfs-volans, paper-kites.
des bouts-rimés, rhymes of verses given to fill up.
les gardes Françaises, the French guards.

When a compound noun is formed of a preposition and a noun, or of a verb and a noun, the noun only takes the mark of the plural. Thus we say, un avant-coureur, a fore-runner; des avant-coureurs, fore-runners.

un entre-sol, an enter-sole; des entre-sols, enter-soles.
un abat-jour, a sky-light; des abat-jours, sky-lights.
un cure-dent, a tooth-picker; des cure-dents, tooth-pickers.
un tourne-broche, a jack; des tourne-broches, jacks.
un garde-fou, a rail; des garde-fous, rails.

When a compound noun is formed of two nouns united by a preposition, the first only must take the mark of the plural. Thus we say, un œil-de-bœuf, an oval window; des œils-de-bœuf, oval windows.

un ciel-de-lit, a tester; des ciels-de-lit, testers.
un jet-d'eau, a water-spout; des jets-d'eau, water-spouts.
un chef-d'œuvre, a master-piece; des chefs-d'œuvre, master-pieces.
un cul-de-lampe, a tail-piece; des culs-de-lampe, tail-pieces.
un arc-en-ciel, a rainbow; des arcs-en-ciel, rainbows.

¶ I cannot help mentioning a gross mistake that has crept into the French Academy's Dictionary, and misled some modern Grammarians, who write des chefs d'œuvres, des arc-en-ciels, des ciels-de-lits; which implies contradiction, and even nonsense. Can the mark of the plural be affixed to a thing which is not presented as numerable?

Nouns compounded of the pronoun mon, ma, change mon, ma, into mes in the plural, besides the characteristic final letter of that number; as,

Sing.	{	monsieur ,	master,	Plur.	{	messieurs ,	gentlemen.
		madame ,	madam,			mesdames ,	ladies.
		monseigneur ,	my lord,			messeigneurs ,	my lords.
		mademoiselle ,	miss,			mesdemoiselles ,	ladies.

In all languages several nouns have no plural; such are,

1st, Nouns of virtues and vices; as, la charité charity, la haine hatred, la foi faith, l'orgueil pride, &c. so far only as they express habits; for when they express acts, they are used in the plural: as faire des charités to give alms.

2dly, Nouns of metals; as de l'or gold, du cuivre copper, du plomb lead, &c. but in another sense we say des plombs leaden vessels, des fers fetters.

3dly, These following:

absinthe ,	wormwood.	courroux ,	wrath.	le toucher ,	feeling.
artillerie ,	artillery.	Eucharistie ,	Lord's Supper.	repos ,	rest.
attail ,	implements.	Extrême onction *		naturel ,	nature.
bonheur ,	happiness.	faim ,	hunger.	noblesse ,	nobility.
colère ,	anger.	fiel ,	gall.	pauvreté ,	poverty.
gloire ,	glory.	fumée ,	smoke.	soif ,	thirst.
honte ,	shame.	disette ,	scarcity.	sang ,	blood.
ieunesse ,	youth.	fuite ,	flight.	salut ,	salvation.
lait ,	milk.	enfance ,	infancy.	sommeil ,	sleep.
mollesse ,	effeminacy.	la vue ,	the sight.	total ,	whole.
le prochain ,	our neighbour.	l'ouïe ,	hearing.	vieillesse ,	old age.
réputation ,	reputation.	l'odorat ,	smelling.	virilité ,	manhood.
renommée ,	fame.	le goût ,	the taste.	miel ,	honey.

* One of the seven sacraments of the church of Rome.

As also infinitives and adjectives used substantively; as le boire & le manger eating and drinking, l'utile & l'agréable profit and pleasure.

4thly, Nouns of number have no plural in French; or rather, though they are plural by their nature, except un, yet they do not take the final s which characterises that number: as trois deux three twos, deux quatre two fours, quatre six, four sixes, dix mille ten thousand, &c. Except vingt, cent, and million; as six vingts hommes six score men, deux cens écus two hundred crowns, &c.—oui and non used substantively, have no plural neither; as, je ne me soucie ni de vos oui ni de vos non, I care neither for your yea's nor your no's.

Proper names have no plural, unless they are used metaphorically.

Thus we say, les deux Corneille, les Turenne, les Lamoignon, &c. but we say, ils sont les Césars & les Alexandres de leur siècle, they are the Césars and Alexanders of their age.

The following nouns have only the plural in use :

Alpes,	Alps.	délices,	delight.	matériaux,	materials.
annales,	annals.	dépens,	cost.	* matines,	matins.
ancêtres,	ancestors.	étrivières,	the king's evil.	mœurs,	manners.
aïeux,	forefathers.	entraves,	shackles.	mouchettes,	snuffers.
aguets (être aux),	to be upon the watch.	entrailles,	entrails.	munitions,	ammuni-
arrérages,	arrears.	entrefaites,	transactions.	tions †.
assises,	assises.	épousailles,	soundly lashing.	nippes,	goods, things.
atours,	apparel.	éponsails,	espousals.	* nones,	the nones.
avives vives (in horses, a disease).		fiançailles,	betrothing.	obsèques,	obsequies.
		funérailles,	funerals.	pleurs,	tears.
béatilles,	dainties.	fonts,	the font for christening.	proches,	relations.
besicles,	spectacles.			prémices,	first-fruits.
broussailles,	briars.	frais,	expenses.	Pyénées,	Pyrenees.
Calendes,	Calends.	gallions,	galleons.	représailles,	reprisals.
catacombes,	catacombs.	gens,	people.	rets,	a net.
ciseaux,	scissars.	hardes,	clothes.	rogations,	rogation-day.
* complies,	closing prayers of the day.	hémorrhoides,	piles.	stigmates,	prints, marks.
confins,	confines.	inmondices,	filth.	ténèbres,	darkness.
confitures,	sweet-meats.	* laudes,	morning-prayers.	* vêpres,	vespers.
décombres,	rubbish.	limites,	limits.	vergettes,	a brush.
		mânes,	the ghost of one deceased.	vivres,	victuals.

* Matines, laudes, nones, vêpres, and complies, are part of the divine service, called in the church of Rome the Canonical Hours.

† Except that we say du pain de munition, ammunition-bread.

The following nouns, merely Latin, are of both numbers :

des alleluia, des libera,	(church terms).	huit in-octavo,	eight octavo's.
des alibi,	(a law term).	cinq pater & cinq ave,	five pater-nosters
des alinea,	(new paragraphs).	des ave, des ave Maria.
des accessit,	(certificates).	des orémus,	collects
de petits item,	small articles.	des Te Deum,	Te Deum's.
des duo, des trio, des quatuor,		ses ergò,	his therefore's.
trois errata,	three errata's.	And des a-parte,	aside (what an actor
quatre duplicata,	four duplicata's.		speaks aside upon the stage).
des Acacia,	Acacias.		We likewise say,
des exeat,	(leave to go out).	des in-douze.	duodecimo, in twelves.
des fac-totum,	people who do all in a family.	des in-seize,	sixteens.
		des in dix-huit,	eigh.teens.
trois in-folio,	three folio's.	des in-vingt-quatre,	twenty-fours.
six in-quarto,	six quarto's.	des a, des b, des i,	a's, b's, i's, &c.

SECTION II.

Of the GENDER of Nouns.

Nouns are either of the masculine or of the feminine gender.

Nouns relating to males, or he's, are masculine; and those relating to females, or she's, are feminine: as,

Masc. Gend.

Fem. Gend.

un Dieu,	a God,	une Déese,	a Goddess,
un Roi,	a King,	une Reine,	a Queen,
le Jupiter de Phidias,	Phidias's	la Diane d'Ephèse,	the Diana
Jupiter,			of Ephesus,
un male,	a male, a cock, or a	une femelle,	a female, hen, or
buck,		doe,
un chien,	a dog,	une chienne,	a bitch,
un cheval,	a horse,	une jument,	a mare.

Except these two, gardes guards, and troupes troops, which are feminine, though they relate to men; as les gardes Françaises sont de bonnes troupes, the French guards are good troops. Except also tendron, which is masculine, though it relates to a girl; as un jeune tendron, a young lass.

Family names, common to both sexes, are masculine or feminine, according as they are said of a man or woman; as le savant Dacier, the learned Mr. Dacier, la savante Dacier, the learned Madam Dacier.

In other nouns the gender is known by their terminations.

Nouns of the following terminations are of the feminine gender.

1st, Nouns in tié and té; as une amitié a friendship, la santé health, &c.

Except of those in té these eight or nine :

un arrêté de compte,	a settled account.	un traité,	a treaty.
le côté,	the side.	du thé,	tea.
un été,	a summer.	le bénédicité,	(the first word of the pray-
un comté,	a committee.		er said by the Roman Catholics be-
un comté,	a county or earldom.		fore their meals.
un pâté,	a pye.

2dly, Nouns in ion; as une action an action, une passion a passion, &c.

Except these twenty-four :

un alérion,	an eaglet.	un horion,	a blow.
l'alcyon,	the halcyon.	un lampion,	a sort of lamp for illumina-
un bastion,	a bastion.		tions in rejoicing nights.
le bestion,	the head of a ship.	un million,	a million.
un camion,	a short pin.	le morion,	a sort of military punish-
un champion,	a champion.		ment.
le chorion,	the chorion.	un morpion,	a crab-louse.

les gallions,	the galleons.	un scorpion,	a scorpion.
gasion, (a low word),	throat.	le talion,	retaliation.

N. B. Crayon and rayon, which are masculine, do not fall under this rule 3dly, Nouns in zon and son, after a vowel or diphthong; as une saison a season, une prison a prison, &c. Except these eight:

le blason ,	heraldry.	un oison ,	a young goose.
un frison ,	an under-petticoat.	un peson ,	a steel-yard.
un gason ,	a green plot.	du poison ,	poison.
l'horizon ,	the horizon.	un tison ,	a brand.

N. B. Nouns in sson don't fall under this rule.

4thly, Nouns in eur, as also in eure: as une peur a fear, la chaleur heat, une heure, an hour, &c.

Except of the first these twelve:

un bonheur ,	good luck.	l'Equateur ,	the Equator.
un malheur ,	a misfortune.	l'honneur ,	honour.
le cœur ,	the heart.	un déshonneur ,	a dishonour.
un chœur ,	a choir or chorus.	le labour ,	the labour.
l'intérieur ,	the inward part.	le lecteur ,	the reader.
l'extérieur ,	the outside.	le faiseur (pron. feseur),	the maker.

And all other nouns in eur, derived from verbs, which change eur into euse for their feminine, or are only applicable to men; un docteur a doctor, un voleur, une voleuse, a thief, &c.

Except also pleurs tears, which is masculine.—Of nouns in eure, except these three, du beurre butter, le leurre a lure (for a hawk), and du furre straw.

5thly, Nouns ending in x: as la paix peace, une noix a walnut, de la chaux lime, &c.

Except these twelve:

du borax ,	borax.	le reflux ,	the ebb.
le choix ,	the choice.	un lynx ,	a lynx.
un crucifix ,	a crucifix.	le prix ,	the price.
le fait ,	the weight.	le Styx ,	the Stygian river.
du houx ,	holly.	du storax ,	a sweet smelling gum.
un phénix	a phoenix.	And the letter x .
le flux ,	the flowing.

6thly, The following nouns, which cannot be brought under a particular class of termination:

une brebis ,	a sheep,	de la glu ,	bird-lime,	a nuit ,	the night
une clé or clef ,	a key,	la gent ,	the race or	(but not minuit ,
de la chair ,	flesh,	nation*,		midnight †),
une cour ,	a court,	la hart d'un fagot ,	a	la loi ,	the law,
une cuiller ,	a spoon,	band for a faggot,		la soif ,	thirst,
une dent ,	a tooth,	une iris ,	a crocus,	une souris ,	a mouse,
une dot ,	a portion,	une part ,	a share,	une tour ,	a tower
de l'eau ,	water,	la peau ,	the skin,	(but not un tour
la faim ,	hunger,	une main ,	a hand,	a turn),
la fin ,	the end,	la merci ,	the mercy,	une tribu ,	a tribe,
une fois ,	a time,	la mer ,	the sea,	la vertu ,	virtue,
la foi ,	faith,	la mort ,	death,	une vis ,	a screw.
une forêt ,	a forest,	la nef ,	the body of a
une fourmi ,	an ant,	church,

* la gent is a burlesque sort of word, used only in poetry.

† la nuit passée, last night; il est minuit sonné, it has struck twelve (at night).

As to the other nouns ending in e not sounded, as there are as many of them of the masculine gender as of the feminine, and both in a very great number, I shall set down in the Appendix a list of all the nouns masculine the end in e not sounded, as also another of those which admit either gender, according to their several significations. One must only observe here, that the nouns of the following termination, with e not sounded, are of the feminine gender.

1st, Nouns ending in any vowel or diphthong before e not sounded : such as these terminations, ée, aie, ie and uie, oie and oye, oue and ue: as une armée an army, une plaie a wound, de la soie silk, la joie joy, une ortie a nettle, la pluie the rain, une roue a wheel, de la morue cod-fish, &c.

Except from nouns in ée these twenty :

l'Apogée,	Apogee.	le nymphée,	Nymphæum.
un caducée,	a caduceum.	le périgée,	perigee.
un colisée,	a collisæum.	le périnée,	the perinæum.
le coryphée,	the chief.	le Pyrée,	a celebrated haven of
l'Empyrée,	the empyrean heaven.	Athens.
les champs élysées,	the elysian fields.	les Pyrénées,	the Pyreneans.
le gynécée,	Gynæceum.	un spondée,	a spondee.
un hyménée,	marriage, wedlock.	un trochée,	a trochee.
le Lycée,	the Lyceum.	les testacées,	and les crustacées, testa-
un mausolée,	a mausoleum.	ceous and crustaceous fish.
le Musée,	the Museum.	un trophée,	a trophy,

And these twelve from those in ie, oie, and ue.

Aphélie,	Aphelion.	un pavin,	a nectarine
un génie,	a genius.	le périhélie,	perihelium.
un incendie,	a conflagration.	un parhélie,	(mock-sun).
le Messie,	Messiah.	le bain-marie,	balneum marie.
un menstrue,	a menstruum.	le foie,	the liver.
un parapluie,	an umbrella.	du pou de soie,	paduasoy.

2dly, Nouns ending in ance or anse, ence or ense ; as une balance a pair of scales, une anse an ear or handle (of a pot), la conscience conscience, une défense a defence, &c. Except le silence silence.

3dly, Nouns ending in aille, eille, and elle : as de la paille straw, une oreille an ear, une chandelle a candle, &c. Except un cure-oreille an ear picker, and un perce-oreille an ear-wig : but those in ail, eil, and el are masculine 4thly, All nouns ending in ace and asse: as de la glace ice, une pailleasse a straw-bed, &c.

5thly, Nouns ending in ile and ille, uille, uille, and euille, isse, and ise or ize: as une ville a city, une anguille an eel, une aiguille a needle, une feuille a leaf, de la réglisse liquorice, une église a church, &c.

Except these twelve from those in ile and ille:

un asyle,	an asylum, a sanctuary.	un domicile,	an abode.
le cadricille,	quadril.	l'évangile,	the gospel.
le chyle,	the chyle.	spadille forcé,	spadil forced.
un codicile,	a codicil.	un style,	a style.
codille,	codil.	un ustensile,	an utensil.
un crocodile,	a crocodile.	un vaudeville,	a ballad.

And these two from those in euille, du chèvre-feuille honey-suckle, and un porte-feuille a pocket-book.

6thly, Nouns ending in

igue, ougue, oure, ine, une, ure, ière, yre,	} as {	une brigue,	a cabal.	} Except from nouns in ure un bon ou mauvais augure, a good or bad omen; un mur- mure, murmur; du mercure, mercury; un parjure, per- jury; and les Colures, Co- luri.
		la fougue,	the fury.
		la bravoure,	valour.
		une cuisine,	a kitchen.
		la rancune,	grudge.
		une ordure,	filth.
une tabatière,	a snuff-box.
une lyre,	a lyre.

And from those in ire, le délire, delirium; un navire, a ship; un empire, an empire; du porphyre, porphyry.

Though the aforesaid observations upon the nouns feminine might be sufficient to know the gender of the other nouns; yet, for a further help in this matter, I shall also add the terminations of those in the masculine gender.

1st, All nouns in ail and al, eil and el; as un bail a lease, le carnaval the carnival, le soleil the sun, un autel an altar, &c. as also all nouns whose last syllable is a followed by one or many consonants whatever; as un a an a*, un sofa a sofa, un sac a sack, un art an art, un almanach an almanac, un plat a dish, &c. Except une part a share, and la hart the band of a faggot.

* The letters of the alphabet are masculine, except these seven consonants, f, h, l, m, n, r, s.

2dly, All nouns ending in the nasal an, under whatever combination of letters that sound may be considered, as under en, anc, ant, ang, ens, ent, ment, and tent: as un an a year, un enfant a child, un accent an accent, le temps the time, &c. Except une dent a tooth.

3dly, All nouns ending in ail, ueil, and euil; as un ail an eye, un deuil a mourning, un accueil, a reception, &c.

5thly, All nouns in eu and ieu; as un aveu, a confession; un lieu, a place, &c.

6thly, Nouns in au or eau; as un chapeau, a hat; un couteau, a knife, &c. Except de l'eau, water; and une peau, a skin.

7thly, Nouns whose last syllable is o, followed by any consonant; as de l'or, gold; un crok, a hook; un pot, a pot; le bord, the brim; un fort, a fort, &c. Except une dot, a portion; and la mort, death.

8thly, Nouns whose last syllable is i or ui, followed by any consonant; as un abi, a shelter; *un Lundi, one Monday; le lit, the bed; un ennui, a weariness; un puits, a well; du bruit, a noise, &c. Except une brebis, a sheep; une fourmi, an ant; la merci, mercy; la nuit, the night; une souris, a mouse; une vis, a screw.

* Nouns of days, months, and seasons, are masculine; as un beau Dimanche, a fine Sunday; Lundi dernier, last Monday; le mois prochain, the next month; un été sec & chaud, a dry and hot summer, &c. Except automne, which is of both genders, une automne froide & pluvieuse, a cold and rainy autumn. Êu. when nouns of months take mi before them, they are feminine, as la mi-juin, Midsummer; la mi-Août (mi-ou), the middle of August.

Nouns of holidays are feminine, la Toussaint, All-Saints; la Saint-Jean, Midsummer; la Saint-Martin, Martinmas, &c. except Noël and Pâques: Noël takes no article. See in the Appendix the observation concerning Pâque.

9thly, Nouns ending in ain, aim, in, ins, uin, oin, and ien; as un bain, a bath; du vin, wine; un béguin, a bigging; du foin, hay; du bien, wealth, &c. Except la main, the hand; la fin, the end; and la faim, hunger.

11thly, Nouns ending in sson, or çon, and all those of the nasal on, through all its combinations that have not i or s or z before on; as le poisson, the fish; un poinçon, a bodkin; un bâton, a stick; un bourgeon, a bud; du bouillon, broth, &c. Except of nouns in sson, la boisson, drinking; and la moisson, a harvest; and of the others, une chanson, a song; la façon, the making; une leçon, a lesson; la rançon, the ransom; which are feminine, as nouns in son.

12thly, Nouns whose last syllable terminates in u, or have the u of the last syllable followed by any consonant; as le but, the aim; un aqueduc, an aqueduct; le tribut, the tribute; du pus, matter out of a wound, &c. Except de la glu, birdlime; la vertu, virtue; and une tribu, a tribe.

Lastly, Nouns ending in age, uge, acle, ême, aume, ôme, isme, iste; as un héritage, an heritage; le déluge, the flood; un tabernacle, a tabernacle; le baptême, baptism; du baume, balm; un dôme, a cupola; le catéchisme, catechism; un antagoniste, an antagonist. Except these nine, une cage, a cage; une image, an image; une page, a page; la rage, the rage; une plage, a flat shore; de la crème, cream; la paume, the palm of the hand; une list, a list; une piste, a track.

Observe further, that nouns of countries, kingdoms, counties, and provinces, ending in e not sounded, are feminine; as l'Europe, Europe; la France, France; la Bretagne, Britain, &c. except this one, le Mexique, Mexico. The others are masculine; as le Danemark Denmark, le Portugal Portugal, le Chili Chili, le Poitou, &c. Those of cities, towns, and boroughs, most commonly follow the gender of their terminations; but in case of doubt, you need only add the word ville to them, and so make them feminine. Thus, instead of saying Londres est bien grand or grande, say Londres est une ville bien grande; which is the best manner of expression, even with respect to those nouns of cities whose gender (feminine) is certain; as la Rochelle est une belle ville, rather than la Rochelle est belle, Rochelle is a fine city; la Haye est un gros bourg ou un village bien peuplé, and not la Haye est grande, or bien peuplée, the Hague is a large or populous place.

Names of mountains are masculine: as le Caucase Caucasus, le Parnasse Parnassus, &c. Except les Alpes couvertes de neige, the Alps covered with snow.

Names of winds are masculine; as le Sud the South, le Nord the North, un Zéphyr a Zephyrus, &c. Except la Bise the North-east wind, and la Tremontane.

In poetry, Zéphire, a god, is spelt so, and goes without the article.

As to the names of rivers, they follow their termination; as le Rhin the Rhine, le Pô, le Nil the Nile, la Seine, la Tamise the Thames, la Moselle the Moselle: but as there are a good many of the masculine gender, tho' ending in e not sounded, as le Rhône, le Tibre, le Danube, &c. I have set in the Vocabulary the names of the most noted rivers; and besides, exact lists of animals, birds, fishes, &c. trees, plants, and flowers, whose names are mostly used.

Comté a county or earldom, and Duché a duchy, formerly used in both genders, are now masculine: but we say in the feminine la Franche Comté (the County of Burgundy), and une Vicomté a Viscounty, as likewise une Comté-Pairie, and une Duché-Pairie.

Épithalame epithalamium, is masculine; but épigramme an epigram, and thériaque treacle, are feminine.

Couple is feminine in the signification of number only; as une couple d'œufs a couple of eggs: but when it comprehends besides another accessory idea, as of union, &c. it is masculine; as un beau couple a fine couple (meaning two married people).

Amour love, and orgue organ, are masculine in the singular, and feminine in the plural: as,

Sing. { l'amour divin, the love of God. Plur. { de folles amours, foolish amours.
 { un bel orgue, a fine organ. { de belles orgues, fine organs.

But orgue is very seldom used in the singular; and amours, signifying cupids, are masculine; as les amours rians & badins la suivent par-tout, wanton cupids follow her every where.

}	anagramme , anagram,	hymne ,	hymn ,	} are masculine.
	énigme , an enigma,	dialecte ,	dialect ,
	épitaphe , an epitaph,	épisode ,	an episode,
	épithète , an epithet,
	équivoque , equivocation,
	horoscope , horoscope,			} are feminine.

Moreover, adjectives used substantively; nouns of number, ordinal, proportional, and distributive; infinitives, adverbs, and prepositions also, taken substantively, are masculine; as,

le rouge ,	red.	un cinq ,	a five.	le manger ,	eating.
le noir ,	black.	un cinquième ,	a fifth.	le devant ,	the fore-part.
le nécessaire ,	what is requi-	un dixième ,	a tenth.	le derrière ,	the hind-part,
site, &c.		le double ,	the double.	&c.
un deux ,	a two.	le triple ,	the treble.	le peu que je sais ,	the lit-
un quatre ,	a four.	le boire ,	drinking.	tle I know.

Except that we make antique feminine (une antique), statue or médaille being understood. We also say in mathematics, une courbe, a curve; une perpendiculaire, a perpendicular; une tangente, a tangent; ligne being likewise understood.

Nouns compound of a noun and a verb, are likewise masculine. Thus tho' oreille, noisette, broche, &c. are feminine, yet we say un cure-oreille, an ear-picker; un casse-noisette, a nut-cracker; un tourne-broche, a jack; un passe-velours, a velvet-flower. Except une garde-robe a wardrobe.

SECTION III.

Of the ARTICLE.

The noun performs divers offices in speech. Sometimes it expresses the subject of which something is spoken, and sometimes the object which particularises that which is said of the subject.

At other times, we consider in the noun the relation which one thing bears to another, or to an action: as le Roi aime le peuple, the king loves the people; le peuple aime le Roi, the people love the king; la sagesse du Roi, the king's wisdom; présenter un placet au Roi, to present a petition to the king; ressembler au Roi, to be like the king; un présent pour le Roi a present for the king; aller chez le Roi, to go to the king, &c.

Those different states or relations of the noun, those various respects in which it may be considered, are denoted in Latin by a variety of terminations in the noun, which they call cases. In French, as well as in English, they are denoted by the place which the noun has in the sentence, and by a particular sort of words called prepositions. The noun, considered as the subject, comes before verb, and after it, when considered as the object. The abovementioned examples, where the same nouns are used in different states, ought to make this plain, without any other illustration. Roi is subject in the first, and object in the second: on the contrary peuple is object in one and subject in the other. In the other examples, the noun is not used either as subject or object, but its other relations to the preceding noun or verb are denoted by the words immediately coming before it: things being always in relation to each other, either of union or separation, fitness or unfitness, quality, effect, cause, end, order, dependence, situation, &c.

Therefore there are no such things as cases and declensions in our languages, wherein the several states or relations of the noun are marked by the place which they keep in the sentence, and by prepositions. But as none of them denotes so many various relations as these two de and à, which are contracted with the article in two particular cases, though each of them remain the same in English, I will set down examples of the ways of considering the noun in French, with respect to its chief relations, for method's sake only, and to accustom the beginner to that contraction, which is a little puzzling at first.

The article is a particle established to specify the extent of the sense in which the noun is taken.

		Sing. Numb.			Plur. Numb.

First	} State	le,	la,	l'	les,	the.
Second		du,	de la,	de l'	des,	of the.
Third		au,	à la,	à l'	aux,	to the.

The article agrees with the noun in gender and number, the being in French le, for the masculine gender; la for the feminine, when the noun begins with a consonant or h aspirate; the letter l' only, with the elision, when it begins with a vowel or h mute; and les for the plural number, with all sorts of nouns.

The preposition de (in English of, from) and à (to) are contracted with the article, when the noun is masculine, and begins with a consonant or h aspirate; so that, instead of de le, we say du (for of the, from the), and instead of à le we say au (for to the), and likewise we say, with all plural nouns, des instead of de les, and aux instead of à les.

Therefore, to make the article agree with the noun, consider, 1°. Whether the noun is masculine or feminine. 2°. Whether it begins with a consonant or with a vowel: and if with h, whether that h is aspirate or mute. 3°. Whether or no the sense of the noun is limited. 4°. Whether, in the limited sense, the noun is attended with an adnoun, and which of the two comes first. 5°. Whether the noun is common or proper: proper names taking no article.

CHAP. II

Of ADNOUNS.

THE ADNOUN is a part of speech serving to express the qualities of things, or what they are.

They are called adnouns or adjectives, because they are as added to the nouns or substantives, which they are either joined with, or supposed in the sentence, to qualify the things which the others serve to name—as savant learned, beau and belle handsome, commode convenient, &c. which are qualities that may be considered in, and affirmed of, the nouns man, woman, house: as un homme savant a learned man, une belle femme a handsome woman, une maison commode a convenient house, &c.

The adnouns agree with the nouns in gender and number; and therefore it is of moment to know how to form their genders.

SECTION I.

Of the Formation of the Feminine Gender of Adnouns.

Adnouns ending in e not sounded, are of both genders; that is, the same for the masculine and feminine: as,

Masc. Gend.	Fem. Gend.
un honnête homme, an honest man.	une honnête femme, an honest woman.
un procédé indigne, unworthy proceeding.	une conduite indigne, unworthy way of behaving.

The others, generally speaking, only add e not sounded for their feminine gender; as,

Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
grand, great,	grande.	savant, learned,	savante.	rond, round,	ronde.

This rule never varies with respect to the adnouns that end with a vowel, and all participles: as,

Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
aisé, easy,	aisée.	aimé, loved,	aimée.	fait, done,	faite.
joli, pretty;	jolie.	perdu, lost,	perdue.	pris, taken,	prise.

Except however béni holy, and favori darling, which make bénite and favorite in their feminine.

Here follow rules for forming the feminine gender of the other adnouns, which all end their masculine with one of these consonants, c, f, l, n, t, or in eux and eur.

1st, Adnouns ending in eur and eux, change eur and eux into euse for the feminine: as,

Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
railleur, jeering,	railleuse.	heureux, happy,	heureuse.

Except these eleven, antérieur, foregoing, former; postérieur, hind, latter; citérieur, cterior; ultérieur, furthest; intérieur, inward; extérieur, outward; majeur, senior; mineur, junior; supérieur, superior; inférieur, inferior; and meilleur, better; which follow the general rule, and make antérieure, intérieure, &c.

Except also vieux, which makes vieille, from its old masculine vieil, still used before some substantives beginning with a vowel, or h not aspirate: as un vieil habit an old suit of clothes. We use it with homme only in this phrase of the Gospel, dépouiller le vicil homme to put off the old man; otherwise we express an old man by vieillard, as an old woman by the feminine of vieil, taken substantively, une vieille; that word being the feminine of vieux: as une vieille maison an old house.

2dly, Adnouns ending with c, which are only eight in number, form their feminine, the three first, in changing their final c into che, and the five others into que: as,

Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
blanc, white,	blanche.	public,	publique
franc, sincere,	franche.	Grec,	Grecque.
sec, dry,	sèche.	Turc,	Turque.
caduc, in decay,	caduque.	ammoniac,	ammoniaque.

3dly, Adnouns ending with f, form their feminine in changing their final f into ve: as,

neuf,	new ,	neuve.	vif,	quick,
			vive,	vive.

4thly, Of adnouns ending with l, those which have a or i before l follow the general rule; and the others which have e, o, u, or ei before l, double that final l before e; as does also gentil: as,

Masc.		Fem.	Masc.		Fem.
fatal,	fatal ,	fatale.	nul,	no man ,	nulle.
subtil,	subtle ,	subtile.	pareil,	alike ,	pareille.
cruel,	cruel ,	cruelle.	gentil*,	genteel ,	gentille.

* l is silent in gentil, and liquid in gentille.

mou, soft, } form their { mol, } and double { molle, fou, foolish, } feminine { fol, } also l before e, { folle, beau, fine, } of their old { bel, } making in { belle, nouveau, new, } masculine { nouvel; } their feminine { nouvelle; which old masculines are still used before nouns beginning with a vowel; as un fol entêtement a foolish infatuation, un bel esprit a wit, un nouvel amant a new lover, &c.—The masculine bel is not only retained in this phrase, cela est bel & bon that is very well, or very good, but also in the surname of some of the French kings, without being followed by a word beginning with a vowel; as Charles le Bel Charles the Fair, Philippe le Bel Philip the Fair, &c.

5thly, Of adnouns ending with n, those only double n in their feminine which have o before n, or end in ien; the others follow the general rule: as,

Masc.		Fem.	Masc.		Fem.
bon,	good ,	bonne.	divin,	divine ,	divine.
ancien,	ancient ,	ancienne.	plein,	full ,	pleine.

6thly, Of adnouns ending with t, those only double t in their feminine which have e or o before it (few only being excepted, such as secret, complet, dévoit); the others that have i or a, or an improper diphthong, or a consonant before t, follow the general rule; as,

Masc.		Fem.	Masc.		Fem.
net,	clean ,	nette.	ingrat,	ungrateful ,	ingrate.
sot,	foolish ,	sotte.	droit,	right ,	droite.
petit,	little ,	petite.	constant,	constant ,	constante.

These six following double their final s before e: the eleven others are not so regular:

Masc.	bas,	épais,	express,	gras,	gros,	las,
	low ,	thick ,	express ,	fat ,	big ,	tired ,
Fem.	basse.	épaisse.	expresse.	grasse.	grosse.	lasse.

Masc.		Fem.	Masc.		Fem.
bénin,	benign,	bénigne.	jaloux,	jealous,	jalouse.
malin,	malignant,	maligne.	nu,	naked,	nue.
ong,	long,	longue.	vert,	green,	verte.
doux,	sweet,	douce.	To which add these two partici-
frais,	cool, fresh,	fraîche.
roux,	reddish,	rousse.
cru,	raw,	crue.	absous	absolved,	absoute.
faux,	false,	fausse.	dissous,	dissolved,	dissoute.

SECTION II.

Of the Comparison of Adnouns.

As an adnoun expresses the quality of a thing, and, when compared with that of another, that quality may be found more or less such, or equal others, or exceed them all; hence arise what Grammarians call the three degrees of comparison, the positive, the comparative, and the superlative: which they should have rather called degrees of signification; since the positive is never used with comparison, and the signification of the adnoun is most times increased to the highest pitch, without any comparison at all. However,

The adnoun, in as much as it expresses only the quality of a thing, is called positive; as sage wise, beau handsome, méchant bad, &c.

The quality of a thing compared with another's, and affirmed to equal it, or exceed, or come short of it, is called comparative: which therefore is threefold; as aussi sage que lui as wise as he, plus beau qu'elle handsomer than she, moins méchant qu'eux less bad than they.

The quality of a thing affirmed in the highest degree is called superlative; which is either absolute, as très-sage most wise, fort beau very handsome, bien méchant very bad; or relative, as le plus sage, le plus beau, le plus méchant de tous, the wisest, the handsomest, the worst of all.

That comparison of adnouns, that is, the rising or lessening their signification, or denoting equality in the quality of things, is made in French by placing some of these particles before them, plus more, moins less, aussi, si, as, so, tant, autant (so much, so many, as much, as many), and mieux better, before participles: as aussi sage que lui, plus beau qu'elle, moins méchant qu'eux, mieux fait better made, il n'est pas si grand qu'elle, he is not so tall as she.

Elle n'a pas tant d'esprit que sa sœur, mais elle a autant de vivacité, & elle est aussi aimable. She has not so much wit as her sister, but she has as much liveliness, and is as amiable as she.

And for denoting the highest or lowest degree of the adnoun, we put one of the adverbs of excess before it, très most; bien, fort, very; infiniment, extrêmement, prodigieusement (extremely, vastly, mightily); or if there is relation, we put the article before the comparative adverbs, which we make agree in gender and number with the noun; as masc. le plus sage, fem. la plus sage, the wisest; masc. le mieux fait, fem. la mieux faite, the best made; masc. les moins mauvais, fem. les moins mauvaises, the least bad.

Three adnouns only, in French, denote by themselves the comparison; meilleur better, pire worse, and moindre less.

Meilleur is the comparative of bon good, whose relative superlative is formed by putting the article before its comparative; as,

Pos. bon good; Comp. meilleur better; Sup. le meilleur the best.

After the same manner, mauvais bad, has for its comparative pire worse; and for its superlative le pire the worst: and petit little, for its comparative moindre less; and for its superlative le moindre the least; though we also say,

petit,	plus petit,	} less,	le plus petit,	} the little,	or moindre,		or le moindre,
mauvais,	plus mauvais,	} worse,	le plus mauvais,	} the bad, or pire.			or le pire,
méchant,	plus méchant,	} more,	le plus méchant,	} the most wicked, or pire,			or le pire,

But we don't say bon, plus bon, le plus bon, instead of bon good, meilleur better, le meilleur the best.

Observe that the pronouns adjective have the same effect as the article in making the superlative degree; and mon meilleur ami is equal to le meilleur de mes amis the best of my friends.

Adverbs increase or decrease also in their signification; as très-sagement, very wisely; fort habilement very artfully; plus finement qu'on ne peut dire, more cunningly than can be said; le plus subtilement qu'on puisse imaginea, with the greatest subtlety one can imagine. And these three form their comparative and superlative irregularly.

Posit.		Comp.		Superl.
bien ,	well,	mieux ,	better,	le mieux ,	the best.
mal ,	ill,	pis , or } plus mal , }	worse,	{ le pis , or } { le plus mal , }	the worst.
peu ,	little,	moins ,	less,	le moins ,	the least.

bien denotes either the quality or the quantity: if it is used in the former sense, its comparative is mieux; if in the latter, it is plus; as bien fait well made, mieux fait better made; bien fatigué much tired, plus fatigué more tired.

These two adnouns, prochain and voisin, next, near, can be used only in the positive, and never in the comparative or superlative. They are supplied by the comp. and superl. of the other adnoun proche near, plus proche nearer, le plus proche the nearest, instead of plus prochain, le plus prochain, plus voisin, le plus voisin.—However, voisin may well take fort or trop before it: as nous sommes fort voisins we live very near one another, nos maisons sont trop voisines our houses are too near one another.

There are besides six other words of a superlative kind and signification, that end in issime: as strénissime most serene, éminentissime most eminent, révérendissime most reverend, illustrissime most illustrious, généralissime generalissimo, and savantissime most learned: this last is of the burlesque style.

CHAP. III.

Of PRONOUNS.

PRONOUNS are words which usually stand for the particular noun of a thing or person.

There are four sorts of Pronouns: the Personal, the Relative, the Demonstrative, and the Intermediate.

Of Pronouns Personal.

Pronouns Personal are divided into five orders or classes; 1st, those of the first person; 2dly, of the second; 3dly, of the third masculine; 4thly, the third feminine; 5thly, the third indeterminate.

Pronouns of the first Person.

State.	Sing. Numb.	I.	Plur. Numb.
1st.	Je, moi,	I.	Nous,	we.
2d.	de moi,	of me.	de nous,	of us.
3d.	à moi, moi, me,	to me.	à nous, nous,	to us.
4th.	me, moi,	me.	nous,	us

Pronouns of the second Person.

State.	Sing. Numb.		Plur. Numb.
1st.	Tu, toi,	thou.	Vous,	you.
2d.	de toi,	of thee.	de vous,	of you.
3d.	à toi, toi, te,	to thee.	à vous, vous,	to you.
4th.	te, toi,	thee.	vous,	you.

Pronouns of the third Person Masculine.

1st.	Il, lui,	he, it.	Ils, eux,	they.
2d.	de lui,	of him, of it.	d'eux,	of them.
3d.	à lui, lui,	to him, to it.	à eux, leur	to them.
4th.	le, lui,	him, it.	les, eux,	them.

Pronouns of the third Person Feminine.

1st.	Elle,	she, it.	Elles,	they.
2d.	d'elle,	of her, of it.	d'elles,	of them.
3d.	à elle, lui,	to her, to it.	à elles, leur,	to them.
4th.	la, elle,	her, it.	les, elles,	them.

Pronouns of the third Person Indeterminate.

1st.	On, soi,	oneself.	3d. St. à soi, se,	to oneself.
2d.	de soi,	of oneself.	4th. se, soi,	oneself.

Out of the pronouns personal are made some adnouns called Possessive, because they shew, that the thing spoken of belongs to the person or thing which they serve to denote. It is wrongfully they are reckoned a particular class of pronouns, since their office is not to stand for the name of a thing, but only to qualify it. These pronominal adnouns are of two sorts, absolute and relative.

Pronominal adnouns absolute, or rather possessive articles, always come before the nouns which they qualify, doing the office of the article. They are six in number, viz.

Sing. M. & F. Plur. M. & F.

1st. State.	{	mon, ma, mes,	my.	} 2d. State. de mon, de ma, de mes, of my.
		ton, ta, tes,	thy.		} 3d. à mon, à ma, à mes, to my.
		son, sa, ses, his, her, its.

Sing. M. & F. Plur. M. & F.

1st. State.	{	notre, nos, our.	} 2d. St. de notre, de nos, of our.
		votre, vos, your.		} 3d. St. à notre, à nos, to our.
		leur, leurs, their.

Pronominal adnouns relative, or rather possessive pronouns, are so called, because they, not being joined to their noun, suppose it either expressed before or understood, and are related to it. They are also six, which answer to each of the pronominal adnouns absolute, and take the article.

Stat. Sing. Masc. Fem. Plur. Masc. Fem.

2d. du mien de la mienne des miens, des miennes
of mine.
 3d. au mien,
 to mine, &c.

Masc. and Fem.

1st. { le nôtre, la nôtre, les nôtres, ours.
 { le vôtre, la vôtre, les vôtres, yours.
 { le leur, la leur, les leurs, theirs.

2d. du nôtre, de la nôtre, des nôtres.
 3d. au nôtre, à la nôtre,
 aux nôtres, &c.

Of Pronouns Relative.

Pronouns relative are used after nouns and pronouns personal, as part of their retinue; and to which they are so nearly related, that without them they have no signification.

There are four pronouns relative, qui, quel, quoi, and le: qui, quoi, and le, are for both genders and numbers, and take no article; but quel takes the article, and forms with it but a single word, viz. lequel, &c.

1st. State. qui who, what. quoi, que, what
 2d. de qui, dont, of whom, de quoi, dont, of what of that, whose.
 3d. qui, to whom, to that. à quoi, to what.
 4th. que, qui, whom, that. que, quoi, what.

Sing. Masc. Fem. Plur. Masc. Fem.

1st. lequel, laquelle; lesquels, lesquelles, which
 2d. duquel, de laquelle; desquels, desquelles, dont, of which, whose.
 3d. auquel, à laquelle; auxquels, auxquelles, to which.

1st. State. le, him, it.
 2d. en, of him, of her, of it, of them.
 3d. y, to him, to her, to it, to them.

These pronouns, (except le) are used for asking questions, to which add quel, another pronominal adnoun, which is never used without a noun or pronoun after it: as,

Quel est cet homme-là? Who is that man?
Quels sont-ils? Quelles sont elles? Who or what are they?

Sing. Masc. Fem. Plur. Masc. Fem.

1st. State. quel, quelle; quels, quelles, what.
 2d. de quel, de quelle; de quels, de quelles, of what.
 3d. à quel, à quelle; à quels, à quelles, to what

Of Pronouns Demonstrative, which are,

ce, cet, cette, ces. || ceci, cela. || celui, celle, ceux, celles. || celui-ci, celle-ci, ceux-ci, celles-ci. || celui-là, celle-là, ceux-là, celles-là. || ce que, ce qui.

These pronouns are called Demonstrative, because they denote more precisely, and, as it were, demonstrate either the nouns before which they come, or those they stand for; therefore they have no article, but with great propriety may be called demonstrative articles. The pronoun ce, from which the others are derived, and which is for that reason called Primitive, is used only before nouns masculine beginning with a consonant, or h aspirate: cet is used before nouns masculine beginning with a vowel or h not aspirate; cette before all nouns feminine; and ces before all nouns of the plural number, and for both genders.

States. Sing Masc.		Fem.		Plur. M. & F.

3d.	à ce, cet,	à cette, to this, that.		à ces, to these, those.
1st.	celui, he or that,	celle, she or that,	ceux, celles, they or those.
2d.	de celui, of him,	de celle, of her,	de ceux, de celles, of them.
3d.	à celui, to him,	à celle, to her,	à ceux, à celles, to them.

2d.	de ceci, of this, de cela, of that,		de ce qui, de ce que, of which, of that, &c.
3d.	à ceci, to this, à cela, to that,		à ce qui, à ce que, to which, to that, &c.

Of Pronouns Indeterminate.

These pronouns are called Indeterminate, because they denote and express their object in a general indeterminate manner. Besides on already mentioned, these pronouns are quelqu'un, quelqu'une; chacun, chacune; nul, nulle; pas un, pas une; aucun, aucune; quiconque, personne, l'un l'autre, l'un & l'autre, l'un ou l'autre, ni l'un ni l'autre, plusieurs, tout, and rien.

le Soixante & dixième,		the Seventieth. le Quatre-vingtième,		the Eightieth. le Quatre-vingt-dixième,		the Ninetieth. le Centième,		the Hundredth.
le Cent-cinquantième,		the Hundred and Fiftieth. le Deux-centième,		the two Hundredth
le Millième,		the Thousandth.

Collective Numbers denote a plurality of things expressed by a denomination of the singular number. Such are,

Un tercet,	a stanza of three verses. une tierce,	a tierce, a sequence of three cards
un tricon,	a prial or pair royal.

un quatrain,	a quatrain, a stanza of four verses. une quarte,	a quart, a fourth.
un sixain (pron. sizain),	a stanza of six verses, also six packs of cards.
un huitain,	a stanza of eight verses. une huitaine	se'nnight, eight days together.
un huitième,	the eighth part. une huitième,	a sequence of eight cards. une octave,	an octave, a stanza of eight verses, &c. une neuvaine,	a novena, a nine days devotion.
un neuvième,	the ninth part.
un dizain,	a stanza of ten verses. une dizaine,	ten, tithing.
un dixième,	the tenth part. une douzaine,	a dozen. une demi-douzaine,	half a dozen.
un quinzain,	(terms of tennis-court), fifteen all. une quinzaine,	a fortnight, fifteen things. une quinte,	a quint, fifth. une vingtaine,	a score, or twenty.
un vingtième,	a twentieth part. une trentaine,	thirty.
un trentain,	(terms of tennis-court), thirty all. une quarantaine,	forty, quarantain. une cinquantaine,	fifty. une soixantaine,	the number of sixty. une centaine,	an hundred.
un millier,	a thousand.
un million,	a million.
un milliar,	ten hundred thousand millions. une milliasse (a term of contempt, or of familiarity),	} thousands and thousands, a } vast number.

armée an army, peuple people, &c. are also collective nouns; but they differ from the numbers in this, that they indicate no quantum.

Distributive Numbers are those that express the parts of a totum or whole divided; as la moitié the half, le tiers, le quart, &c. the third or fourth part.

Multiplicative Numbers, also called Proportional, indicate an increase both of number and quantity; as le double double, le triple treble, le centuple an hundred fold.

CHAP. V.

Of VERBS.

THE VERB is a part of speech which serves to express that which is attributed to the subject, in denoting the Being or Condition of the things and persons spoken of, the Actions which they do, or the Impressions they receive.

Four sorts of verbs may be distinguished in French.

1st, The verb substantive, which declares what the subject is, and is always followed by an adnoun, that particularises what that subject is: as être riche, sage, savant, &c. to be rich, wise, learned, &c.

2dly, The verb active, which denotes the action or impression of the subject, and is attended by a noun which is the object of that action or impression; as aimer la vertu to love virtue, recevoir des lettres to receive letters.

3dly, The verb neuter, which is neither substantive nor active, tho' it often has the same signification; that is, it comprehends in itself the term of the action, impression, or condition, which it serves to denote, but without being followed by any noun, specifying still more that action; as agir to act, marcher to walk, obéir to obey, languir to languish; which signifies as much as faire quelque chose to do something, exercer l'obéissance to practise obedience, être languissant to be languishing.

4thly, The verb reflected, whose subject and object, the principle and term of the action, have a reflected relation to each other; and which governs no other noun, but that which it is governed by: as je m'ennuie I am weary, from s'ennuyer to be weary; vous vous plaignez you complain, from se plaindre to complain; il se blesse he hurts himself, from se blesser to hurt oneself. In the first instance it is I, who am both the principle and term of weariness; in the second it is you, who are the principle and term of complaint; in the third it is he, who hurts and is hurted.—Sometimes the preposition entre is put between the two pronouns and the verb, or the pronoun l'un l'autre after the verb, as this makes the relation quite reciprocal: as ils s'entretuent, they kill one another; ils se ruinent l'un l'autre, they ruin each other.

As to the verbs Passive and Impersonal, they are not particular sorts of verbs in French.

The verbs passive (so called, because they express not the action produced by the subject, but that which it suffers from, and is occasioned by a foreign cause acting upon it) are composed of the verb substantive to be, and a participle.

The verbs impersonal are only verbs neuter; so called from their being conjugated with the third person singular only; as il pleut it rains: whereas the four other sorts of verbs are also called personal, because they are conjugated with all the pronouns personal, both in the singular and plural number.

It is to be observed, that any verb active may become a reflected one, whenever the principle of the action acts upon itself; and therefore that many reflected verbs, as also impersonal, are so only grammatically, or arbitrarily, with respect to language, and not by their significations: as je me plains I complain, il faut one must, &c.

One must distinguish in verbs the Mood, the Tense, the Number, and the Person.

They call Moods the divers uses that are made of a verb, in using it either directly and positively, or indirectly and conditionally or in an indeterminate and unspecified manner.

In each verb there are four moods: the Infinitive, the Indicative, the Subjunctive, and the Imperative.

The Infinitive expresses the very action of the verb, but in an indefinite, indeterminate sense, without specifying any particular agent or time, and is the root of the tenses of the verb; as aimer to love, faire to do.

The Indicative shows, in a direct and positive manner, the divers tenses of the verb; that is, the particular times wherein any action may happen: as je fais I do, je fis I did, je ferai I shall or will do

The Subjunctive shows also divers tenses of the verb ; but indirectly and conditionally, always supposing another verb affirming directly (or in the indicative), which it follows and belongs to ; or after conjunctions (that shall be taken notice of in the Syntax), and by which it is governed ; as il faut que je fasse I must do, afin qu'il vienne that he may come.

The Imperative commands, desires, entreats, exnorts : as faites cela do that, qu'il parle let him speak.

Tenses are the periods of time, denoting when such actions of verbs are, were, or shall be done ; or impressions made ; or conditions any one is, was, or shall be under ; and properly are only three, Past, Present, and Future : tho' these are again subdivided, for a greater distinction, as will be seen in the tenses themselves.

Each tense has two numbers, the singular and the plural ; as j'aime I love, nous aimons we love : and each number three persons. The first is that who speaks, expressed by je I, for the sing. and nous we, for the plur. The second that is spoken to, expressed by tu thou, and vous you or ye. The third that is spoken of, expressed by il he, for the sing. masc. ils they, for the plur. elle she, for the sing. fem. elles they, for the plur. or on, or some noun ; which noun always demands the third person, and regulates the sing. or plur. of the verb, according to its own number.

Observe, that in French, as in English, the second pers. plur. (vous) is used in speaking to one single person : the second sing. (tu) being used (in prose), only either with familiarity, intimacy, and tenderness, or out of scorn ; in which two respects it is of great use ; but the following adnoun referring to vous, must be of the singular : as vous êtes sage & prudent, or belle & vertueuse, you are wise and prudent, or beautiful and virtuous.

In the Indicative mood there are ten tenses, five of which are simple, and five compound.

The Present.	}	{	The Compound of the Present.
The Imperfect.			The Compound of the Imperfect
The Preterite.			The Compound of the Preterite.
The Future.			The Compound of the Future.
The Conditional.			The Compound of the Conditional

The Subjunctive has four tenses, two whereof are likewise compound of the two first.

The Present.	}	{	The Compound of the Present.
The Preterite.			The Compound of the Preterite.

As there are in French ten sorts of verbs, that have divers terminations in their infinitive, so I shall divide the regular verbs into ten Conjugations ; and as those verbs form their compound tenses by the help of two others, called from thence Auxiliaries, so I shall begin with those Auxiliary verbs, and first with avoir, which serves itself to conjugate être, and even itself.

Observe, that to conjugate a verb, is to express all its natural forms, in going through all the inflexions and variations, which it can admit of in Speech ; that is, considering the action which it expresses, in all the different periods of time, wherein it may take place, and in the various divers subjects to which it may be applied. And here it may not be amiss to mention the necessity of having the Auxiliary verbs fixed in the memory to the utmost exactness ; since the compound tenses of all the verbs, and the expressing, what the Latins called the Passive verbs, so entirely depend upon them.

Sois, be, or be thou.qu'il soit, let him be.P. Soyons, let us be.soyez, be, or be ye.qu'ils soient, let them be.

It is not with the French Verbs as with the English ones. The English distinguish the moods and tenses of their verbs by these particles, do, did; shall, will; can, may; should, would, might, and let, prefixed to the word of the verb, which is the same throughout, except in the participles and preterites; whereas French verbs change their inflections and terminations, not only in every mood and tense, but even in every person; the different ways of expressing the action of the verb amounting to no less than ninety-four; which makes the conjugation of them pretty hard, though it is at the same time so important, that Foreigners cannot too much apply themselves to it. In order therefore to do it more effectually, I shall set down rules whereby the Learner may easily arrive at the exact and ready formation of the tenses of the verbs, and the persons of those tenses: which being once well considered and learnt, the conjugating of the verbs will be freed from that difficulty which otherwise it would be necessarily attended with.

Besides that, I have joined a table of all the conjugations, wherein one may see at one view how each tense simply is derived, and formed from its infinitive. I cannot too much recommend the Students to make themselves familiar with it, since tho' one could not lay down principles common to all verbs in the forming of their several tenses, those ten conjugations include an infallible way of conjugating above 3000 Regular Verbs: so that after knowing in what consists the difference of those called Irregular, which shall be also set in order, one will be thoroughly acquainted with the French verbs.

Before I lay down rules for the forming of the verbs, it is to be observed, that there will be none about the forming of the Participle, and Preterite and Present tenses: not that there can be no rules contrived for the forming of those tenses; but because the ten different conjugations would require twice ten different and particular rules; and the perusing of the following table, with ever so little attention, will sufficiently supply the want of such further rules. It will therefore be enough to take notice of all that is general to the regular verbs.

Rules for the Formation of the Tenses of the French Verbs.

1st Rule. In all verbs the Gerund ends in ant, the Imperfect in ois, the Future in rai, and the Conditional in rois.

2d R. The Imperfect is formed from the Gerund, by changing ant into ois: as,

Ger.	{ Parl-ant, speaking. }	Imperf.	{ Je parl-ois, I did speak. }
	{ Lis-ant, reading. }		{ Je lis-ois, I did read. }

3d R. The Future is formed from the Infinitive, by adding ai to the final r, or if it ends in an e mute, by changing that e into ai; as,

-nymit.	{ Parler, to speak. }	Future	{ Je parler-ai, I shall speak. }
	{ Lire, to read. }		{ Je lir-ai, I shall read. }

4th R. The Conditional is likewise formed from the Infinitive, by adding ois to the final r, or changing the final e mute into ois: as,

Infinit.	{ Parler, to speak. }	Condition.	{ Je parler-ois, I would speak }
	{ Lire, to read. }		{ Je lir-ois, I would read. }

Exceptions.

1st The verb faire to do, changes ai into e mute in its future and conditional tenses. Thus spell and read je ferai I shall do, je ferois I would do. In its gerund, present, and imperfect tenses, though you spell faisant doing, nous faisons we do, je faisais I did; you pronounce all these words as if they were written with fe instead of fai.

2dly. Verbs ending in enir, as tenir to hold, change enir into iendrai and iendrois, for their future and conditional; je tiendrai I will hold, je tiendrois I would hold, instead of tenirai and tenirois.

3dly. Verbs in evoir, as recevoir to receive, change evoir into evrai and evrois, for their future and conditional; je recevrai I shall receive, je recevrais I would receive, instead of recevoirai and recevrois.

5th R. The Present of the Subjunctive is formed from the Gerund, by changing ant into e mute: as,

Ger.	{ Parl-ant,	speaking.	{ Pres. }	que { je parl-e,	I may speak.
	{ Lis-ant,	reading.	{ Subj. }	{ je lis-e,	I may read.

Exceptions.

1st. The verb faire changes aisant of its gerund, into asse for its subjunctive present: as from faisant doing, que je fasse that I may do, instead of faisse.

2dly. Verbs in enir form their subjunctive, by changing enant into ienne: tenant holding, que je tienne that I may hold, instead of tene.

3dly. Verbs in evoir change evant into oive for the subjunctive: recevant receiving, que je reçoive I may receive, instead of receve.

6th R. The Preterite of the Subjunctive is formed from the second person of the Preterite of the Indicative, by adding se (mute), as,

Pret.	{ tu parlas,	thou spok'st.	{ Pret. }	que { parlas-se,	I might speak.
Indic.	{ lus,	thou read'st.	{ Subj. }	{ je { lus-se,	I might read.

And though the final s of the preterite of the indicative is preceded by n, as in preterites of verbs in enir, that s is doubled in the subjunctive, and the third person takes t instead of sse: as tu tins thou heldest, que je tinsse that I might hold, qu'il tint he might hold.

Rules for forming the second and third Persons of the Sing. Numb. in all Verbs.

1st Rule. The first person of every tense always ends either in e mute, or in s or x, or in ai. When it ends in e mute, the second person adds s to it, and the third is like the first: as,

1st. P. Je parle,	I speak.	} que {	je souffre,	I may suffer.
2d. Tu parles,	thou speakest.		tu souffres,	thou mayest suffer.
3d. Il parle,	he speaks		i souffre,	he may suffer.

2d R. When the first person ends with s or x, the second is like the first, and the third takes t instead of the final s or x: as,

1st. Je lis,	I read.	} {	Je veur,	I am willing.
2d. Tu lis,	thou readest.		Tu veur,	thou art willing.
3d. Il lit,	he reads.		Il veut,	he is willing.

In verbs that have d or t immediately before the final s of the first person, that s is left out in the third person: as,

1st. J'entends,	I hear.	} {	Je mets,	I put.
2d. Il entend,	he hears.		Il met,	he puts.

3d R. When the first persons ends in ai (as in the Preterite and Future tenses), the second changes the final i into s, and the third leaves it out quite: as,

1st. Je parlai,	I spoke.	}	Je parlerai,	I shall speak.
2d. Tu parlas,	thou spokest.		Tu parleras,	thou shalt speak.
3d. Il parla,	he spoke.		Il parlera,	he shall speak.

Except the third person of the preterite of the subjunctive, which ends with t in all verbs, sse of the first person being changed into t with a circumflex over the preceding vowel: as,

1st. Que	{ je parlasse,	I might speak. }	Que	{ je fisse,	I might do.
2d.	{ il parlât,	he might speak. }		{ il fit,	he might do.

Rules for forming the three Persons of the Plural Number of Tenses in all Verbs.

1st Rule. The plural number of the present tense of the indicative is formed from the gerund, by changing ant into ons for the first person, into ez for the second, and into ent (mute) for the third: as from

Ger. parl-ant,	speaking.	}	lis-ant,	reading.
Pres. Plur.			Nous lis-ons,	we read.
1st. P. Nous parl-ons,	we speak.		Vous lis-ez,	ye read.
2d. Vous parl-ez,	ye speak.	Ilis lis-ent,	they read.
3d. Ils parl-ent,	they speak.

Except, 1st. The two last persons of the present of faire, which, though it forms its first plural faisons from its gerund faisant, yet makes faites in the second, instead of faisez, and in the third font, instead of faisent.

The same exception takes place for the second person plural of the same tense in the verb dire, disant, which makes dites instead of disez.

2dly. The last person of verbs in enir, which ends in iennent, as from tenant holding, nous tenons we hold, vous tenez you hold, ils tiennent they hold, instead of tennent.

3dly. The last persons of verbs in evoir, which ends in oivent, as from recevant receiving, nous recevons we receive, vous recevez you receive, ils reçoivent they receive, instead of recevent.

2d R. The plural of the imperfect is formed from the first person singular, by changing ois into ions for the first person, into iez for the second, and into oient (pronounced like the first person) for the third: as from

Sing. Je parl-ois,	I	}	Je lis-ois,	I did
Plur. Nous parl-ions,	we		Nous lis-ions,	we did
2d. P. Vous parl-iez,	ye		Vous lis-iez,	ye did
3d. Ils parl-oient,	they	Ilis lis-oient,	they did	} read.

3d R. The plural of the preterite is formed from the first person singular (always ending in ai or s), by changing ai into ames for the first person, into ates for the second, and èrent (sounded only as the letter r) for the third; or by changing s into mes (mute) for the first person, into tes (mute) for the second, and rent (ent also mute) for the third; as from

Sing. Je parl-ai,	I spoke.	}	Je lu-s,	I read.
Plur. Nous parl-ames,	we spoke.		Nous lu-mes,	we read.
2d. Vous parl-ates,	ye spoke.		Vous lu-tes,	ye or you read.
3d. Ils parl-èrent,	they spoke.	Ilis lu-rent,	they read.

4th R. The plural of the future is formed from the first person singular, by changing rai into rons for the first person, into rez for the second, and into ront for the third; as from

Sing. Je parle-rai,	I } we } ye } they }	will speak.	} Je li-rai, } Nous li-rions, } Vous li-rez, } Ils li-ront,	I will read. we will read. ye will read. they will read.
Plur. Nous parle-rions,
2d. Vous parle-rez,
3d. Ils parle-ront,

5th R. The plural of the conditional is formed from the first person singular, by changing rois into rions for the first person, into riez for the second, and into roient (pronounced like the first person) for the third ; as from

Sing. Je parle-rois,	I would } we would } ye would } they would }	speak.	} Je li-rois, } Nous li-rions, } Vous li-riez, } Ils li-roient,	I } we } ye } they }	would read.
Plur. Nous parle-rions,
2d. Vous parle-riez,
3d. Ils parle-roient,

6th R. The plural of the present and preterite of the subjunctive is formed from the first person singular, by changing e mute into ions for the first person, into iez for the second, and into ent (mute) for the third ; as from

Sing. Que je parl-e,	that I } we } ye } they }	may speak.	} Que je parl- ass -e,	that I might } we } ye } they }	speak.
Plur. Nous parl-ions,
2d. Vous parl-iez,
3d. Ils parl-ent,

Except again, 1st, In the verbs in enir, the plural number of the present, which is not formed from the first pers. sing. ending in ienne, but makes enions, eniez, iennent ; que je tienne I may hold, nous tenions we may hold, vous teniez you may hold, ils tiennent they may hold.

2dly, In verbs in exoir, the plural of the present, which is not formed from the first person ending in oire, but makes erions, eriez, oivent ; que je reçoive I may receive, nous recevions we may receive, vous receviez you may receive, ils reçoivent they may receive.

Observe moreover, 1st, That the verbs of the first conjugation, ending in er, have the three persons singular, and the third plural of the subjunctive, like the same persons of the indicative: as,

1st. Sing. Je parle,	I speak.	Que {	je parle,	I may speak.
2d. tu parles,	thou speak'st.		tu parles,	thou may'st speak.
3d. il parle,	he speaks.		il parle,	he may speak.
3d. Pl. ils parlent,	they speak.	Qu' {	ils parlent,	they may speak.

Verbs of the other conjugations have only the third plural alike.

2dly, The first and second persons plural of the subjunctive are in all verbs alike to the same persons plural of the imperfect of the indicative : as,

Ind. Imperfect.		Sub. Present.
1st. Nous parlions,	we did speak.	Que {	nous parlions,	we may speak.
2d. Vous parliez,	ye did speak.		vous parliez,	ye may speak.

Except again in faire, which, as it does not form regularly its subjunctive from its gerund faisant, but makes fasse in the first person sing. so consequently makes in the plural fassions, and fassiez. See the 6th Conjugation.

As for the Imperative mood, the second person singular (for it has no first person) and the first and second plural are the same as those of the present of the indicative ; leaving out the pronouns ; tu fais thou dost, nous faisons we do, vous faites ye do, and the third persons of both numbers the same as those of the subjunctive ; qu'il fasse let him do, qu'ils fassent let them do.

But take notice, 1st, that the verbs of the first conjugation, and others too ending the first person of the indicative in e not sounded, leave out in the second person of the imperative the final s of the same of the indicative, unless that second person be immediately followed by the relative pronouns en and y, in which case it keeps s: as cherches-en, seek for some; vas-y, go thither; but say without s, cherche un meilleur ami, seek for a better friend; va en France, go to France; en being here a preposition.

2dly, Verbs of the other conjugations keep in the second person of the imperative the final s of the indicative.

Tenses compound are always formed from the participle of the verb in question, joined to the tenses simple of the auxiliary avoir; as in parler to speak.

The compound of the present tense is formed from the present of avoir, and the participle parlé spoken: as,

Sing.	{ J' ai tu as il a	} parlé,	{ I have thou hast he has we have ye have they have	} spoken.
Plur.	{ nous avons vous avez ils ont

The Compound of the Imperfect is formed from the imperfect of the auxiliary, and the participle: as,

Sing.	{ J' avois tu avois il avoit	} parlé	{ I had thou had'st he had we had ye had they had	} spoken.
Plur.	{ nous avions vous aviez ils avoient

The Compound of the Preterite is formed from the preterite of the auxiliary and the participle: as,

Sing.	{ J' eus tu eus il eut	} parlé,	{ I had thou had'st he had we had ye had they had	} spoken.
Plur.	{ nous eumes vous eutes ils eurent

The Compound of the Future is formed from the future of the auxiliary and the participle: as,

Sing.	{ J' aurai tu auras il aura	} parlé,	{ I shall have thou shalt have he shall have we shall have ye shall have they shall have	} spoken.
Plur.	{ nous aurons vous aurez ils auront

The Compound of the Conditional is formed from the conditional of the auxiliary and the participle: as,

Sing.	{ J' aurois tu aurois il auroit	} parlé,	{ I would have thou would'st have he would have we would have ye would have they would have	} spoken.
Plur.	{ nous aurions vous auriez ils auroient

Likewise in the Subjunctive, the Compound of the Present is formed from the present of the subjunctive of the auxiliary, and the participle: as,

Sing.	{ J' aie tu aies il ait	} parlé,	{ I may have thou may'st have he may have we may have ye may have they may have	} spoken.
Que Plur.	{ nous ayons vous ayez ils aient

The Compound of the Preterite is formed from the preterite of the subjunctive of the auxiliary, and the participle: as,

Sing.	{ J' eusse tu eusses il eût nous eussions vous eussiez ils eussent	} parlé,	{ I had thou hadst he had we had ye had they had	} or might have spoken.
Plur.

In the Infinitive mood the Present and Gerund have also each its compound; to wit, from the present of the infinitive, and the Gerund of the auxiliary, and participle: as,

Pres. {	avoir	}	parlé,	{ to have }	spoken.
Part. {	ayant	}		having }

After the same manner are conjugated about 2700 verbs ending in er, most of which are inserted in the Vocabulary, there being but two irregular in the language. (See page 168.)

¶ The manner in which Chambaud has presented the French verbs is merely mechanical, and of course the best contrived to learn them, but at the same time, as he says (page 167), is of no great service for the use of the tenses, which, however, the scholar cannot know too soon; it may not be amiss, therefore, to insert here the table annexed to the Exercise-book (page 270) in which the verbs are exhibited in the progressive order of their tenses.

 Comp. Que j'aie levé, that I may have raised. Que j'eusse levé, that I might have raised.

IMPERATIVE.

Lève, raise thou. Qu'il lève, let him raise. Levons, let us raise. Levez, raise.
 Qu'ils lèvent, let them raise.

Conjugate the same verb REFLECTIVELY.

It has been said, (page 129), that reflected verbs are so called, because they govern no other object but the subject they are governed by. They are therefore conjugated with a double pronoun before each person, one of which governs the verb as its subject, and the other is governed as its object; as se blesser, to hurt oneself; je me blesse, I hurt myself; in which instance the English verb answers exactly to that which the French call Reflected. But we have a great many more that are rendered into English by mere neuter; as se lever to rise, which shall be set down here as an example of conjugating this sort of verbs.

¶ It must be observed that a verb activ used reflectively has the true force of a verb passive; consequently it does not form its compound tenses from avoir, as in English, but from the other auxiliary être.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

Pres. Se lever, to rise. Ger. Se levant, rising. Part. Levé, risen.
 C. Pres. S'être levé, to have risen. C. Ger. S'étant levé, having risen.

The same IMPERATIVE negatively.

P. Ne nous levons pas, let us not rise.		ne te lève pas, rise thou not. ne nous levez pas, do not rise.	qu' } il ne se lève pas, let him not rise. ils ne se lèvent pas, let them rise.
---	--	---	--

Observe that I am risen, I was risen, &c. that are seen in some grammars to answer the French of the compound tenses, and signify properly in French je suis levé, j'étois levé, &c. imply quite another sense than that of I have risen, I had risen, &c.

¶ It is not unworthy of notice that these reflected pronouns me, te, se, &c. serve to express sometimes the object of the action, or the accusative, and sometimes the term to which the action tends, or the dative. (See Exercises, p. 16.) In this phrase, Je me donne à vous, I give myself up to you, me is the object; whereas in this, Je me donne bien de la peine, I give myself much trouble, me is the term, and signifies to myself, to being understood in English.

¶ Many persons have judiciously observed that Chambaud has gone rather too far in his Grammar (see p. 240), before he acquaints the scholar with the manner of managing the verbs negatively and interrogatively, and the more so, as he himself in his examples makes use of negative and interrogative phrases. In order, therefore, to make amends for this delay, we shall here present the learner with the following tables.

1st TABLE. The French Verbs used negatively.

Comp. of Pret. that { J'eusse		{ &c.		{ I had or might have		{ &c.

IMPERATIVE.

First Persons.	Second Persons.	Third Persons.
S. Tiens, hold, or &c.	Tiens, hold, or &c.	il tienne, let him, &c.
P. Tenons, let us hold.	tenez, hold or, hold^{qu} ye.	ils tiennent, let them hold.

Conjugate the same Verb REFLECTIVELY.

INFINITIVE MOOD. Se tenir to hold oneself, se tenant holding oneself, tenu held; s'être tenu to have held oneself, s'étant tenu having held oneself.

INDICATIVE. Je me tiens I hold myself, je me tenois I was holding myself, je me suis tenu I have held myself, je m'étois tenu; je me tins, je me fus tenu; je me tiendrai, je me serai tenu; je me tiendrois, je me serois tenu.

SUBJUNCTIVE. Que je me tienne, que je me tinsse, que je me sois tenu, que je me fusse tenu.

IMPERATIVE. Tiens-toi, qu'il se tienne; tenons-nous, tenez-vous, qu'ils se tiennent.

N. B. The same verb tenir, when speaking of assemblies, &c. is also used reflectively, but impersonally, that is, with the pron. of the 3d pers. sing. or actively, with the particle on (See Gram. page 242 & 340.); which plainly shows, 1st, that, speaking of things, an English verb passive is elegantly rendered into French by a verb reflected, or by a verb active used with on, when speaking of persons or things; 2dly, that a verb reflected, as we said before, page 144, has the true force of a verb passive.

Conjugate the same verbs negatively, then interrogatively; (See the tables, pages 147 & 148).

INFINITIVE MOOD. Se tenir to be held, se tenant being held, tenu held; s'être tenu to have been held, s'étant tenu having been held.

INDICATIVE. Il se tient un conseil, or On tient un conseil, a council is held, or holden; and so on for the other tenses.

The verbs of this Conjugation, to the number of twenty-four, are,

s'abstenir, to abstain.	venir, to come.	se souvenir, to remember.
appartenir, to belong.	intervenir, to intervene.	se ressouvenir, to recollect, to call to mind.
contenir, to contain.	devenir, to become.	†avenir, to happen.
détenir, to detain.	convenir, to agree or to become.	parvenir, to attain to.
obtenir, to obtain.	disconvenir, to disagree.	prévenir, to prevent.
retenir, to retain, to keep.	provenir, to proceed, to come from	revenir, to come again.
soutenir, to maintain, to hold, to uphold.	*contrevenir, to contravene, to infringe.	subvenir, to relieve.
entretenir, to keep up.		survenir, to befall, to happen unexpectedly.
maintenir, to maintain.

venir, revenir, devenir, convenir, disconvenir, provenir, parvenir, and survenir, are conjugated with être.

* contrevenir is a law-term, and used in few tenses too: its compound tenses, when used, are formed from avoir, though its primitive venir has them of être.

† venir is an obsolete verb impersonal. We now say il arrive it happens, il arriva it happened, instead of il avient, il avint, &c.

bénir to bless, is of the second conjugation, having the same inflections as agir.—The part. of bénir is béni and bénié blessed; but we also say bénié and bénié, speaking of such Church ceremonies; as du pain bénié hallowed bread, de l'eau bénite holy water, &c.

Fifth CONJUGATION.

Of Verbs in avoir.

Conjugate the verb appercevoir after recevoir, then the reflected verb s'appercevoir.

INFINITIVE MOOD. S'appercevoir to perceive, s'appercevant perceiving, apperçu perceived: s'être apperçu to have perceived, s'étant apperçu having perceived.

INDICATIVE. Je m'apperçois I perceive, Je m'appercevois I was perceiving, je me suis apperçu I have perceived, je m'étois apperçu; je m'apperçus, je me fus apperçu; je m'appercevrai, je me serai apperçu; je m'appercevrais, je me serois apperçu.

SUBJUNCTIVE. Que je m'apperçoive, que je m'apperçusse, que je me sois apperçu, que je me fusse apperçu.

IMPERATIVE. Apperçois-toi, qu'il s'apperçoive; appercevons-nous, appercevez-vous, qu'ils s'apperçoivent.

Conjugate the above verbs negatively, then interrogatively; (See the tables, pages 147 & 148.)

The seven regular verbs of the fifth Conjugation are appercevoir, to perceive. devoir, to owe. recevoir, to receive.
 s'appercevoir, to perceive. redevoir, to owe again. percevoir, (a law term concevoir, to conceive. décevoir, to deceive. for recevoir.) décevoir is quite out of use; we now make use of tromper.

See in the Appendix another signification of devoir, as also its true use and conjugation.

Conjugate the above Verbs negatively, then interrogatively (See the Tables, pages 147 & 148.)

The verbs of the 7th Conjugation, to the number of nineteen, are, astreindre, to oblige, to tie up.	enceindre, to inclose, to incompass.	‡ oindre, to anoint.

atteindre, to reach, to hit.	† enfreindre, to infringe.	peindre, to paint, to draw.
*aveindre, to take, reach, or fetch out.	enjoindre, to enjoin.	plaindre, to pity.
ceindre, to gird.	êteindre, to extinguish,	se plaindre, to complain.
contraindre, to constrain, to compel.	feindre, to feign, to dissemble.	§ poindre, to peep, to dawn.
craindre, to fear.	joindre, to join.	restreindre, to astringe, to restringe, to limit.
		teindre, to dye, or to colour.

* aveindre is confined to some common forms of speech, but quite banished from all style. Its preterites are never used.

† enfreindre is seldom used in common conversation, and is only of the sublime style.

‡ oindre is used only in speaking of sacred ceremonies (particularly in the church of Rome) wherein oil is used; otherwise we say frotter to rub. The only phrase wherein oindre is kept, is in this proverbial saying (which also grows obsolete) Oignez vilain, il vous poindra, save a thief from hanging, and he'll cut your throat.

§ poindre is another obsolete word, used only in the infinitive, and that too in poetry, after the verb commencer: as Le jour commençoit à poindre, the day began to peep: in which case it is neuter, and of quite another signification than the just mentioned proverb, wherein it signifies to hurt.

The regular verbs of this termination are, confondre, to confound. refondre, to cast, new mould. pondre, to lay eggs.

 correspondre, to correspond. morfondre, to make catch répondre, to answer.
 fondre, to melt. cold. tondre, to shear.

perdre, to lose. Ger. perdant, losing. Part. perdu, lost.
 mordre, to bite. Ger. mordant, biting. Part. mordu, bit.

follow also the tenth conjugation; to which one may add tordre to twist, of which the participle is tordu; its old participle tors, is at present an adjective, used in these expressions du fils tors, twisted thread; une colonne torse, a wreathed column; bouche torte, wry mouth.

We shall treat elsewhere (p. 288.) of the use of the tenses, and then observe how the English commonly use the preterite instead of the three first compound tenses of the French: but it must be sufficient now to conjugate all the tenses grammatically, for the best learning of the verbs.

The following verbs neuter form their compound from être:

accourir , to run, to go.	retourner , to return.	tomber , to fall down.
aller , to go.	entrer , to enter, to come.	venir , to come.
aborder , to land.	or get in.	revenir , to come again.
arriver , to arrive.	monter , to go up, to	devenir , to become.
choir , to fall.	come, or get up.	convenir , to agree.
déchoir , to decay.	mourir , to die.	disconvenir , to disagree.
décéder , to die.	naître , to be born.	provenir , to come from.
descendre , to go, come,	partir , to go, to depart,	parvenir , to attain.
or get down.	to set out.	survenir , to befall.
rester , to stay.	sortir , to go out.	intervenir , to intervene.

Therefore you should say: Je suis arrivé ce matin, I arrived this morning; not J'ai arrivé, &c. Elle est venue cette après midi, she came this afternoon; not Elle a venu, &c.

Some of these verbs are also use actively, that is, attended by a noun as their object: then they form their compounds from avoir. Therefore, though we say when the verb is neuter, Elle est montée, she is got up; Elle est descendue, she has come, or got down; yet when the verb is attended by a noun, we say, Elle a descendu l'escalier plus aisément qu'elle ne l'a monté, she went, or got down the stairs more easily than she got up.

Croître to grow, sortir to go out, demeurer to live, rester to stay, are equally well conjugated with être or avoir; as il est, or il a fort cru, he is very much grown; j'ai sorti, or je suis sorti ce matin, I went out this morning. We say equally well J'ai accouru, and Je suis accouru à son secours, I ran to his assistance. But avoir and être construed with sortir and demeurer, imply two different things.

Il est sorti signifies that he is not at home, or within the place where one is, and is englished thus, he is gone out or abroad; and il a sorti signifies that he has been out on some business or other, but is come back again since; il a sorti ce matin, he went out this morning.

In the same manner il a demeuré à Paris, signifies that he has lived at Paris for a while, and is no more there; and il est demeuré à Paris, that he remained at Paris, to continue to live there; or at least that he is there still.

Again sortir and promener are also used actively: as sortez ce cheval de l'écurie, & le promenez, get the horse out of the stable and walk him.

When the verb passer is attended by a noun and a preposition, it is conjugated with avoir, and with être when it is used absolutely without any retinue; as j'ai passé par l'Allemagne, I passed through Germany; vous attendez le courrier, il est passé, you stay for the express, he is passed, or gone.

VERBS IRREGULAR.

As to the verbs called Irregular, because they don't form all their tenses according to the aforesaid rules; observe that their irregularities fall only upon either of these tenses, present (of both moods), preterite, and future: and therefore I should only need to set down their irregularities, were this Grammar designed for scholars only. But as it is calculated for learners of all sorts, and those of the meanest capacity can't have too much help in this matter, I shall take notice of those verbs in such a manner as will make the conjugation of them very easy to any learner, setting down (for abbreviation sake) the termination of each person only.

Observe further, that in verbs irregular, the preterite is ordinarily like the participle, in adding s when it has none: as Je mis I put, from mis put; Je conclus I concluded, from conclu concluded.

There are but two * verbs irregular in the first conjugation: aller to go, and puer to stink; which is irregular only in the spelling of the three persons sing. of the pres. of the indicative. Je pus, tu pus, il put, instead of je pue, tu pues, il pue, all the rest being regular. However, French politeness dislikes the very word puer, and instead of it, we, in conversation, make use of sentir mauvais.

Aller is very irregular throughout; and as it is of a very extensive use with the explicative particle en and a double pronoun, it shall be set down here at length; but children must first learn the plain verb aller, before they conjugate the reciprocal s'en aller,

INFINITIVE MOOD.

Pres. S'en aller, to go away.	Ger. S'en allant, go- ing away.	Part. allé, gone away.

Conjugate the same verb negatively, then interrogatively; (See the tables, pages 147 & 148.)

IMPERATIVE. Ne t'en va pas, qu'il ne s'en aille pas; ne nous en allons pas, ne vous en allez pas, qu'ils ne s'en aillent pas.

Observe, 1st, that all the compound tenses of aller are double, they being equally well formed with the verb substantive être and the participle allé; as je suis allé, j'étois allé; and with the auxiliary avoir, and the part. été; as j'ai été, j'avois été, &c.

2dly, One must very warily distinguish the proper compound tenses of aller (j'ai été, j'avois été,) &c. from the use that the participle of the same verb (allé) is put to with the verb être (je suis allé, j'étois allé) which imply quite another sense than that signified by the action of the verb. For il est allé à Paris (for example), far from expressing the action signified by the compound of the present of aller, intimates that either he is at Paris, or at least is still on his journey thither, which is properly englished thus, he is gone to Paris. But Il a été à Paris, he has been at Paris (which is the proper compound of the present of aller), signifies that he has travelled to Paris, and is returned from thence. I have therefore set down the two ways in English, (I am gone away, and I have been gone away, for je m'en suis allé), which may be both used conformably to this observation.

3dly, The preterite tenses of aller and s'en aller are also doubled, those of the verb être being equally well used. J'allai or Je fus; J'allasse or Je fusse, I went; Je m'en allai, or Je m'en fus, I went away. But we don't say with the double pronoun and the particle en, Je m'en ai été, as we say without them J'ai été I have been, or have gone.

4thly, The difference between aller and s'en aller is this: The first is used to denote only the going from one place to another; whereas s'en aller denotes the very departure, the just going away directly; or at least shows the specified time of setting out from one mentioned or supposed place.

5thly, s'en aller is also said of liquors, to signify their running away from the vessels where they are kept; le vin s'en va, le tonneau ne vaut rien, the wine runs away, the vessel is good for nothing.

6thly, venir to come, revenir to come back again, and retourner to return, are also conjugated with a double pronoun and the particle en; as Je m'en reviens, I am coming back again; Il s'en retourne, he is returning; and either way must be used according to the aforesaid difference between aller and s'en aller.

7thly, Though the participle of recouvrer to recover, or to get again, is a present recouvré, as usual to all verbs of the first conjugation, yet custom keeps still the old participle recouvert in law-style, as likewise in this proverb, Pour un perdu deux recouverts, for one lost two recovered, or found again.

VERBS IRREGULAR of the 2d and 3d CONJUGATION, viz. in ir.

Inf. ACQUERIR, to acquire, to get, to purchase.
acquérir, to acquire. Ger. acquérant, acquiring. Part. acquis, acquired. C. Pres. avoir acquis, to have acquired. C. Ger. ayant acquis, having acquired.

Pres. J'acqui-ers, iers, iert; Nous acqué-rons, rez, acquièrent
Imp. J'acquér-ois, ois, oit; Nous acquér-ions, iez, oient.

Pret. J'acqu -is, is, it; Nous acqui-mes, tes, rent.
Fut. J'acquerrai, ras, ra; Nous acquerrons, rez, ront.
Cond. J'acquerrais, rois, roit; Nous acquerrions, riez, roient.
S.P. J'acquière, es, e; Nous acquérons, iez, acquièrent.
Pr. J'acquiesse, isses,ût; Nous acquiessons, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Acquiers, qu'il acquière; acquérons, rez, qu'ils acquièrent.

The other veros that follow the same conjugation are conquérir to conquer, and requérir to require, which last is only used in law: conquérir is used only in the infinitive, both preterite and compound tenses. As for querir to fetch, it has but the infinitive in use, and that too immediately after the verbs aller to go, venir to come, and envoyer to send; and s'enquérir de to enquire after, is become obsolete; instead of which we now say s'informer.

BOUILLIR.

Inf. bouillir, to boil. Ger. bouillant, boiling. Part. bouilli, boiled.
C.Pres. avoir bouilli, to have boiled. C.Ger. ayant bouilli, having boiled.

Pres. Je bous, bous, bout; Nous bouillons, ez, ent.
Imp. Je bouillois, ois, oit; Nous bouillions, iez, oient.
Pret. Je bouillis, is, it; Nous bouillimes, tez, rent.
Fut. Je bouillirai, ras, ra; Nous bouillirons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je bouillirais, rois, roit; Nous bouillirions, riez, roient.
S.P. Je bouille, es, e; Nous bouillons, iez, ent.
Pr. Je bouillisse, issies,ût; Nous bouillissons, ssies, ssent.
Imper. Bous, qu'il bouille; bouillons, ez, qu'ils bouillent.

Its compound is rebouillir, to boil again.—That verb is seldom used but in the infinitive and 3d persons of its tenses: and it is always neuter. Therefore don't say bouillir de la viande, as in English, to boil meat, but faire bouillir de la viande.

COURIR.

Inf. courir, to run. Ger. courant, running. Part. couru, run.
C.Pres. avoir couru, to have run. C.Ger. ayant couru, having run.
Pres. Je cours, cours, court; Nous courons, ez, ent.
Imp. Je courais, ois, oit; Nous courions, iez, oient.
Pret. Je courus, us, ut; Nous courumes, tes, rent.
Fut. Je courrai, ras, ra; Nous courrons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je courrais, rois, roit; Nous courrions, riez, roient.
S.P. Je cours, es, e; Nous courons, iez, ient.
Pr. Je courusse, usses,ût; Nous courussions, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Cours, qu'il coure; courons, ez, qu'ils courent.

After the same manner are conjugated these seven verbs:

accourir,	to run to.	discourir,	to discourse.	lieve. But the compound concourir,	to concur, to	parcourir,	to run over, to	tenses of accourir are conconspire.		survey.		jugated with être . See encourir,	to incur, to fall	recourir,	to have recourse to.	page 172.
under.		secourir,	to succour, to re-

CUEILLIR, to gather, to pick up.

Inf. cueillir, to gather. Ger. cueillant, gathering. Part. cueilli, gathered. C. Pres. avoir cueilli, to have gathered. C. Ger. ayant cueilli, having gathered.

Pres. Je cueill-e, es, e;	Nous cueill-ons, ez, ent.
Imp. Je cueill-ois, ois, oit;	Nous cueill-ions, iez, oient.
Pret. Je cueill-is, is, it;	Nous cueilli-mes, tes, rent.
Fut. Je cueille-rai, ras, ra;	Nous cueille-rons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je cueille-rois, rois, roit;	Nous cueille-rions, riez, roient.
S.P. Je cueill-e, es, e;	Nous cueill-ions, iez, ent.
Pr. Je cueill-isse, isses, ît;	Nous cueilli-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Cueille, qu'il cueille;	cueill-ons, ez, qu'ils cueillent.

accueillir, to make welcome is very little used: in lieu thereof we say faire accueil, and faire bon accueil. Recueillir, to collect, to gather together, is conjugated after the same manner.

FUIR and s'ENFUIR.

Fuir is both active and neuter: when it is neuter, 'tis to run away; and to shun, to avoid, when active.

Inf. fuir, to shun. Ger. fuyant, shunning. Part. fui, shunned.
C. Pres. avoir fui, to have shunned. C. Gr. ayant fui, having shunned.

Pres. Je fuis, fuis, fuit;	Nous fuy-ons, ez, fuient.
Imp. Je fuy-ois, ois, oit;	Nous fuy-ions, iez, oient.
Pret. Je fuis, fuis fuit;	Nous fui-mes, tes, rent.

This Preterite is seldom used; instead of je fuis, and je m'en-fuis, we say (when the verb is neuter), je pris la fuite, from prendre la fuite, to run away: and j'évitai, from éviter to avoid, to shun (when it is active).

Fut. Je fui-rai, ras, ra;	Nous fui-rons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je fui-rois, rois, roit;	Nous fui-rions, riez, roient.
S.P. Je fui-e, es, e;	Nous fuy-ions, iez, fuient.
Pr. Je fui-sse, sses, fût;	Nous fui-ssions, ssiez, ssent.

The Pres. tense is very little used, and the Pret. tense still less: instead of them we say, Je prenne la fuite, je prisse la fuite; j'évite, j'évitasse.

Imper. Fuis, qu'il fuie; fuy-ons, ez, qu'ils fuient.

HAIR.

Inf. haïr, to hate. Ger. haïssant, hating. Part. haï, hated.
C. Pres. avoir haï, to have hated. C. Ger. ayant haï, having hated.

Pres. Je hais, ais, it;	Nous haïss-ons, ez, ent.
Imper. Hai, qu'il haïsse;	Haïssons, ez, qu'ils haïssent.

The irregularity of this verb falls only upon those tenses. All the other tenses are regular. (See the 2d conjug.) Its Pret. tenses are never used ; its compounds very little.

MOURIR, and se MOURIR, to be a dying.

Inf. mourir, to die. Ger. mourant, dying. Part. mort, dead.
C. Pres. être mort, to have died. C. Ger. étant mort, having died.
Pres. Je meurs, meurs, meurt ; Nous mour-ons ez, meurent.
Imp. Je mour-ois, ois, oit ; Nous mour-ions, iez, oient.
Pret. Je mour-us, us, ut ; Nous mouru-mes, tes, rent.
Fut. Je mour-rai, ras, ra ; Nous mour-rons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je mour-rois, roit, roit ; Nous mour-rions, riez, roient.
S.P. Je meur-e, es, e ; Nous mour-ions, iez, meurent.
Pr. Je mou-russe, russes, rût ; Nous mouru-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Meurs, qu'il meure ; mour-ons, ez, qu'ils meurent

OUVRIR.

Inf. ouvrir, to open. Ger. ouvrant, opening. Part. ouvert, open.
C. Pres. avoir ouvert, to have opened. C. Ger. ayant ouvert, having opened.
Pres. J ouvr-e es, e ; Nous ouvr-ons, ez, ent.
Imp. J'ouvr-ois, ois, oit ; Nous ouvr-ions, iez, oient.
Pret. J'ouvr-is, is, it ; Nous ouvri-mes, tes, rent.
Fut. J'ouvri-rai, ras, ra ; Nous ouvri-rons, rez, ront.
Cond. J'ouvri-rois, rois, roit ; Nous ouvri-rions, riez, roient.
S.P. J'ouvr-e es, e ; Nous ouvr-rions, iez, ent.
Pr. J'ouvr-isse, isses, ît ; Nous ouvri-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Ouvre, qu'il ouvre ; ouvr-ons, ez, qu'ils ouvrent.

Souffrir to suffer, or to bear, and offrir to offer, with its derivative mésouffrir to underbid (very little used), couvrir to cover, découvrir to discover, and recouvrir to cover again, are conjugated after ouvrir.

SAILLIR, to gush out, is out of use ; as also ASSAILLIR, to assault, except perhaps in the participle assailli, assaulted. And TRESSAILLIR, which is commonly attended by de, as tressaillir de joie to leap for joy, tressaillir de peur to start out of fear, is more used in the infinitive, the gerund, and the pres. imp. and pret. than in the other tenses.

Inf. tressaillir, to start. Ger. tressaillant, starting. Part. tressailli started. C. Pres. avoir tressailli to have started. C. Ger. ayant tressailli, having started.

Pres. Je tressaill-e, es, e ; Nous tressaill-ons, ez, ent.
Imp. Je tressaill-ois, ois, oit ; Nous tressaill-ions, iez, oient Pret. Je tressaill-is, is, it; Nous tressailli-mes, tes, rent.

Fut. Je tressailli-rai, ras, ra; Nous tressailli-rons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je tressailli-rois, rois, roit; Nous tressailli-rions, riez, roient
S.P. Je tressaill-e, es, e; Nous tressaill-ions, iez, ent.
Pr. ^{ue} Je tressaill-isse, isses, ît; Nous tressailli-ssions, ssiez, ssent.

No Imperative.

Saillir may still be used in these persons, les eaux saillissent, the waters gush out; le sang saillissoit, the blood gushed out; mon sang a sailli fort loin, my blood has gushed out a great way.

REVETIR,

to invest with, to bestow; or to confer a dignity upon one; is always used in a figurative sense.

Inf. revêtir, to invest. Ger. revêtant, investing. Part. revêtu, invested. C. Pres. avoir revêtu, to have invested. C. Ger. ayant revêtu, having invested Pres. Je rev-êts, êts, êt, Nous revêt-ons, ez, ent.

Imp. Je revêt-ois, ois, oit; Nous revêt-ions, iez, oient.
Pret. Je revêt-is, is, it; Nous revêti-mes, tes, rent.
Fut. Je revêti-rai, ras, ra; Nous revêti-rons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je revêti-rois, rois, roit; Nous revêti-rions, riez, roient.
S.P. ^{ue} Je revêt-e, es, e; Nous revêt-ions, iez, ent.
Pr. ^{ue} Je revêt-isses, isses, ît; Nous revêti-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Revêts, qu'il revête; revêtons, ez, qu'ils revêtent.

Vêtir to clothe, is used only in the infinitive, and part. vêtu clothed: as to the other tenses, we make use of habiller.—se revêtir to put on one's clothes, is sometimes used, though not throughout. Travestir to disguise, and investir to invest, are regular verbs of the second conjugation, although they are seldom used but in the infinitive, the participle, future, conditional, and preterites.

Faillir to fail, and défaillir to faint away, are become quite obsolete. We have substituted to the former manquer, and to the latter s'évanouir, or tomber en défaillance.

Oùir to hear, is used only in the compound tenses, and that too with the verb dire after it; J'ai ouï dire, I have heard, J'avois ouï dire, I had heard, &c. In all other cases we make use of entendre or apprendre. Its imperative, Oyez hear, is still used in the English courts of justice.

Férir an old obsolete verb. Its infinitive is kept in this phrase only, sans coup férir, without striking one blow.

IRREGULAR VERBS of the 5th CONJUGATION, or in oir.
 s'ASSEOIR.

Inf. s'asseoir, to sit down. Ger. s'asseyant, sitting down. Part. assis, sat down. C. Pres. s'être assis, to have sat down. C. Ger. s'étant assis, having sat down.

Pr. Je m'ass-ieds, ieds, ied; Nous nous assey-ons, ez, ent.
Imp. Je m'assey-ois, ois, oit; Nous nous assey-ions, iez, oient.
Pr. Je m'ass-is, is, it; Nous nous assi-mes, tes, rent.

But the verbal adnoun séant is used in the sense of the verb before our consideration; as,

Il n'est pas séant de siffler en compagnie, It is not decent to whistle in company.

Cette perruque courte n'est pas séante à un homme de son rang, That short bob is not decent for one of his dignity.

Pres. Il sied, that fits. ils siéent, they fit.

Imp. Il seyoit, that fitted. ils seyoient, they fitted.

Fut. Il siéra, that will fit. ils siéront, they will fit.

Cond. Il siéroit, that would fit. ils siéroient, they would fit.

This verb is also used impersonally: as,

Il sied mal à un homme sage de, &c. It ill becomes a wise man to, &c.

POUVOIR.

Inf. pouvoir, to be able. Ger. pouvant, being able. Part. pu, been able

C. Pres. avoir pu, to have been able. C. Ger. Ayant pu, having been able.

Pres. Je puis, peux, peut; Nous pouv-ons, ez, peuvent.

Conversation and poetry allow Je peux.

Imp. Je pouv-ois, ois, oit; Nous pouv-ions, iez, oient.

Pret. Je pus, pus, put; Nous pu-mes, tes, rent.

Fut. Je pour-rai, ras, ra; Nous pour-r-ions, rez, ront.

Cond. Je pour-rois, rois, roit; Nous pour-r-ions, riez, roient.

One r only is sounded in these two tenses.

S.P. Je pui-sse, sses, sse; Nous puiss-ions, iez, ent.

Pr. Je pusse, pusses, pût; Nous pu-ssions, ssiez, ssent.

No Imperative.

See in the Appendix the right use and conjugation of that verb.

SAVOIR, formerly Sçavoir.

Inf. savoir to know. Ger. sachant, knowing. Part. su, known.

C. Pres. avoir su, to have known. C. Ger. ayant su, having known.

Pres. Je sai, or je sais, sais, sait; Nous sav-ons, ez, ent.

Imp. Je sav-ois, ois, oit; Nous sav-ions, iez, oient.

Pret. Je sus, sus, sut; Nous su-mes, tes, rent.

Fut. Je sau-rai, ras, ra; Nous sau-r-ions, rez, ront.

Cond. Je sau-rois, rois, roit; Nous sau-r-ions, riez, roient.

S.P. Je sach-e, es, e; Nous sach-ions, iez, ent.

Pr. Je susse, susses, sût; Nous su-ssions, ssiez, ssent.

Imp. Sache, qu'il sache; Sachons, sachez, qu'ils sachent.

VOIR.

Inf. voir, to see. Ger. voyant, seeing. Part. vu, seen.

C. Pres. avoir vu, to have seen. C. Ger. ayant vu, having seen

Pres. Je vois, vois, voit; Nous voy-ons, ez, voient

Imp. Je voy-ois, ois, oit; Nous voy-ions, iez, oient.

Prët.	Je vis,	vis,	vit;	Nous vi	-mes,	tes,	rent.
Fut.	Je ver-rai,	ras,	ra;	Nous ver-r	rons,	rez,	ront.
Cond.	Je ver-rois,	rois,	roit;	Nous ver-r	ions,	riez,	roient.
In those two tenses pronounce double r like a single one.
S.P. ^{ne}	Je voi-e,	es,	e;	Nous voy-i	ons,	iez,	voient.
Pr. ^{ne}	Je visse,	visses,	vît;	Nous vission	s,	vissiez,	vissent.
Imp.	Vois, qu'il voie;	Voy-ons,	ez, qu'ils	voient.

After voir are conjugated, entrevoir, to have a glimpse of; pourvoir, to provide; prévoir, to foresee; and revoir to see again: but pourvoir and prévoir don't make their future and conditional in errai and errois as their primitive does; but in oirai and oirois (je pourvoirai, tu prévoiras, il pourvoiroit, nous prévoirions, &c.); pourvoir differs also from all others in its preterite tenses, which are not ended in is and isse, but in us and usse (je pourvus, je pourvusse).

VOULOIR.

Inf. vouloir, to be willing. Ger. voulant, being willing. Part. voulu, been willing. C. Pres. avoir voulu, to have been willing. C. Ger. ayant voulu, having been willing.

Pres.	Je veux,	veux,	veut;	Nous voulons,	ez,	veulent.
Imp.	Je voul-ois,	ois,	oit;	Nous voulions,	iez,	oient.
Prët.	Je voulus,	us,	ut;	Nous voulu-mes,	tes,	rent.
Fut.	Je vould-rai,	ras,	ra;	Nous vould-r	ons,	rez,	ront.
Cond.	Je vould-rois,	rois,	roit;	Nous vould-r	ions,	riez,	roient.
S.P. ^{ne}	Je veuill-e,	es,	e;	Nous voul-i	ons,	iez,	veillent.
Pr. ^{ne}	Je voul-usse,	usses,	ût;	Nous voulu-ssions,	ssiez,	ssent.

No Imperative.

See in the Appendix the true use and conjugation of that Verb.

VALOIR

Inf. valoir, to be worth. Ger. valant, being worth. Part. valu, been worth. C. Pres. avoir valu, to have been worth. C. Ger. ayant valu, having been worth.

Pres.	Je vaux,	vaux,	vaut;	Nous val-ons,	ez,	ent.
Imp.	Je val-ois,	ois,	oit;	Nous val-ions,	iez,	oient.
Prët.	Je val-us,	us,	ut;	Nous valu-mes,	tes,	rent.
Fut.	Je vaud-rai,	ras,	ra;	Nous vaud-r	ons,	rez,	ront.
Cond.	Je vaud-rois,	rois,	roit;	Nous vaud-r	ions,	riez,	roient.
S.P. ^{ne}	Je vaill-e,	es,	e;	Nous val-ions,	iez,	vaillent.
Pr. ^{ne}	Je val-usse,	usses,	ût;	Nous valu-ssions,	ssiez,	ssent.
Imper.	Vaux, qu'il vaille;	Val-ons,	ez, qu'ils	vaillent.

Revaloir, to be even with one; and prévaloir to prevail, follow the same conjugation, except that prévaloir makes in the present subj. prévaille, and not prévaille.

MOUVOIR.

Inf. mouvoir, to move. Ger. mouvant, moving. Part. mu, moved.
C. Pres. avoir mu, to have moved. C. Ger. ayant mu, having moved.

Pres. Je meus, meus, meut ; Nous mouv-ons ez, meuvent.

Imp. Je mou-vois, vois, voit, &c. Fut. & Cond. (if used) mouv-rai, and mouv-rois, &c.

Sub. Je meuv-e, es, e ; Nous mouv-ions, iez, meuvent.

The preterite tenses, Je mus, Je musse, are very seldom used.

Imper. Meus, qu'il meuve ; Mouv-ons, ez, qu'ils meuvent.

Mouvoir is a technical term, which also has few tenses in use. In common conversation we use remuer. Its derivatives are émouvoir, démouvoir, and promouvoir :

démouvoir is a law-term, used only in the infinitive in such phrases as these : se démouvoir, to desist ; démouvoir quelqu'un de ses prétentions, to make one desist of his pretensions.

promouvoir has only the part. in use, and that too speaking of Church-preferements and holy orders : as promu à l'Épiscopat, promoted to a Bishoprick.

émouvoir is used only in the infinitive, and in the sense of working with respect to purges : as Il est difficile à émouvoir, he is hard to be purged ; émouvoir is used also for exciter, to excite ; as émouvoir les passions, une sédition. Its part. as also compound tenses, are used in the last sense, to wit, that of being concerned (ému concerned) ; s'émouvoir is sometimes also used in the third pers. of the pres. in the same sense ; as Il s'émeut de rien, the least thing concerns him ; Il ne s'émeut de rien, he is concerned at nothing.

apparoir, v. n. a law-term, is used only in the infinitive, and third person sing. as Comme il appert par un tel acte, as it appears by such an act.

As for choir and déchoir they are quite out of use, except in the infinitive, and participles chu and déchu ; tomber to fall, has taken their place.—Its derivative échoir, is only used in the part. échu ; in the third person sing. in the pres. and fut. and perhaps the gerund (échéant), as in phrases like this :

Si le cas y échoit (pron. sometimes échet), If the occasion occurs, if there be occasion.

Le terme échoit (not échet) le six du mois, The rent expires the sixth of the month.

Mon terme écherra demain, My rent will be out to-morrow.

Le terme est échu, The rent or quarter is out or expired.

Cela lui est échu par le sort, That fell to him by lot.

avoir, to have, has also its derivatives ; ravoir, to have again ; and se ravoir, to recover one's strength, but they are used in the infinitive only : as,

Il veut le ravoir, He desires to have it again.

Il a de la peine à se ravoir, He recovers his strength but slowly.

IRREGULAR VERBS of the 6th CONJUGATION, or in aire.

PLAIRE.

Inf. plaire, to please. Ger. plaisant, pleasing. Part. plu, pleased.

C. Pres. avoir plu, to have pleased. C. Ger. ayant plu, having pleased.

Pres. Je plais, plais, plaît ; Nous plais-ons, ez, ent.

Imp. Je plais-ois, ois, oit ; Nous plais-ions, iez, oient.

Pret. Je plus, plus, plut ; Nous plu-mes, tes, rent.

Fut. Je plai-rai, ras, ra ; Nous plai-rons, rez, ront.

Cond. Je plai-rois, rois, roit ; Nous plai-rions, riez, roient.

S.P. ^e Je plais-e, es, e ; Nous plais-ions, ez, ent.
 Pr. ^e Je pl-usse, usse, plût ; Nous plu-ssions, iez, ssent.
 Imper. Plais, qu'il plaise ; Plai-sons, sez, qu'ils plaisent.

Conjugate the same verb reflectively.

INFINITIVE MOOD. Se plaire to be pleased. Ger. Se plaisant being pleased.
 Part. plu, been pleased. C. Pres. or Pret. s'être plu, to have been pleased. C. Ger.
 or Ger. past. s'étant plu, having been pleased.

INDICATIVE. Je me plais I am pleased. Je me plaisois I was pleased. Je me suis plu I have been pleased. Je m'étois plu ; Je me plus I was pleased. Je me fus plu ; Je me plairai, Je me serai plu ; Je me plairois, Je me serois plu.

SUBJUNCTIVE. Que je me plaise, que je me plusse, que je me sois plu, que je me fusse plu.

IMPERATIVE. Plais-toi, qu'il se plaise, plaisons-nous, plaisez-vous, qu'ils se plaisent.

This verb is also used impersonally :

il me plaît, I please. il te plaît, thou pleasest. il lui plaît, he or she pleases.
 il nous plaît we please. il vous plaît, you please. il leur plaît, they please.
 and so on for the other tenses.

Its derivatives déplaire, to displease ; and complaire, to comply ; as also taire, to conceal ; and se taire, to hold one's tongue, follow the same conjugation.

TRAIRE.

Inf. traire, to milk. Ger. trayant, milking. Part. trait, milked.
 C. Pres. avoir trait, to have milked. C. Ger. ayant trait, having milked.

Pres. Je trais, trais, trait ; Nous tray-ons, ez, traient.

Imp. Je tray-ois, ois, oit ; Nous tray-ions, iez, oient.

Fut. Je trai-rai, ras, ra ; Nous trai-rons, rez, ront.

Cond. Je trai-rois, roit, roit ; Nous trai-rions, riez, roient.

S.P. ^e Je trai-e, es, e ; Nous tray-ions, iez, ent.

Imp. ^e Trais, qu'il traie ; Tray-ons, ez, qu'ils traient.

Traire has no preterite in use.—Its derivatives, abstraire, to abstract ; distraindre, to divert from ; extraire, to extract ; and soustraire, to subtract, or take from have only the infinitive, pres. and fut. in use (and that too in the singular number), as also the part. distraindre, extrait, abstrait, soustrait, and the compound tenses. Instead of the tenses and number out of use, we use a paraphrase, saying, nous faisons abstraction.—The part. of traire is used in these expressions, de l'or ou de l'argent trait, gold or silver-wire.—Rentraire to finedraw, is also conjugated like traire, without preterite tenses.

Braire, to bray like an ass, is used in the infinitive and third persons of the pres. only (il braie, ils braient).

BOIRE.

Inf. boire, to drink. Ger. buvant, drinking. Part. bu, drunk.
 C. Pres. avoir bu, to have drunk. C. Ger. ayant bu, having drunk.

Pres. Je bois, bois, boit Nous buv-ons, ez, boivent

Imp. Je buv-ois, ois, oit ; Nous buv-ions, iez, oient Pret. Je bus, bus, but ; Nous bu-mes, tes, rent.

Fut. Je boi-rai, ras, ra ; Nous boi-rons, rez, ront

Cond. Je boi-rois, rois, roit ; Nous boi-rions, riez, roient.
S.P. Je boiv-e es, e ; Nous buv-ions, iez, boivent.
Pr. Je busse, busses, bût ; Nous bu-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Bois, qu'il boive ; Buv-ons, ez, qu'ils boivent.

CROIRE.

Inf. croire, to believe. Ger. croyant, believing. Part. cru, believed.
C.Pres. avoir cru, to have believed. C. Ger. ayant cru, having believed.

Pres. Je crois, crois, croit ; Nous croy-ons, ez, croient.
Imp. Je croy-ois, ois, oit ; Nous croy-ions, iez, oient.
Pret. Je crus, us, ut ; Nous cru-mes, tes, rent.
Fut. Je croi-rai, ras, ra ; Nous croi-rons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je croi-rois, rois, roît ; Nous croi-rions, riez, roient.
S.P. Je croie, croies, croie ; Nous croy-ions, iez, croient.
Pr. Je crusse, crusses, crût ; Nous cru-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Crois, qu'il croie ; Croy-ons, ez, qu'ils croient.

Its derivative accroître is used in the infinitive only, and that too with the verb faire before it ; as faire accroître, or en faire accroître, to impose upon one and s'en faire accroître, to be self-conceited.

IRREGULAR VERBS of the 8th CONJUGATION, or in être.
NAÎTRE.

Inf. naître, to be born. Ger. naissant, being born. Part. né, born se dédire, to unsay, to retract. interdire, to interdict, redire, to tell.

 médire, to slander, to speak ill. to forbid. confire, to preserve fruit, follow the same conjugation ; with this exception, that except redire, which is conjugated all throughout like its primitive, they form regularly the 2d pers.
 plur. of the pres. and make disez instead of dites ; and maudire doubles its s
 'through the whole verb (maudissant, nous maudissons, maudissois, &c.)

LIRE.

Inf. lire, to read. Ger. lisant, reading. Part. lu, read.
C. Pres. avoir lu, to have read. C. Ger. ayant lu, having read.

Imper. Lis, qu'il lise ;	Li-sons,	sez, qu'ils lisent.

élire to elect, and relire to read again, are conjugated after the same manner :
 to which you may add circoncire, to circumcise ; and suffire, to suffice ; which, however, differ in this : their participles are circoncis, (with a final s) and suffi, (without a final s), and they make in their pret. Je circoncis, je circoncisse, I circumcised ; Je suffis, je suffisse, I sufficed.

RIRE.

Inf. rire, to laugh. Ger. riant, laughing. Part. ri, laughed.
C. Pres. avoir ri, to have laughed. C. Ger. ayant ri, having sourire, to smile, is conjugated like rire.

ECRIRE.

Inf. écrire, to write. Ger. écrivant, writing. Part. écrit, written.
C. Pres. avoir écrit, to have written. C. Ger. Ayant écrit, having written.

Pres. J'é-cris,	cris, crit ;	Nous écriv-ons,	ez, ent.
Imp. J'écriv-ois,	ois, oit ;	Nous écriv-ions,	iez, oient.
Pret. J'écri-vis,	vis, vit ;	Vous écri-vimes,	tes, rent.
Fut. J'écri-rai,	ras, ra ;	Vous écri-rons,	rez, ront.
Cond. J'écri-rois,	rois, roit ;	Nous écri-rions,	riez, roient.
S.P. ^e J'écriv-e,	es, e ;	Nous écriv-ions,	iez, ent.
Pr. ^e J'écri-visse,	visses, vît ;	Nous écriv-ssions,	ssiez, ssent.
Imper. écris,	qu'il écrive ;	écriv-vez,	qu'ils écrivent.

After the same manner are conjugated, décrire, to describe. proscrire, to proscribe, to souscrire, to subscribe.
inscrire, to inscribe. out-law. transcrire, to transcribe.
prescrire, to prescribe. récrire, to write again. circonscrire, to circumscribe.

 Pr.^{ue} Je sui-visse, visses, vît; Nous suivi-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
 Imper. Suis, qu'il suive; Suivons, ez, qu'ils suivent.

Its derivatives are, poursuivre, to pursue; and s'ensuivre, which is used only in the third persons of both numbers: it is also used impersonally; as, Il s'ensuit de là que, &c. from whence it follows that, &c.

Frîre, to fry, is used only in the infinitive, the participle frit with the compound tenses, in the sing. of the pres. Je fris, tu fris, il frit; and perhaps in the fut. Je frirai, ras, ra, &c. In many other circumstances one must make use of a periphrase; as faisant frîre, frying, instead of its gerund: Vous faites trop frîre ce poisson, You fry that fish too much.

Bruire, to rustle, is used only in the infinitive, and the third persons of the imperfect, Il bruïoit, it rustled; Les flots bruïoient, the billows roared, although the gerund be bruissant; bruïant, ante, being a verbal adnoun.

IRREGULAR VERBS of the 10th CONJUGATION, or in endre, ompre, ettre.

PRENDRE.

Inf. prendre, to take. Ger. prenant, taking. Part. pris, taken.
C. Pres. avoir pris, to have taken. C. Ger. ayant pris, having taken.

Pres. Je prends, prends, prend; Nous pren-ons, ez, nent.
Imp. Je pren-ois, ois, oit; Nous pren-ions, iez, oient.
Pret. Je pris, pris, prit; Nous pri-mes, tes, rent.
Fut. Je prend-rai, ras, ra; Nous prend-rons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je prend-rois, rois, roit; Nous prend-rions, riez, roient.
 S.P.^{ue} Je pren-n-e, es, e; Nous pren-ions, iez, nent.
 Pr.^{ue} Je pris-se, prisses, prît; Nous pri-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
 Imper. Prends, qu'il prenne; Pren-ons, ez, qu'ils prennent.

Its derivatives are apprendre, to learn; désapprendre, to unlearn; comprendre, to understand; entreprendre, to undertake; se méprendre, to be mistaken; reprendre, to rebuke, to chide, also to take again; and surprendre, to surprise: all which are conjugated like their primitive.

ROMPRE.

Inf. rompre, to break. Ger. rompant, breaking. Part. rompu, broken.
C. Pres. avoir rompu, to have broken. C. Ger. ayant rompu, having broken.

Pres. Je romps, romps, rompt; Nous rom-pons, ez, ent.

Fut. Je batt-rai,	ras, ra ;	Nous batt-rons,	rez, ront.
Cond. Je batt-rois,	rois, roit ;	Nous batt-rions,	riez, roient.
S.P. ^{ue} Je batt-e,	es, e ;	Nous batt-ions,	iez, ent.
Pr. ^{ue} Je bat-tisse,	tisses, tît ;	Nous batti-ssions,	ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Bats,	qu'il batte ;	Batt-ons,	ez, qu'ils battent.

Abattre, to pull down ; combattre to fight ; se débattre, to struggle ; s'ébattre, to sport (an expression of the burlesque style) ; rabattre, to bate, abate ; and rebattre, to beat again, are conjugated like battre.

METTRE.

Inf. mettre, to put. Ger. mettant, putting. Part. mis, put.
C. Pres. avoir mis, to have put. C. Ger. ayant mis, having put.

Pres. Je mets,	mets, met ;	Nous mett-ons,	ez, ent.
Imp. Je mett-ois,	ois, oit ;	Nous mett-ions,	iez, oient.
Pret. Je mis,	mis, mit ;	Nous mi-mes,	tes, rent.
Fut. Je mett-rai,	ras, ra ;	Nous mett-rons,	rez, ront.
Cond. Je mett-rois,	rois, roit ;	Nous mett-rions,	riez, roient.
S.P. ^{ue} Je mett-e,	es, e ;	Nous mett-ions,	iez, ent.
Pr. ^{ue} Je misse,	misses, mît ;	Nous missions,	missiez, missent.
Imper. Mets,	qu'il mette ;	Mett-ons,	ez, qu'ils mettent.

The following are conjugated after the same manner :

admettre ,	to admit.	s'entremettre ,	to inter-	compromettre ,	to com-
commettre ,	to commit.		meddle.		promise.
démettre ,	to remove, turr	promettre ,	to permit.	soumettre ,	to submit.
out.		promettre ,	to promise.	transmettre ,	to transmit.
se démettre ,	to resign.	remettre ,	to deliver, to		to convey.
omettre ,	to omit.		put again.

CONCLURE.

Inf. conclure, to conclude. Ger. concluant, concluding. Part. conclu, concluded. C. Pres. Avoir conclu, to have concluded.

C. Per. ayant conclu, having concluded. .

Pres. Je con-clus,	clus, clut ;	Nous conclu-ons,	ez, ent.
Imp. Je conclu-ois,	ois, oit ;	Nous conclu-ions,	iez, oient.
Pret. Je conclus,	clus, clut ;	Nous conclu-mes,	tes, rent.
Fut. Je conclu-rai,	ras, ra ;	Nous conclu-rons,	rez, ront.
Cond. Je conclu-rois,	rois, roit ;	Nous conclu-rions,	riez, roient.
S.P. ^{ue} Je conclu-e,	es, e ;	Nous conclu-ions,	iez, ent.
Pr. ^{ue} Je conclu-sse,	sses, conclût ;	Nous conclu-ssions,	iez, ssent.
Imper. Conclus,	qu'il conclue ;	Conclu-ons,	ez, qu'ils concluent.

Exclure, to exclude, is conjugated after the same manner, except that the part. is exclus with a final s, and the feminine is both exclue and excluse; as, Il fut exclus de l'assemblée, he was excluded from the assembly: Elle en fut aussi exclue, or excluse, she was also excluded from it.

CONVAINCRE.

Inf. convaincre, to convince. Ger. convainquant, convincing. Part. convaincu, convinced. C. Pres. avoir convaincu, to have convinced. C. Ger. ayant convaincu, having convinced.

Pres. Je con-vaincs, vains, vainc; convainqu-ons, ez, ent.
Imp. Je convainqu-ois, ois, oit; convainqu-ions, ez, oient.
Pret. Je convain-quis, quis, quit; convainqui-mes, tes, rent.
Fut. Je convainc-rai, ras, ra; ^{Nous} convainc-rons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je convainc-rois, rois, roit; ^{Nous} convainc-rions, riez, roient.
S.P. ^e Je convain-que, ques, que; convainqui-ions, iez, ent.
Pr. ^e Je convain-quisse, quisses, quît; convainqui-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Convaincs, qu'il convainque; Convainqu-ons, ez, qu'ils convainquent.

Vaincre, to vanquish, or to overcome, is conjugated after the same manner, but it is not used, in the pres. nor in some other tenses, instead of which we say triumpher, or être victorieux. You may also spell convaincant and convaincons with a c instead of qu.

COUDRE.

Inf. coudre, to sew. Ger. cousant, sewing. Part. cousu, sewed. C. Pres. avoir cousu, to have sewed. C. Ger. ayant cousu, having sewed.

Pres. Je couds, couds, coud; Nous cous-ons, ez, ent.
Imp. Je cous-ois, ois, oit; Nous cous-ions, iez, oient.
Pret. Je cou-sis, sis, it; Nous cousi-mes, tes, rent.
Fut. Je coud-rai, ras, ra; Nous coud-rons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je coud-rois, rois, roit; Nous coud-rions, riez, roient.
S.P. ^e Je cou-se, ses, se; Nous cous-ions, iez, ent.
Pr. ^e Je cou-sisse, sisses, sît; Nous cousi-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Couds, qu'il couse; Cou-sons, sez, qu'ils cousent.—

In the preter tense beware of saying Je cousus, je coususse, as some people do.

The only compounds this verb has are découdre, to unsew; and recoudre, to sew again.

MOUDRE.

Inf. moudre, to grind. Ger. moulant, grinding. Part. moulu, ground. C. Pres. avoir moulu, to have ground. C. Ger. ayant moulu, having ground.

Pres. Je mouds, mouds, moud; Nous moul-ons, ez, ent.
Imp. Je moul-ois, ois, oit; Nous moul-ions, iez, oient.
Pret. Je mou-lus, lus, lut; Nous moulu-mes, tes, rent.
Fut. Je moud-rai, ras, ra; Nous moud-rons, rez, ront.

Cond. Je moud-rois,rois,roit ; Nous moud-rions, riez, roient.
S.P. Je moule, es, e ; Nous mouli-ions, iez, ent.
Pr. Je mou-lusse, lusses,lût ; Nous moulu-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Mouds, qu'il moule ; Moul-ons, ez, qu'ils moulent.

Its derivatives are émoudre or réoudre, to whet, to set an edge : and remoudre, to grind again.

RÉSoudre.

Inf. résoudre, to resolve. Ger. résolvant, resolving. Part. résolu, resolved. C. Pres. avoir résolu, to have resolved. C. Ger. ayant résolu, having resolved.

Pres. Je résouds, souds, soud ; Nous résolv-ons, ez, ent.
Imp. Je résolv-ois, ois, oit ; Nous résolv-ions, iez, oient.
Pret. Je réso-lus, lus, lut ; Nous résolu-mes, tes, rent.
Fut. Je résoud-rai, ras, ra ; Nous résoud-rons, rez, ront.
Cond. Je résoud-rois,rois,roit ; Nous résoud-rions, riez, roient.
S.P. Je résolv-e, es, e ; Nous résolv-ions, iez, ent.
Pr. Je réso-lusse, lusses, lût ; Nous résolu-ssions, ssiez, ssent.
Imper. Résous, qu'il résolve ; Résolv-ons, ez, qu'ils résolvent.

Soudre, to solve, is used in the infinitive only. Absoudre, to absolve, and dissoudre, to dissolve or liquify, follow the same conjugation : but they have no preterite in use, and their part. are absous and dissous ; as likewise that of résoudre is résous, when that verb signifies changing a thing into another. Example un brouillard résous en pluie, a mist resolved into rain. Absous is not used in the feminine, but dissous makes dissoute. Mais de quelle manière, & en quel temps a-t-elle été dissoute? But in what manner, and when was it dissolved?

As for clorre, to close, or shut close ; déclorre to unclose ; enclorre, to enclose ; and éclorre, to be hatched, or to blow open ; they are verbs defective, and very seldom used but in the inf. and part. with both avoir and être : as,
J'ai enclos mon jardin d'un bon mur, I have enclosed my garden with a good wall.
Je n'ai pas clos l'œil de la nuit, I did not shut my eyes last night.
Mes vers à soie sont éclos, My silk-worms are hatched.

clorre is used only in the infinitive, participle, the three pers. sing. of the pres. Je clos, tu clos, il clot ; the fut. Je clorrai ; and the cond. Je clorrois.

éclorre may also be used in the fut. as (speaking of the same insects), Ils n'éclorront jamais sans chaleur, they will never be hatched without heat. In any other tense we make use of a periphrase with the verb faire, and the inf. of the verb, as Mettez-les au soleil pour les faire éclorre, instead of pour qu'ils éclosent, set them in the sun to make them hatch : though we also not improperly say in the present indic. Mes vers à soie éclosent à merveille, my silk-worms come out charmingly.

From three other obsolete verbs, there remain some tenses and persons consecrated by custom to certain sciences, and phrases, though their infinitive is now hardly known.

I. The third persons of the pres. and imperf. of gésir, gissant (gît, gissent, gissoit), chiefly used in epitaphs : as Ci gît, here lies, &c.

II. The participle of issir (issu), used in speaking of Lineage and Genealogy : as, Il se prétend issu des anciens Comtes de, he pretends that he is descended from the ancient Counts of, &c. Cousin issu de german, second cousin ; as likewise the gerund of the same (issant), used in Heraldry only : as, Il porte de sinople un lion issant de gueules, he bears sinople a lion rising out of gules.

III. The part. of tistre (tissu), generally used in all compound tenses with both avoir and être : as Ce drap-là est bien tissu, that cloth is well woven

Verbs IMPERSONAL are conjugated thus :

Indicative Mood.

Pres. Il y a,	{ there is. there are.	Il faut,	{ one, or it must, or it is necessary.
Imp. Il y avoit,	{ there was. there were.	Il falloit,	{ it was requisite, needful.
Pret. Il y eut,	{ there was. there were.	Il fallut,
Fut. Il y aura,	there shall or will be.	Il faudra,	it will be necessary, &c.
Cond. Il y auroit,	there would, &c.	Il faudroit,	it would, &c. be, &c.

Subjunctive.

Pres. il ait, there be, or may be.	il faille, it may be	} necessary, requisite, &c.
Pret. ^{qu} il y eût, there were, or might be.	il fallût, it were, or might be.

Infinitive.

Pres. y avoir, there to be. See in the Syntax what concerns
Ger. y ayant, there being. this impersonal.

Which impersonal verbs have also their compound tenses, formed by adding eu to each tense; as il y a eu there has or have been, il y avoit eu there had been, &c. The others form them from avoir, and their participle: as il a fallu it has been requisite, il avoit fallu it had been, &c. Il faut has no infinitive in use; but the others have one, as also gerunds and participles, which shall be set down here.

Indicative.		Infinitive.	Ger.	Part.
Il pleut	it rains;	from pleu-voir,	vant,	plu.*
Il bruïne,	it drizzles;	bruï-ner,	nant,	né.

Il neige,	it snows;	nei-ger,	geant,	gé.
Il tonne,	it thunders;	ton-ner,	nant,	né.
Il éclaire,	it lightens;	éclairer,	rant,	ré.
Il est, c'est, Il fait;	} it is;	} il fait is used with adnouns and some nouns denoting the disposition of the weather; as il fait chaud, beau, crotté, it is hot, fine, dirty; il fait du vent, the wind blows; il fait soleil, the sun shines, &c.

* The future and conditional of pleuvoir, are pleuvra, il pleuvroit, not pleuvraira.

† Il a gelé cette nuit, it froze last night.

Indicative.	Infinitive.	Ger.	Part.
Il arrive, it happens ;	from arriver,	vant,	vé.

Il paroît, it appears ;
Il sied, it is decent, or becoming.
Il s'ensuit que, it follows that ;	s'ensui-vre,	vant,	vi.
Il s'agit de cela, that is the matter in hand ;	ag-ir,	issant,	i.
Il vaut mieux que, it is better that ;	va-loir,	lant,	lu.
Il ne tient pas à lui que, it is not his fault if ;	te-nir,	nant,	nu.
Il m'ennuie de, &c. it tires me to, &c.	ennuy-er,	ant,	é.
Il plaît à Madame de, my Ladylikes, or is pleased to, &c.	plai-re.	sant,	plu.
Il se peut que, { it may be	pou-voir,	vant,	pu.
Il se peut faire que, { that, &c.
Il suffit que, &c. it is enough that, &c.	suffi-re,	sant,	suffi.
Il y va de la vie, life is at stake ;	al-ler,	lant,	lé.
Il se tint hier un conseil, a council was held yesterday ;	te-nir,	nant,	nu.

CHAP. VI.

Of ADVERBS.

THE ADVERB is a part of speech invariable, which neither governs nor is governed by any other, and serves to denote some circumstance of that which is signified by a Noun, an Adnoun, a Verb, or even an Adverb : as,

Véritablement ami, truly friend. très-souvent, very often.
aimer bien, to love well. étroitement unis, strictly united.
infiniment juste, infinitely just. toujours à contre tems, always unseasonably.

Adverbs are either simple, as hier yesterday, beaucoup much, présentement presently ; or compound, as avant-hier the day before yesterday, en quantité in plenty, à présent, tout-à-l'heure, at present, instantly.

Adverbs may be considered with respect to Time, Place, Order, Quantity and Number, Quality and Manner, Affirmation, Negation, and Doubt, Comparison, Collection, or Division, and Interrogation.

CHAP. IX.

Of PARTICLES.

THE PARTICLE is a part of speech which serves less to represent a thought, than the state or situation of the mind in the exhibition of its thoughts. Particles are divided into Discursive and Interjective, making a particular species of words, which cannot be ranged in any of the other parts of speech, and have a specific signification peculiar to them.

Discursive Particles.

ci,	cet homme-ci,	this man.
là,	cette femme-là,	that woman.
ça,	or ça, voyons,	now, let's see.

oui dà, ay, ay.
 voilà, there is, or there are

*Besides the articles le, la, les ;
 and these, invented to imitate
 the sounds of dumb creatures, and the noise which is occasioned by the clashing of bodies against one another, Bêê, Cric, Crac, Tick, Tac, Pouf, Patatras.*

Interjective Particles.

ah ! *ha, ha ! (for almost all the motions of the mind,
 as joy, fear, grief, &c. but differently uttered, according to the emotion which it expresses).*

hélas ! alas ! (for grief).

ouf, aï, or aye, pho ! (for pain).

bon, well, right, (for both assenting and dissenting to something, liking or disliking).

fi, fye upon (for dislike and aversion).

oh ! oh ! oh ! (for derision.)

que ! quoi ! how ! what ! (for exclamation).

Eh !
 bon Dieu !
 Miséricorde !
 O dame !

 } bless me,
 } Dear Sirs ! } (for surprise).

allons, } come on,
 courage, } cheer up, } (for encouraging those we speak to).
 alerte, } courage.

bis (s sounds), encore, again, (for repeating).

holà, hold, } (for repressing, checking, and stopping some tout beau, softly, } emotion).

paix, chut, 'st, hist, hush, (for silencing).

Garre, have a care, clear the way, (for making people go out of the way).

holà, ho, hem, o, ho, soho, (for calling).

Vive le Roi, }
 Vive la joie, } Huzza, (for shouting).
 Vivat, }

Zest, fiddlestick, pshaw, (for derision and dislike).

PART III.

Of SYNTAX or CONSTRUCTION.

SYNTAX is the regular joining of the Parts of Speech together, conformably to the genius of a language.

In the construction of the French speech, two things are most accurately to be considered: Concord and Government.

CONCORD is the absolute agreement of,

I. The Article and Adnoun with the Noun.

II. The Verb with its Subject.

III. The Relative with the Antecedent.

GOVERNMENT is the influence which some parts of speech have over others: as,

I. A Verb, Adnoun, or Preposition, over a Noun or Pronoun, in requiring it to be in such or such a state rather than in another.

II. A Conjunction, or Preposition over a Verb, which they govern in such or such a Mood.

III. A Noun over an Adnoun, by which sometimes it will be followed, and another time will give the Adnoun the precedency; as likewise Verbs over Adverbs, or Adverbs over themselves; some having the special privilege of coming before others, when they meet together in a sentence.

Herein consists the whole mystery of the French Tongue. Therefore, after having seen hitherto the form and nature of the words of which it is composed, we shall, in the same order, consider their Use and Construction.

CHAP. I.

Of NOUNS.

I. WHEN two or more Nouns come together, without a comma between them, they all govern each the next in the second state (or genitive case), and so on (that is, the first is always followed by the preposition de, either alone, or contracted with the article before the next noun); but that second state can never come in French before the noun that governs it, as in English, but after: as,

Les Gardes du Roi, the King's guards.

La porte de la maison, the house's gate.

La Philosophie de Newton, Newton's Philosophy.

Pour le service de la flotte du Roi, for the service of the King's fleet.

A Voici la maison de l'associé du frère de ma femme, here's my wife's brother's partner's house.

Elle avoit médiocrement d'esprit, she had a moderate understanding.

Sometimes of is left out in English, and the latter noun, instead of the preposition, is put former, and ends in s; as in the example, my wife's brother's partner's house, instead of the house of the partner of the brother of my wife.—Sometimes also the two nouns come together without of before the latter, or 's after the former, and like a compound word: as the chamber-door: but the first of them is governed of the second, which must always come first in French with one of these particles, de, du, des, before the governed, as in the said instances.

II. The Article and Adnoun agree with the Noun in gender and number: as,

Un beau Prince, a handsome Prince.

Une belle Princesse, a handsome Princess.

Le méchant homme, the wicked man.

La méchante femme, the wicked woman.

De méchantes gens, wicked people.

Nevertheless we say still Lettres royales (a law term), instead of Lettres patentes, or Patentes du Roi, Letters patent, used on all other occasions.

III. When two or more nouns of different numbers and genders, or genders only, have an adnoun common to both, it agrees in number and gender with the last; as,

Il avoit les yeux & la bouche ouverte, } His eyes and mouth or il avoit la bouche & les yeux ouverts, } were opened.

Il trouva les étangs & les rivières glacées, He found the ponds and rivers frozen.

But when there is one, or many words, between the last noun and the adnoun, that adnoun (common to all) agrees with the noun masculine, though the last noun be feminine: . and if D the nouns are singular, then the adnoun common shall be put in the plural number, and the masculine gender:

L'étang & la rivière étoient glacés,

The pond and river were frozen.

Les étangs & les rivières qu'il trouva glacés.

The ponds and rivers which he found frozen.

Le travail, la conduite, & la fortune joints ensemble, and not jointes (on account of the word ensemble, which presents a whole)

Pains, conduct, and fortune, joined together.

And when the adnoun (common to three or more nouns whether of the same or of different genders) is preceded and governed by the verb être, it must have another noun plural, A as choses, avantages, biens, maux, &c. to agree with : as,

L'or, l'argent, la renommée, les honneurs, & les dignités, sont des choses incertaines & périssables, or sont des biens incertains & périssables ; Gold, silver, fame, honours, and dignities, are uncertain and perishable.

¶ The above rule may hold good for metaphysical adnouns, as certain, incertain ; utile, inutile, &c. But verbal or rather participial adnouns, do not fall under it ; as Sous un gouvernement corrompu, les emplois, les pensions, les honneurs, & les dignités sont souvent accordés & même prodigués à ceux qui les méritent le moins ; Under a corrupt administration, places, pensions, honours, and dignities are often bestowed and even lavished upon those who deserve them the least. Here the intermediate noun choses, &c. could not be used, unless the sentence should be made active ; as, sont des choses que l'on accorde, &c. For the same reason, in the preceding paragraph, we say : L'é- B tang & la rivière étoient glacés, not des choses glacées.

Chose, a thing (noun feminine), joined to quelque (quelque chose something), is masculine, and therefore requires the next adnoun or pronoun relative to agree with that gender : as,

Je suis assis sur quelque chose, qui me paroît dur, I sit upon something that feels hard ; Quand j'ai perdu quelque chose, je le cherche, when I have lost something, I look for it.

Partie, a part (a noun fem.), governing a noun masc. and attended by an adnoun, won't have the adnoun agree with it, but with that noun masc. which it governs in the second state : as,

Il a une partie du bras cassé, and not cassée, a part of his arm is broken.

Il trouva une partie de ses hommes morts, and not morte, he found a part of his men dead.

It is the same with these words, la plupart, the most part ; foule, crowd ; troupe, multitude, multitude ; nombre, number ; moitié, half ; espèce, kind ; C sorte, sort ; governing a noun masc. and attended by an adnoun : as,

Quand il vit la plupart, or la moitié de ses soldats étendus par terre or tués, and not étendue and tuée, when he saw the most part, or half of his soldiers lying down or killed ; une troupe de gens étourdis, and not étourdie, a multitude of giddy people ; une espèce de bois qui est fort dur, and not dure, a kind of wood which is very hard ; une sorte de vin qui est assez bon, not bonne, a pretty good sort of wine.

But the other collective nouns are not liable to that construction, and we say :

Le tiers des vignes est gelé, not gelées, the third part of the vines are frozen ; les trois quarts du château furent brûlés, and not fut brûlé, three parts out of four of the castle were burnt.

And if the noun governed in the second state be feminine, the adnoun agrees likewise with its gender ; as,

Quand il vit une partie de son armée défaite, when he saw a part of his army defeated ; une espèce de pierre qui est fort dure, a kind of stone very hard ; une D sorte de liqueur assez bonne, a tolerable good sort of liquor.

(See also page 284, and foll.)

CHAP. II.

Of the ARTICLE.

NOUNS express things, 1^o, in a general and universal sense, including the whole species of the thing signified by the word : as Man was born, or Men were born for society, L'homme est né, or les hommes sont nés pour la société. Man and Men is said of human kind, and signifies every man and woman.

A 2°. In a particular and individual sense, denoting a particular object, one individual only of a species: as The earth turns, and not the sun, Le terre tourne, & non le soleil; The man of whom I speak is not sociable, L'homme dont je parle n'est pas sociable. The earth, the sun, denote particular objects; and the man is taken in an individual sense, for I speak of one man only, and I show who that man is who is not sociable, to wit, he I speak of.

3°. In a limited or partitive sense, denoting neither the totality or universality, nor any particular individual of the species, but only part of it: as bread is enough for me, Du pain me suffit; Give me some meat and beer, Donnez-moi de la viande & de la bière. We daily see men that have less reason than brutes, On voit tous les jours des hommes qui ont moins de raison que des bêtes: Bread, meat, beer, men, and brutes, are not taken in the general sense, that includes the totality of the substance and species; for I do not speak of all the bread, meat, beer, in the world, nor of all men and brutes, but only of part of those substances, and some of those species.—Neither do I speak of any particular part of those substances, nor of any individual man or brute. Therefore these words are taken in a limited sense.

4°. Nouns express things in an indefinite and unspecified sense, not so much serving to name any particular thing, as to qualify that which has been named before; as Kings are men as well as others, Les Rois sont hommes comme les autres; She is a woman, Elle est femme: Man and woman are not used, in these and other like sentences, in order to name the things which are the subject of the speech, but only to qualify this noun Kings, and pronoun she, which are spoken of, in showing what both are.

It appears from these observations, wherein the ways of using nouns are carefully analysed, that they require the article in all the senses but one, in which they may be taken; that the article is the same in all relations and circumstances of the noun, being le for the masc. la for the fem. and les for the plur. masc. and fem. and that the limited sense, which excludes both the universality and individuality, is expressed by the particle de before the articles, with which it is contracted, according to the genius of the language, when the noun is masculine, and begins with a consonant.

Nothing therefore is more plain, and easy to explain, than the construction of the article, and yet nothing has been more perplexed by our Grammarians, who are at a loss how to treat it, making it several fold, and all dividing it into definite and indefinite, and subverting it besides, without being able to define what they mean, or to account for the construction of the article. The following are clear, exact, and easy rules concerning the whole matter.

† Proper Names of Persons and Places, as Towns, Villages, &c. take no Article. See p. 214. 12^o.

The Article is used, 1^o, before the names of the things which are spoken of. Therefore nouns of Substances, Arts, Sciences, Metals, Virtues and Vices, nouns of Countries, Kingdoms, and Provinces, Mountains, Rivers, and Winds, and others like, having no article before them in English, require the article in French; as,

L'or & l'argent ne sauroient faire le bonheur de l'homme, B
Gold and Silver cannot make the happiness of man.

La vertu seule peut le rendre heureux, & il n'y a que le vice qui puisse le rendre malheureux,

Virtue alone can make him happy, and nothing but vice can make him unhappy or miserable.

La France est le plus beau pays de l'Europe,
France is the finest country in Europe.

Le sort de l'Espagne dépend de la Havanne,
The fate of Spain depends upon the Havana.

C'est à l'Angleterre qu'on doit la découverte de la circulation du sang,

It is to England the world is beholden for the discovery of the circulation of the blood.

From the nouns of Countries, Kingdoms, and Provinces, except these, which take their names from their capital city, besides some Republics.

Alger,	Algier.	Florence,	Florence.	Monaco,	Monaco.
Avignon,	Avignon.	Grenade,	Grenada.	Naples,	Naples.
Babylone,	Babylon.	Gènes,	Genoa.	Orange,	Orange.
Candie,	Candia.	Genève,	Geneva.	Rome,	Rome.
Cordoue,	Cordova.	Lucques,	Lucca.	Séville,	Seville.
Corse,	Corsica.	Léon,	Leon.	Tolède,	Toledo.
Comminges,	Comminges.	Malte,	Malta.	Tunis,	Tunis.
Cornouailles,	Cornwall.	Maroc,	Morocco.	Tripoli,	Tripoli.
Chypre,	Cyprus.	Murcie,	Murcia.	Valence,	Valentia.
Carthage,	Carthage.	Madagascar,	Madagascar.	Venice,	Venice.

Except some few, taken notice of in my Exercises; those proper names of countries are commonly used with one of these before them, république, principauté, état, pays, île; as l'île de Candie ou de Malte, the island of Candia or Malta; le pays d'Avignon, the country of Avignon; la principauté d'Orange, the principality of Orange; la république de Genève, the republic of Geneva, &c.

2^o. When the words attending the names of Countries and Kingdoms (in Europe), respect them immediately as to coming from, or going out, the names of those countries are used without the article.

Therefore we say with the preposition de only, Venir de France, to come from France: Sortir d'Angleterre, to go out of England.

A With words denoting the country one lives in, and whither one is going or coming to, we use the preposition en before the names of those countries, because this preposition does not admit of the article: as,

Demeurer en France, to live in France; Aller en Italie, to go to Italy; Venir or Passer en Angleterre, to come over or pass over to England.

¶ This rule respects only the names of Countries; for with the names of Towns, Places, &c. the preposition à is used instead of en, and we say:

Aller à Rome, to go to Rome; Venir à Londres, to come to London; Demeurer à Paris, to live at Paris.

B When the name of a Kingdom or Province expresses the country of the noun coming immediately before, it is used also without the article, and with the preposition de only, because it is used adjectively.

Roi or Royaume d'Angleterre, King or Kingdom of England.
Gouverneur ou Gouvernement d'Irlande.

Viceroy or Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, or his place.

Vin de Bourgogne, ou de Champagne, Burgundy or Champagne wine.

L'Electeur de Bavière, The Elector of Bavaria.

Une mode de France, A French fashion, &c.

These following names of Countries always keep the article:

l'Inde ,	India.	le Zanguébar ,	Zanguebar.	le Pont-Euxin ,	the Black
l'Indostan ,	Indostan.	le Mexique ,	Mexico.	Sea.

la Cafrerie ,	Coast of the	la Havanne ,	the Havanna.	le Spitzberg ,	Spitzberg.
Cafres .				le Groënland ,	Greenland

* l'Anjou ,	le Catelet .	la Flèche .	le Puy (a word sig-
* l'Artois .	le Cateau	la Guerche .	nifying Mount).
* le Maine .	la Fère .	la Hogue .	le Quénoi .
* la Marche .	la Ferté .	le Mans .	la Rochelle .
* le Perche .	la Charité .	le Plessis .	la Haye , the Hague.
* la Capelle .	le Havre de Grâce .

* These six are names of countries, and the others of cities of France, except la Haye.

Therefore, instead of the prepositions en and de, used alone in the cases mentioned in the second paragraph, with respect to all other countries, when we speak of these last, we use both the preposition a, or de, and the article: as,

Voyager aux Indes, to travel to the Indies. Aller au Japon, to go to Japan. Demeurer à la Chine, to live in China. Partir du Mexique, to set out from Mexico. Revenir du Maine, de l'Artois, de l'Anjou, to return from the Main, &c.

Nevertheless we say, aller dans l'Anjou, dans l'Artois, dans le Perche, to go into Anjou, &c. le Duc d'Anjou, the Duke of Anjou, and le Duc du Maine, the Duke of Maine. We say too Empereur or Empire de la Chine, and not de Chine, Emperor or Empire of China; Porcelaines de la Chine, China-ware; Marchandises du Japon, Japan-goods.

3°. When a River's name is preceded by the word rivière, it takes no article, and is contented with the preposition de only, if it is of the feminine gender: otherwise they all take the article: as,

La rivière de Seine, the river Seine: or, la Seine, la Tamise, &c.

But it is to be noted, 1st, that some rivers cannot be construed with the word rivière before them, but they all take the article, as, le Rhin, le Rhône, &c. we don't say la rivière du Rhin, la rivière de la Tamise, as in English, the river Thames. 2dly, That the word fleuve (synonymous with rivière) can never be put before the proper name of a river; so that we don't say le fleuve de Seine, or de la Seine, le fleuve du Rhône, or de Rhône. 3dly, The French call fleuve a river that carries its waters to the sea; and rivière any river that discharges itself into another: though they use the word rivière before the names of such rivers as they call fleuves. One might perhaps say, without impropriety, le fleuve Scamandre, le fleuve Simois (two rivers in Troas;) but it is still better, as being more sure, to say only le Scamandre, le Simois, le Danube, la Moselle, l'Escaut, and so of all other rivers, without putting the word rivière before, which, as we have observed, cannot be put before a great many rivers.

4°. When a Mount's, Mountain's, or Hill's name is preceded by the word mont, it has neither article nor preposition: as le mont Vésuve, Vesuvius; le mont Apennin, the Appenine; les monts Pyrénées, the Pyrenean mountains. After the word montagne, it takes the preposition de (which is contracted with the article, when the name of the hill has it), as la montagne du Potosi, mount Potosi; la montagne de Sion, mount Sion; la montagne du Calvaire, the mount of Calvary. Otherwise they all take the article: as, le Vésuve, l'Apennin, les Pyrénées; le Calvaire, le Pic, &c.

Some nouns of hills and mountains will always be preceded by either of these two words, mont, montagne, as la montagne du Potosi, la montagne de Sion, or le mont Sion; we also say, le Potosi, but never le Sion, la Sion: some others can never be construed with those words, as les Alpes, les Cordillères, the Cordilleras. We neither say les montagnes des Alpes, nor les monts Alpes, as we say les monts Pyrénées; although we denote les Alpes by les monts in this phrase, un bel esprit de delà les monts, or un bel esprit ultramontain, ultramontane wit, or genius.

5°. The noun of the Measure, Weight, and Number of the things that have been bought, requires the article le in French, whereas the indefinite article a is used in English: as,

Le blé se vend un écu le boisseau, wheat is sold for a crown a bushel.

A Le beurre vaut six sous la livre, butter costs six-pence a pound.
Les œufs valent quatre sous la douzaine, eggs cost a groat a dozen.

¶ In the following phrases, and the like, the French article le is likewise used, instead of the English indefinite article a :

Dans la prospérité on peut difficilement reconnoître l'ami, it is difficult to know a friend in prosperity ; l'air spirituel dans les hommes, a sprightly mien in men ; le chien est l'ami de l'homme, the dog is a friend to man.

6°. These following prepositions (twenty-one in number) generally will have the article before the next noun.

avant ,	before.	envers ,	towards.	pendant ,	for
après ,	after.	excepté ,	except.	selon ,	according.
B chez ,	at, to.	hors ,	out.	sous ,	under.
dans ,	in.	hormis ,	except.	suivant ,	according.
depuis ,	since.	nonobstant ,	{	notwith-sur ,	upon.
devant ,	before.			standing.touchant ,	concerning.
derrière ,	behind.	parmi ,	among.	vers ,	towards.
durant ,	during.

As chez le Prince, at the Prince's ; dans la chambre, in the room ; sous la table, under the table, &c.

En will have no article before the next noun ; as en ville in town, en campagne in the country, &c. and

The following prepositions sometimes require the article before the next noun (when it is used as a Demonstration or Appellation) ; and sometimes not (when it is used only as a

C Modification or Qualification) :

à	at; to.	contre ,	against.	pour ,	for.
de ,	of, from.	entre ,	between.	outré ,	besides.
avec ,	with.	par ,	by.	sans ,	without.

Examples will make this rule more plain to those who are not used to abstract observations.

Sans les passions où seroient la vertu & le vice ?

Without passions, where would virtue and vice be ?

Vivre sans passions c'est vivre sans plaisirs,

Living without passions is living without pleasures.

D Passions, vertu, and vice, in the first sentence, are used as denominations, or names of the thing which are the subject of our speech. Passions and plaisirs, are not used in the second, as denominations : for they are not the things of which something is said ; vivre (living) is the thing spoken of : but they are used as modifications or qualifications, showing what sort of living is spoken of.

7°. The article is used before all nouns of Dignities, Qualities, Offices, and Professions, even before Names or abusing words, so they come after such names as Monsieur, Monseigneur, Madame, Mademoiselle: as, Monsieur le Dauphin, the Dauphin; Madame la Duchesse, my Lady Duchess; Mr. le Docteur, Doctor; Monseigneur l'Archevêque, my Lord Archbishop; Monsieur le Paresseux, Mr. Lazy-bones or Idle-back; Madame la Coureuse, Mrs. Gad-about; Mademoiselle la Libertine, Miss Romp, &c.

Except with nouns of Trades and mechanical Professions, which never take Monsieur or Madame before them. Thus we do not say of or to Merchants, Taylors, Shoemakers, &c. Mr. le Marchand, Mr. le Tailleur, Mr. le Cordonnier.

The article is used in speaking and calling to the people; which relation of the noun answers to the Vocative of the Latin: B

Ecoutez, la belle fille, hark ye, pretty girl.

Parlez l'homme; parlez, la femme, Speak to me, man or woman.

We also say without the article, but with an adnoun before the noun, or without any noun at all: Ecoutez, bon homme, ou bonne femme, hark ye, good man or woman; Etudiez, paresseux, study, you idle fellow.—Calling to a coachman we say without the article, Cocher, êtes-vous loué? Coachman, are you hired? though we call to a man that sells rabbits about the streets, or to an herb-woman, with the article, l'homme aux lapins, la femme aux herbes. This oddness of expression will be the best learnt by practice. It is enough to have taken notice of it.

As for the particle interjective ô before nouns, it is used only with exclamation: as, O infortuné que je suis! O unhappy me! O femme, que ta vertu est grande! How great is thy virtue, O woman! C

8°. The article is used with nouns having an adnoun before them in sentences of admiration and exclamation; in which case the noun is always repeated with que between, without any verb. These ways of speaking are rendered in English as follows:

L'illustre maison que la maison de Bourbon!

What an illustrious house the house of Bourbon is!

Le sage Roi que le Roi de Prusse!

What a wise and prudent king the king of Prussia is!

L'indigne traitement que celui qu'elle m'a fait souffrir!

How unworthy is the treatment I have received from her! D

9°. When the noun is not taken in a general and universal sense, including the whole species; nor in the particular and individual sense, denoting a particular object, one particular individual of the species; but denotes only part of the substance or thing signified by the noun; that limited sense is expressed by the particle de before the article, or contracted with it, if the noun is masculine. (See p. 111. & 113.) Nouns taken in that sense imply the word some, which in English is sometimes expressed, sometimes not, and in French is never understood: as,

A Donnez-moi du pain, de la viande, de l'argent, des habits;
 Give me some bread, some meat, money, clothes.
Cette liqueur ressemble à du vin, that liquor is like wine.
J'ai affaire à des gens fort honnêtes,
 I have to do with very honest people.

Apportez-moi un morceau de pain, une bouchée de viande, une bouteille de vin, & un carafon d'eau; bring me a bit of bread, a mouthful of meat, a bottle of wine, and a decanter of water.

Il y a de l'esprit dans cet ouvrage. C'est un ouvrage d'esprit:
 There is some wit in this work. It is a work of wit or genius.

But when the noun is preceded by an adnoun, it loses its article, and is contented with the particle de: as,

Donnez-moi de bon pain, de bonne viande, de bons habits;
 Give me good bread, good meat, good clothes.

J'ai affaire à de fort honnêtes gens, I have to do with very, &c.

B Again, On l'a dépouillé de belles charges qu'il possédoit, he has been divested of fine places which he enjoyed; On l'a dépouillé des belles charges qu'il possédoit, he has been stript of the fine places which he was possessed of. The word charge is restrained in the first sentence, by the limiting particle de, and signifies only some of his places; whereas, in the other sentence, the article contracted with the preposition (des for de les) shows that the word is taken in the universal sense, and signifies all his places. From whence you may observe, that some expressions that seem to be alike in French, are very far from being so.

10°. In many cases either of these two particles, du or un, may be used, but with this difference:

When the noun is used without an adnoun, it requires du; and un, when with an adnoun: as,

C Il y a du danger à aller sur mer, there is danger in going to sea.
Ceux qui vont sur mer, courent un grand danger, or de grands dangers, those who go to sea run a great danger, or great dangers.

J'entends du bruit (and not un bruit), I hear a noise.

J'entends un grand bruit (and not du), I hear a great noise.

The particle un (which is no more an article than quelque, tout, &c.) is used in speaking of things that can be told one by one; or are denoted by opposition to two or more; as, J'ai un pain, I have a loaf; Jene veux qu'une pomme, I will have but one apple.

11°. The pronouns moi, toi, soi; ce, celui; qui, quel (taken in the sense of what); mon, ton, son, &c. used either with or without the prepositions, de, à, &c. take no article: But mien, tien, sien, &c. même, and quel in the sense of which, always require it: as,

D De qui parlez vous? De quel homme parlez-vous?
 Who are you speaking of? Of what man are you speaking?
Duquel? De laquelle? De lui, D'elle, D'eux.
 Of which? Of him, Of her, Of them.

12°. No article is used with proper names of Persons, Places, and Planets (except la terre the earth, le soleil the sun, la lune the moon), and before these nouns of honour which use has prefixed to proper names.

Monsieur, Sir, Master,	Maître , Master,	} a particular title of some persons of dis- tinction, and Saints.	A
Madame, Madam,	Messire ,
Mademoiselle, Miss,	Saint ,
Monseigneur, my Lord,	Sainte ,

When these nouns are used without the pronoun of which they are composed, they take the article: as, le Sieur, la Dame, la Demoiselle, &c. We also say, le Monsieur qui est venu, the gentleman who came; les Messieurs qui sont ici, the gentlemen who are here; and never les Mesdames, nor les Messeigneurs: but les Dames, les Seigneurs.

From proper names, except some of renowned Poets and Painters of Italy, which keep the article: B

Le Tasse,	l'Arioste,	le Titien,	le Poussin,	l'Arétin.
du Tasse,	de l'Arioste,	du Titien,	du Poussin,	de l'Arétin.
au Tasse,	à l'Arioste,	au Titien,	au Poussin,	à l'Arétin.

Add to them le Bourdon, le Brugle, le Carache, le Corrège, le Guide, le Guerchin, le Mutien, le Tintoret, l'Albane, le Bernardin, le Dominicain, l'Espagnolet, le Pinturicchio. But we don't say le Michel-Ange, le Raphaël, &c.

When any of these particles, le, la, de, du, des, make part of the proper name, it is never contracted with the prepositions:

Du Pré,	Le Maître,	De Tourville,	La Place,
de Du Pré,	de Le Maître,	de De Tourville,	de La Place.
à Du Pré,	à Le Maître,	à De Tourville, &c.	à La Place.

And when we speak in a contemptuous manner of a woman (it is always the case when we speak of a woman of the town), we use the article, besides the particle of the proper name: as, Je ne veux plus voir la Du Pré, I will see Du Pre's wife no more. C

That contemptuous manner of expressing was formerly used also in speaking of an actress, but now it ceases to prevail, since talents are more regarded than the private life of the person; and we say, in speaking of a celebrated actress, Madame, Mademoiselle.

The preposition de is sometimes left out before the word saint, for abbreviation sake; as l'Eglise St. Paul, St. Paul's Church; le Cimetière St. Jean (a famous place in Paris), la foire St. Laurent. St. Laurence's fair: la porte St. Denis, St. Denis's gate; le Faubourg St. Germain (one of the suburbs of Paris). We also say le Quai Pelletier (a key at Paris). le Cours la Reine, and le Bourg la Reine (proper names of places).

13°. When proper names are used in a determinate sense, that is, when they are applied to particular objects, or qualified by an adnoun, they take the article: as,

Le Dieu des Chrétiens, the God of Christians; le bon Dieu ne sauroit être cruel, God Almighty cannot be cruel; l'Archimède d'Angleterre, the Archimedes of England; l'Amphitruon de Molière, the Amphitruon of Moliere; les Cicérons & les Démosthènes (and sometimes les Cicéron, les Démosthène), the Cicero's and the Demosthenes's; Monsieur le Brun, Master Brown. D

We say without the article: Jean épousera Marie, John will marry Mary; and with the article le vieux Janot aime la jeune Babet, old Jack loves young Betty.

A I cannot help anticipating here the construction of the preposition de, and considering some of the relations which it denotes.

14°. The preposition de only, without the article, is used,

1st. Before nouns following one of these, sorte, espèce, genre, and any other noun of which they express the Kind, Character, Cause, Matter, Quality, Nature, and Country: which tribe of nouns are usually englished by an adnoun, or even by the noun itself, placed adjectively, and making together, as it were, but a word compound: as,

Un mal de tête, the head-ache; une sorte de fruit, a sort of fruit; une étoffe de soie, a silk-stuff; une montre d'or, a gold-watch; de la laine d'Espagne, Spanish wool: une conduite de fou, a foolish conduct, &c.

Sometimes the English adnoun may be rendered likewise by an adnoun in French; as in the last example, une conduite folle, a foolish conduct; but sometimes too the French have no adnoun of the same nature as the English adnoun, and therefore express the English adnoun by a noun of the same signification with de before the other noun: as,

Ma diablesse de femme,

My devilish wife.

Mon vaurien de fils & sa coquine de mère,

My good-for-nothing son, and his worthless mother.

Sometimes the English express themselves after the same manner as the French, except that the French have no other particle before the second noun but de: as,

C'est un Diable d'homme,
He is a Devil of a man.

C 2dly, Before the word of the measure of Magnitude or Increase: as il croît tous les jours d'un pouce, it grows an inch every day.

3dly, After pronouns indeterminate, Personne, Quelqu'un, &c. Quoi, ce qui, ce que, tout ce qui, Je ne sais quoi, and the impersonal il y a: as,

Il n'y a personne de blessé, there is nobody wounded.

Y en avoit-il quelqu'un d'ivre? Was any of them drunk?

Il y a dans son style je ne sais quoi de dur, his style has I don't know what harshness in it.

Ce que je remarque de drôle, What I observe comical, &c.

4thly, Before a participle when a noun of number precedes:

D as, Il y a trente vaisseaux d'achevés, there are thirty ships finished: il y eut cent hommes de tués, there were an hundred men killed.

It may be sometimes left out, when the noun is expressed before the participle, as in the aforesaid sentences, cent hommes tués, trente vaisseaux achevés; but those sentences are more usually and elegantly construed with the particle de; whereas it cannot be omitted after the noun of number, when the relative pronoun en stands in the sentence for the noun: as,

Il y en a trente d'achevés, thirty of them are finished.

Il y en eut cinquante de tués & cent de blessés, there were A fifty men killed and an hundred wounded.

5thly, The preposition de, without the article, is used after these words of quantity :

abondance,	abondance de vivres,	plenty of victuals.
assez,	assez de provisions,	provisions enough.
beaucoup,	beaucoup d'esprit,	much wit.
combien,	combien de vaisseaux,	how many ships.
disette,	disette de savans,	scarcity of learned men.
guères,	guères d'argent,	very little money.
peu,	peu de gens croient,	few people think.
plus & moins,	plus d'effets & moins	more deeds and fewer B
	de paroles,	words.
à l'avantage,	Je n'en ai pas davantage,	I have no more of it.
quantité,	quantité de fruit,	a great deal of fruit.
grand nombre,	grand nombre de	a vast number of
	Grammaires,	Grammars.
tant,	tant d'écrivains le disent,	so many writers say so.
autant,	autant de femmes que	as many women as
	d'hommes,	men.
trop,	trop de peine,	too much trouble.
	As likewise after,
point & pas,	{ point de sens commun,	no common sense.
	{ pas de monnoie,	no change.
jamais,	il n'a jamais d'argent,	he never has any money.
que,	que de peines & de soins!	what care and trouble!
quoi,	quoi de plus juste!	what can be fairer!
rien,	rien de remarquable,	nothing remarkable.
quelque chose,	quelque chose de bon,	something good.

Bien is also used for beaucoup, with this difference, that bien requires after it the article ; as,

bien de la peine,	} or {	beaucoup de peine,	much pain.
bien du temps,		beaucoup de temps,	much time.
bien de l'argent,		beaucoup d'argent,	much money.

Observe, that assez is never put in French after the noun which it governs, D as in English, but always before : as, assez de temps, time enough.

But if the noun that comes after those words is determined by what follows, it requires the article besides : as,

Donnez-moi un peu de vin,	Un peu du vin qui est dans cette bouteille,
Give me a little wine.	A little of the wine which is in that bottle.
J'ai encore beaucoup d'argent,	Beaucoup de l'argent que j'ai apporté de
I have a good deal of money still.	France.
	A good deal of the money which I brought from France.

15°. Nouns are used without either article or preposition in these following cases. 1st, At the title of a performance ; in

A the middle of sentences, where they characterise in a particular manner the person or thing spoken of; and when they are used by apposition; in which cases the English use especially the participle a: as,

Discours sur les obligations de la Religion naturelle,

A Discourse concerning the obligations of natural religion.

Première partie—Préface,—Table des Matières,

The first part—The Preface,—The Contents.

Le Comte de Clermont, Prince du sang, mourut le, &c.

The Count of Clermont, a Prince of the blood, died the, &c.

Le St. George, vaisseau de guerre de quatre-vingt-dix pièces de canon,

The St. George, a ninety-gun ship.

B Les plus belles fleurs sont de bien peu de durée. La moindre pluie les ternit, le vent les fane, le soleil les brûle, & achève de les sécher; sans parler d'une infinité d'insectes qui les gâtent & les incommodent: naturelle & véritable image de la beauté des Dames! The handsomest flowers last but a very short time. The least rain tarnishes them, the wind withers them, the sun scorches them, and completes the drying of them; without mentioning an infinite number of insects that spoil and hurt them: a natural and true image of Ladies' beauty!

C 2dly, When they come after a pronoun interrogative, or exclamative; as also in sentences of exclamation; as, Quel esprit elle a! Quelle beauté! Quelle Dame avez-vous vue? What a wit she has! What a beauty! What Lady have you seen?

3dly, When they meet with a noun of number, whether it comes before or after them; which noun of number, when it is used as a surname to Kings and Sovereigns, always comes the last, and is the Cardinal Number, and not the Ordinal (except in two cases), as in English: as,

Mille cavaliers contre cent fantassins, la partie n'est pas égale,

D A thousand horse against an hundred foot, is not fair. Louis quinze, Lewis the fifteenth. Henry quatre, Henry the 4th.

But if, besides the number, the noun had a relation to something else, it would take the article: as,

Les cent fantassins qui se sont défendus contre les mille cavaliers qu'on avoit envoyés contre eux, &c. The hundred foot who fought with the thousand horse that were sent against them, &c.

4thly, After the verb être, having not ce for its subject (c'est); as likewise after devenir to become, être estimé, être pris pour, passer pour, to be reckoned, to be accounted, to pass for: because the noun serves then only to qualify something spoken of, A and not to name: as, mes paroles sont esprit & vie, my words are spirit and life; les Rois sont hommes, Kings are men; elle est femme, or c'est une femme, she is a woman; il passe pour matelot, he passes for a sailor; il deviendra Docteur avec le temps, he will prove a Doctor in time. (See p. 329, and 335.)

But if the noun coming after être, or any of the said verbs, is attended by an adnoun, or any other appurtenance, it takes the particle un: as, Dieu est esprit, God is a spirit; Dieu est un esprit infini, God is an infinite spirit; Dieu est un Etre qui a toutes les perfections possibles, God is a Being who has all possible perfections, &c. B

5thly, When nouns are used in an undeterminate and unspecified sense, as likewise in a pathetic way of speaking, or proverbially: as,

Le sage n'a ni amour ni haine, the wise man has neither love nor hatred. Il est plein de vin, it is full of wine. Intérêt, honneur, conscience, sont sacrifiés, interest, honour, conscience, are sacrificed. Plus fait douceur que violence, gentle means are more successful than violent ones.

16°. No article is put before an adnoun separated from its C noun; as, Les hommes sont méchants, men are wicked; unless, 1st, the adnoun is used substantively, or the noun is understood: as, speaking of wine and colours, J'aime mieux le rouge que le blanc, I like red better than white. Le verd blesse moins la vue que le rouge, green hurts the eyes less than red.

Il faut préférer l'utile à l'agréable; we must prefer useful things to those that are agreeable.

2dly, Unless it is to qualify a proper name, and distinguish between several persons who could go by the same name: as, Louis le bien-aimé, Louis the well-beloved; Chilpéric le fainéant, Chilperic the sluggish. D

¶ Verbs, adverbs, prepositions, and conjunctions may also be used substantively; in which case they take the article masculine: as,

Le boire, le manger, le dormir; Drinking, eating, sleeping. Sometimes the article is likewise left out in French).

Le pourquoi & le comment de toutes choses; The why and the how of every thing.

Le pour & le contre; The pro and con. . .

Il ne loue guères sans quelque mais; He seldom praises without some restriction.

Il n'y faut pas mettre tant de si & de mais: You must not use so many ifs and ands.

17°. When a noun has two adnouns joined together by a conjunction, the article is sometimes repeated before each adnoun, and sometimes not. If the adnouns are synonymous, or near-a-

A kin in their signification, the article is put only before the first as,

La belle & savante harangue qu'il a faite,
The fine and learned speech which he made.

But if the adnouns are of a contrary signification, or have a quite different sense, the article must be repeated: as,

Le savant & le pieux personnage, the pious and learned man: because pious and learned signify two different things.

Monsieur l'Abbé Girard, one of our best Grammarians, words this rule thus: "Whenever many adjectives qualify a noun in such a manner that they, between them, divide its totality, each of them denoting but part of the sense of the substantive, then the article is repeated before each adjective: as,

B " Les vieux & les nouveaux régimens ont fait des merveilles,
" Both the old and new regiments have done wonders.
" Les belles & les laides femmes, ont également envie de plaire,
" Both the handsome and homely women want to please.

" But when the adjectives denote no division of the sense of the substantive, but barely make an addition of qualities, the article is not repeated: as,

" Les grands et vastes projets, joints à la prompte & sage exécution, font le grand ministre, Great and vast projects, together with a speedy and wise execution, make the great minister."

18°. Articles are repeated in French before as many nouns (requiring the article) as there are in the sentence: as,

L'or, l'argent, la santé, les honneurs, & les plaisirs ne sauroient rendre l'homme heureux, sans la science & la vertu.

C Gold, silver, health, honours, and pleasures, cannot make a man happy, without wisdom and virtue.

¶ Prepositions are also repeated before every noun.

There are a great number of nouns that take no article after some verbs, with which they form particular ideas and idiomatical expressions. I will give a list of them in a more proper place. (See p. 416.)

Moreover, observe, that we may sometimes indifferently use the noun with or without the article, when with respect to what one intimates, it is indifferent to modify or restrain the signification of the noun, so that it exhibits any sense in which it may be taken. Thus, on some occasions, we may say:

or Les gens d'esprit, } font toujours plaisir, Ingenious people are or even Gens d'esprit, } agreeable at all times:

D because the subject implies only the idea of the ingenious people.

The practice of these 18 or 20 observations on the article being pretty difficult to Foreigners, and even such as are daily unregarded, on most occasions, by the generality of the French, I have enlarged much upon them in my exercise to these rules, wherein the learners will be made sensible by practice of what they may possibly find hard to understand in this treatise.

CHAP. III.

Of Adnouns.

§ I. OF Adnouns, some are put before the noun, and some after, and others may be put indifferently either before or after it.

1°. Pronominal adnouns (or rather possessive articles), mon, A ton, leur, &c. Pronouns indefinite, quel, autre, chaque, plusieurs, quelque, &c. except quelconque; and Numbers, both cardinal, ordinal, and proportional, come before the noun, as in English: as,

Mon père my father, leur maison their house, quelle femme what woman, chaque homme every man, deux personnes two people, le premier homme the first man, la dernière place the last place, un double profit a double profit, &c.

But when the Number stands for a Surname, or meets with a Proper or Christian name, it comes after the noun without article; as George second, George the second; Louis quinze, B Lewis the fifteenth.

When a book, or some part of a book, as chapter, article, page, &c. is quoted, the number may come either before or after the noun; but with this difference, that if it comes after, the two words are construed without the article; as, livre premier, chapitre second, article troisième, book i. chapter ii. article iii. if before, it takes the article. It may also come after the noun with the article before; as, le troisième chapitre, or le chapitre troisième, the third chapter

2°. These following adnouns come after the noun:

1st, Verbal adnouns: as, un homme divertissant a comical or merry man, la mode régnante the fashion in vogue, un pays habité an inhabited country, une femme estimée a woman esteemed.

2dly, Adnouns of names of nations: as, un Mathématicien C Anglois an English Mathematician, un Tailleur François a French Tailor, la Musique Italienne Italian Music, &c.

3dly, Adnouns of colour: as, un habit noir a black coat, un manteau rouge a red cloak, &c.

Except these three, when joined to these nouns, with which they make but a compound noun: as un blanc-manger, blan-mange (a sort of dainty dish); un rouge-bord, a brimmer; une rouge-trogne, a red face; un rouge-gorge, a Robin-red-breast; un rouge-queue, a red tail; un verd-galant, a brisk spark; and les Blancs-Manteaux (the name of a Friary).

4thly, Adnouns of figure: as, une table ronde a round table, une chambre carrée a square room, &c.

5thly, Adnouns expressing some physical, or natural quality; D such as chaud, hot; froid, cold; pur, pure; humide, wet; amer, bitter; bossu, hunch-back; and others respecting taste, hearing, feeling, &c. as, un temps froid ou chaud, cold or warm weather; du vin pur, pure wine; un arbre fruitier, a fruit-tree; du fruit amer, bitter fruit; des jambes crochues, crooked legs; de la chair vive, quick flesh; la religion naturelle, natural religion, &c. Except du vis-argent, quicksilver (pronounce vivarjan).

6thly, Adnouns ending in esque, il, ile, and ule: as, une figure grotesque, an odd sort of figure; un discours puéril, a childish discourse; un enfant docile, a tractable child; une femme crédule, a credulous woman, &c.

A 7thly, Adnouns ending in ic, ique, and if (tho' some may also come before the noun); as le bien public, the public good; un esprit pacifique, a pacific mind; un enfant vif, a quick child; &c. Except, again, du vif-argent.

8thly, Adnouns ending in able (mostly derived from verbs): for tho' some may also come before the noun, yet one can never speak improperly in placing them after; as, une terre labourable, arable land; un pays inhabitable, an uninhabitable country; une personne aimable, or une aimable personne, a lovely person; &c.

B 3°. Of common adnouns these sixteen generally come before the noun:

beau ,	fine.	gros ,	big.	moindre ,	less.
bon ,	good.	jeune ,	young.	petit ,	little.
brave ,	brave.	mauvais ,	bad, ill.	saint ,	holy.
cher ;	dear.	méchant ,	naughty.	vieux ,	old.
chétif ,	sorry.	meilleur ,	better.	vrai ,	true.
grand ,	great.

As un beau garçon, a fine boy; un gros ventre, a big belly; de bon pain, good bread; un petit visage, a little face; un brave officier, a brave officer; un chétif cheval, a sorry horse;

C six beaux chevaux bais, six fine bay horses.

Most other adnouns are almost indifferently placed before or after the noun; at least it is only by reading good books one can learn which are better put before, and which after. Thus use will have you say: le haut style, and le style sublime, the lofty style; les campagnes voisines, the neighbouring fields; les bords lointains, the remote shores; un habit vieux, an old coat; du vin vieux, old wine; and never du vieux vin, le style haut, le sublime style, &c.

Nu (naked) is one of the adnouns that comes after the noun; yet it comes before, and is indeclinable, in one particular case, when jointly with its noun it makes a compound word. Thus we say la tête nue, les pieds nus (with one's head or feet bare), we nevertheless say also être nu-tête (to be uncovered), marcher nu-pieds (to walk without shoes or stockings).

¶ In general, the *Je*ar must be consulted for the construction of adnouns; they come first, if they are less harmonious than their substantives; they come last, if they are more harmonious.

They must also come first, when they are used figuratively; See next page.

D 4°. When the noun is attended by two adnouns, it is sometimes indifferent to put them before or after it: as un homme méchant & ingénieux, or un ingénieux & méchant homme, an ingenious and wicked man; but it is more sure to put them after, for we don't say un méchant & ingénieux homme.

If the noun has three or more adnouns belonging to it, they must absolutely be put after it with the Enclitic & before the last: which must likewise be observed, even when there are but two adnouns; for we do not say un ingénieux méchant homme, as the English do, an ingenious wicked man, nor un désagréable A ennuyeux ouvrage, a disagreeable tedious work.

Some adnouns being construed with certain nouns will come first, when construed with others will come last. Thus we say,

homme juste,	a just man.	juste prix,	reasonable rate.
action juste,	a just action.	juste défense,	a just defence.
action basse,	a mean action.	à bas prix,	cheap, or at a low rate.

We likewise say: le bas Languedoc, la basse Normandie, lower Languedoc or Normandy; la haute ou basse Saxe, upper or lower Saxony; la basse Autriche, lower Austria; le bas Rhin, the lower Rhine, &c. and les Pays-bas, not les bas pays, the low countries; nor le Rhin bas, le Rhin haut, &c.

Some other adnouns, which will be put after the noun when they are taken in the proper sense, must be put before it when they are taken in the figurative; as,

Proper Sense.		Figurative Sense.
un fruit mûr,	ripe fruit.	une mâre délibération,	a mature deli- beration,
un homme maigre,	a thin man.	une maigre chère,	poor fare.
une femme vive,	a quick woman.	une vive douleur,	a smart or sharp pain.
un homme bon,	a good-natured man.	un bon homme,	one who means no harm.
un homme pauvre,	a poor man.	un pauvre homme,	a sorry fellow.

Many adnouns may be used substantively in French, which the genius of the English Tongue does not allow; I shall take notice of them in a more proper place. (p. 450.)

§ II. Of adnouns, some always require after them either a noun or a verb, which they govern: as, digne de louange, praise worthy; digne d'être aimé, worthy to be loved; capable d'enseigner, capable to teach; propre à tout, fit for any thing; il n'est pas propre à commander en chef, he is not fit to command in chief; &c.

Some will be used absolutely without being ever attended by any noun or verb: as sage, wise; vertueux, virtuous; incurable, incurable; intrépide, undaunted; &c.

Others may be construed both with and without a noun: as, C'est une femme insensible, She is a woman without any sensibility. Elle est insensible à l'amour, She is insensible, and a stranger to the passion of love. Il vit content, He lives content; Il est content de sa condition, He is contented with his condition.

1°. The following adnouns require the preposition de before the next noun. Observe that some of them require in English the preposition at or with before it.

digne,	worthy.	mécontent,	discon- tented	enragé,	enraged.
indigne,	unworthy.	comblé,	loaded,	avidé,	greedy.
capable,	capable.	heupt up.	fatigué,		tired.
incapable,	incapable.	aise,	glad.	ennuyé,	weary.
ravi,	overjoyed.	chargé,	loaded.	libre,	free.
joyeux,	joyful.	accusé,	accused.	qualifié,	one that has
content,	contented.	contrit,	sorrowful.		the character of, &c.

A as likewise adnouns signifying Fulness, Emptiness, Plenty, or Want: as Il est digne de louange, he is worthy of praise. Indigne de l'estime que j'ai pour lui, unworthy of the esteem which I have for him. Capable ou incapable de servir sa patrie, capable or incapable to serve one's country. Comblé d'honneurs, loaded with honours. Taxé d'avarice, charged with avarice. Chargé de dettes, deep in debt. Accusé de mensonge ou d'avoir menti, accused of lying. Je suis aise ou ravi de son succès, I am glad or overjoyed at his success. Fatigué de courir, fatigued with running. Ennuyé de la vie or de vivre, weary of life. Il est qualifié d'ivrogne, he has the character of a drunkard. Avide de gloire, needy of glory, &c.

B 2°. The following adnouns require the preposition à before the next noun.

adroit , dexterous.	ingénieur , ingenious.	propre ,	fit.
bon ,	good.	contraire , contrary.	ardent , }
beau ,	fine.	opposé , opposite.	âpre , }
laid ,	ugly.	conforme , conform-	occupé ,
agréable , agreeable.	able		busy.
désagréable , disagreeable.	dissemblable ,	like.	nuisible ,
	pareil ,	alike.	prompt ,
comparable , comparable.	enclin ,	inclined.	prêt , ready.

C parable. adonné, given, ad- sensible, sensible.

agile nimble. dicté. insensible, insensible.

alerte, brisk, pert. porté, apt, prone. souple, pliant.

habile, skilful. sujet, subject, liable. aisé, facile, easy.

And all adnouns signifying Inclination, Aptness, Fitness, and Unfitness, Advantage and Disadvantage, Profit or Disprofit, Due Submission, Resistance, Difficulty, &c. as,

Je suis sensible au froid, I am sensible of cold. Il est insensible aux affronts, he is insensible of affronts. Etre porté ou enclin à quelque chose, to be apt or inclined to something. Lent au travail, slow to work. Prompt au jeu ou à jouer, quick to

D play Propre à tout, fit for any thing. Nuisible à la santé, hurtful to health. Souple au marteau, malleable, &c.

3°. These adnouns, signifying Dimension, haut, high, tall; profond, deep; épais, thick; gros, big; large, wide, broad; and long, long, which come after the words of the measure of magnitude in English, come before in French, and are attended by the preposition de: as,

Une colonne haute de soixante pieds. A column sixty-feet high. Le fossé est profond de vingt-pieds, & large de dix, The ditch is twenty feet deep, and ten broad.

Or (which is much better, and more generally used) the ad-A noun of the dimension is turned into its noun in French, with the word of the measure before, as in English, but so that both the word of the measure, and that of the dimension, are preceded by the preposition de: as,

Un homme de six pieds de hauteur, A man six feet high.

Un fossé de vingt pieds de profondeur, A ditch twenty feet deep.

And the verb substantive to be is also turned into the verb to have, governing the noun of the measure, with the preposition de before the noun of dimension: as,

Le fossé a vingt pieds de profondeur, & dix de largeur, B

The ditch is twenty feet deep, and ten broad.

The words of measure are,

une aune , an ell.	un arpent , an acre.	une brasse , a fathom.	} another measure contain- ing six feet in length.
une verge , a yard.	une perche , a rod.
un pied , a foot.	un pas , a pace.
un pouce , an inch.	une lieue , a league.	une toise ,
une ligne , a line.	un mille , a mile.
une coudée , a cubit.	un stade , { a stade or
un empan , a span.		{ furlong.

¶ Adnouns are sometimes used substantively; in which case they take the article. (See page 219.)

§ III. 1°. We have seen that the highest or lowest degree C of comparison is expressed in French by the particles, le, la, les, put before the adverbs plus, moins, mieux, followed by the adnoun. But as (according to the first observations of the 2d section of this chapter) some adnouns come before the noun, and others after, so whenever it is the case of the adnoun in the highest or lowest degree to come after the noun, it requires the article before plus or moins, tho' the noun that comes before has it already, either with or without a preposition: as,

C'est la coutume des peuples les plus barbares, D

It is the custom of the most barbarous nations.

Il a obéi au commandement le plus injuste qu'on puisse faire,

He has obeyed the most unjust command that can be made.

Je compte sur l'ami le plus obligeant,

I rely upon the most obliging friend.

C'est une des femmes les plus belles de Paris. She is one of the most beautiful women in Paris; which is equal to c'est une des plus belles femmes de Paris.

A 2°. The noun that follows the adnoun in the highest or lowest degree, is always preceded by the preposition de (or the particles du, des) generally rendered into English by in; as,

Le plus savant homme du monde,
The most learned man in the world.
La plus impertinente des femmes.
The most impertinent of women.

3°. When the superlative is followed by a verb, if that verb is in English the present, or preterite tense, or their compounds, it must be put in French in the subjunctive, preceded by the relative pronoun qui, dont, &c. as,

L'homme le plus savant qui soit,
The most learned man that is.
La plus belle personne que j'aie jamais vue,
The handsomest person I have ever seen.

And if the superlative is of an adverb, and not of an adnoun, the verb must be preceded by the conjunction que: as,

Le plus soigneusement qu'il se puisse, or qu'on puisse,
The most carefully that can be.

4°. The particle than that follows the comparative in English, is rendered in French by que before the next noun or pronoun: as,

Il est plus habile que son frère,
He is more ingenious than his brother.
Il agit moins sincèrement que vous,
He acts, or deals less sincerely than you.

5°. If than is followed by a verb in the infinitive, it must be made in French by the infinitive with the particle de after que: or by the imperfect of the indicative, or its compound, with the conjunction si after que: as,

Il aime mieux demeurer à rien faire que de travailler,
He rather chooses to be idle than work.
Il est plus heureux que s'il régnoit,
He is happier than if he reigned.

And if the verb that follows than in English is not in, nor can be rendered by the infinitive, it must take in French the negative ne before it: as,

Il est plus habile que je ne croyois,
He is more ingenious than I thought.

¶ That is to say, Je ne le croyois pas si habile.

But if there comes before the verb a conjunction governing A it, the negative may be left out: as,

Je le trouve à présent moins beau que quand je l'achetai,
I now find it less handsome than when I bought it.

¶ That is; Qu'il ne l'étoit quand, &c. than it was when, &c.

6°. The simple comparative plus and moins meeting with a number, are attended by the preposition de: as,

Il a plus de vingt ans, and never plus que,
He is above twenty.

Therefore the preposition above before a noun of number must always be rendered into French by plus de, or au dessus de. B

7°. The preposition by and the conjunction than, used to join a certain definite quantity to the adnoun or adverb of the comparison, are expressed in French by de: as,

Il est plus grand de toute la tête,
He is taller by a whole head, or he is a head taller.
Nous en sommes plus d'à moitié persuadés,
We are more than half convinced of it.

Beaucoup and peu, denoting comparison, have likewise the particle de before them: as, C

Il est de beaucoup plus grand, He is much taller.
Si vous êtes plus gros que lui, c'est de peu,
If you are bigger than he is, it is but a little.

¶ However, we sometimes say, il est beaucoup plus grand, without de.

8°. The particles comparative si and aussi, which are always followed by que after the adnoun, are englished, si and aussi by so before the adnoun, and que by that or as after it, or, by as, both before and after; but aussi gives more force to the comparison than si: as,

Je ne le croyois pas si brave or aussi brave qu'il l'est,
I did not think him so courageous as he is.
Est-il si méchant qu'on le dit? Is he so wicked as they say? D Elle est aussi belle que sa sœur, She is as handsome as her sister.

Tant and autant, followed likewise by que (as much, so much as,) are construed with verbs and nouns, as si and aussi with adnouns: as,

Elle n'a pas tant d'esprit que sa sœur, mais elle a autant de vivacité, & elle est aussi aimable. She has not so much wit as her sister, but she has as much liveliness, and is as amiable as she.

A Je l'estime autant que votre frère,
 I esteem him as much as I do your brother.
L'un est aussi savant que l'autre,
 The one is as learned as the other.

Si is used in negative sentences ; and in affirmative, only when there is no comparison of equality made between two things : but in affirmative sentences implying comparison, aussi must be used : as, Il n'est rien de si doux que la liberté : Nothing is so sweet as liberty.

Elle aime si violemment qu'elle en perd la raison : She loves so excessively that it disturbs her reason, or she grows dis-

B tracted.

Le plaisir de l'étude est un plaisir aussi tranquille, que celui des passions est agité : The pleasure of studying is as calm, as that of the passions is tumultuous.

9°. The particles comparative si and aussi, plus and le plus, must be repeated before each adnoun or adverb governed, as likewise tant before each noun, and autant before each verb, when there are many in the sentence : as,

Il est si sage, si prudent, si éclairé & si discret, qu'on peut en sûreté lui confier un secret : He is so wise, so prudent, enlightened, and discreet, that one may safely entrust him with a

C secret.

Un jeune homme aussi sage, aussi capable, & qui prend tant de peine, mérite qu'on le protège : So sober a young man, so capable, and who takes so much pains, deserves to be protected.

Son amant est plus beau, plus jeune, & plus riche qu'elle,
 Her lover is handsomer, younger, and richer than she is.

Observe all along that the verb substantive to be, which ordinarily follows than, and the comparative or superlative in English, is always left out in French, and that we are then contented with que and the pronoun, without a verb after it (plus riche qu'elle, and not qu'elle est, as in English, richer than she is).

10°. As, repeated with an adverb between, is rendered into French either by aussi and que, or le plus and que, with the adverb between : as, Come as often as you can.

Venez aussi souvent que vous pourrez, or, le plus souvent que vous pourrez.

Lastly, these comparative ways of speaking :

- The more an hydropick drinks, the more thirsty he is.
- The more I see her, the more I hate her.
- The richer men are, the happier they are ; or,
- Men are so much the more happy, as they are more rich.
- The poorer people are, the less care they have, &c.

are rendered into French by plus or moins, beginning each part of the sentence, and followed by the noun, or pronoun which is the subject of the verb ; then the verb ; then the adnoun of the A comparison, if there be any, or even the noun, if there be one governed by the verb : thus,

- ^a Plus un hydropique boit, plus il a soif,
- ^b Plus je la vois, plus je la hais,
- ^c Plus on est riche, plus on est heureux ; or,
- ^d On est d'autant plus heureux qu'on est plus riche,
- ^e Plus on est pauvre, moins on a d'embarras, &c.

Of PRONOUNS, and first of the Pronouns Personal. B

§ I. OF PRONOUNS Personal, some (viz. je, tu, il, &c.) are Conjunctive, that is, always coming before the verb, whether they govern or are governed ; the others (viz. moi, toi, lui, &c.) Disjunctive, that is, governed of prepositions, and following the construction usual to nouns. But the chief thing to be observed is the order in which the conjunctives are placed, when several of them meet together before the verb, especially with the negatives ne and pas. C

1°. The personal Conjunctives, je, nous ; tu, vous ; il, elle ; ils, elles ; come before the verb as its subject, either immediately, as Je dis I say, or with one or more pronouns, or the negative ne between ; as Je vous dis I tell you, Je ne dis pas I do not say ; but they will not admit of any adverb, or other word, between themselves and the verb, as they do in English. Therefore we say Je vois toujours I always see, Je lui dis dans ce temps-là, or Je lui dis alors I at that time, or I then told him ; and never Je toujours vois, Je dans ce temps-là lui dis, or J'alors lui dis.

Only in certain forms, the word soussigné, and the title and D quality of the person that speaks, is put between the Conjunctive and the verb, thus : Je soussigné déclare I underwritten declare.

Je, Jean Smith, Docteur en Médecine, certifie, &c.

I, John Smith, Doctor of Physick, do certify.

The same personal conjunctives come after their verbs in the following cases :

1st, After the six verbs, dire to say, répondre to answer, répliquer to reply, continuer to continue, poursuivre to pursue, and s'écrier to cry out, by Parenthesis (as is practised in English with to say, tho' not so generally as in French) : as,

Vous étudiez, dites-vous, or dit-il, You study, say you, or you say, or says he. Vous voyez, disent-ils, or répondit-il, or s'écria-t-il, l'état où nous sommes réduits, You see, they say, or answered he, or cried he out, the condition we are reduced to.

A 2dly, With the Preterite subjunctive of devoir, and pouvoir: which way of speaking (with devoir) may be resolved by the conjunction quand with the Conditional: as,

Dussiez-vous me condamner, or Quand vous devriez me condamner,
Tho' you should condemn me.

Pussiez-vous, and puissiez-vous être heureux, May you live happy.
Ne valût-il qu'un sou? Were it worth but one penny?

3dly, After these Conjunctions ainsi, aussi, peut-être, du moins, au moins, en vain, and à peine: as,

Ainsi, or aussi mérite-t-il d'être avancé, Therefore he deserves to be preferred.

Du moins deviez-vous m'en avertir, At least you should have told me of it.

En vain cherche-t-il des excuses, In vain he seeks for an excuse.

Peut-être s'imagine-t-il, Perhaps he thinks.

À peine eut-il parlé, que . . . He had hardly spoken, when . . .

But observe, that in this last case it is an elegance only, and not a law of

B Grammar, to put the conjunctives after their verbs, and that we say too: aussi il mérite d'être avancé; du moins vous deviez m'en avertir, &c. And dussiez-vous me condamner is said by ellipsis for quoique vous dussiez me condamner; and puissiez-vous être content, for je souhaite que vous soyez content, that tense of pouvoir being then used as and for what Grammarians call the Optative Mood or souhaiter to wish.

20. ¶ The English personal pronouns, I, thou, he, &c. when unaccompanied by a verb, or answering to the verb to be, are always rendered into French by the pronouns disjunctive, moi, toi, lui, &c.

It is I, c'est moi; It is he, c'est lui; It is we, c'est nous; It is they, ce sont eux, ce sont elles.

Who is there? qui est là? I, c'est moi.

Who has done that? qui a fait cela? I, Sir, moi, Monsieur.

If in the same sentence one or more pronouns of the other persons meet with one of the first, politeness requires, in French as in English, that the first person, being the person who speaks, should be named the last.

C Vous & moi, you and I; lui & moi, he and I; elle et moi, she and I; eux et moi, they and I; vous & nous, ye and we; lui & nous, he and we; eux & nous, they and we.

It is the same, when the first person joins with nouns or names of persons.

Pierre & moi, Peter and I; vos frères & moi, your brothers and I; son cousin & nous, his cousin and we.

The same politeness requires that the person spoken to should be named before the person spoken of; hence the pronouns disjunctive of the second persons always come before those of the third, and before nouns.

Toi & ton frère, thou and thy brother; Vous & mon père, you and my father; Vous & votre ami, you and your friend; Vous & Pierre, you and Peter; Vous & lui, you and he; Vous & eux, you and they; avec vous & avec eux, with you and them.

However, in spite of politeness, as the first person, to speak the language of Grammarians, is the noblest of the three, and the second is more noble

D than the third, if there be a verb expressed in the sentence, the first person, in preference to the two others, must be its leader, or the second in the absence of the first. Therefore,

¶ When one or more nouns, and one or more pronouns meet together with a verb as its virtual subject, those pronouns must be disjunctive, either singular or plural; but in any case the verb must be in the plural number, and besides have for its grammatical subject, or nominative, a conjunctive pronoun plural, of the noblest persons among the disjunctive pronouns, which then, together with the nouns connected with them, may come indifferently, either before or after the A verb : as,

Lui & moi, nous apprenons le François ;	} Both he and I
Or, Nous apprenons le François, lui & moi ;
Vous & lui, vous apprendrez l'Italien ;	} Both you and he Or, Vous apprendrez l'Italien, vous & lui ;
Mon frère, ma sœur, ma cousine & moi	} My brother, my
nous allames hier à la comédie ;
Or, Nous allames hier à la comédie, mon	} and I went to the frère, ma sœur, ma cousine & moi ;
Vous, votre cousin, sa femme & moi, nous	} You, your cousin,
irons ce soir à la comédie ;
Or, Nous irons, &c.—Vous, votre cou-	} his wife and I, B
sin, &c.
Vous, M. Adam, sa cousine, & moi, nous	} You, Mr. Adam,
irons dans la même voiture ;
Or, Nous irons, &c.—Vous, M. Adam,	} will go in the &c.
Nous sommes contents, lui & moi ;	} He and I are sa-
Or, Lui & moi nous sommes contents ;
Je suis content, & lui aussi ;	} I am satisfied, and so is he.
Vous & votre frère, vous êtes heureux ;
you and your brother	} are happy.
are happy.
Vous & lui, vous êtes toujours à vous quereller ;	} you and he are always quarelling.]

To this rule there is an exception ; for though the disjunctives of the first and second persons moi and toi, can never be construed as subjects of a verb, without another conjunctive, yet when the disjunctives are put before the verb, and the last of them is a pronoun of the third person (lui or eux), the conjunctive (il or ils) is sometimes left out, and sometimes expressed before the following verb (and therefore the disjunctive lui and eux are then only subject of, and coming before the verb), and sometimes also it is indifferent to express it or not. It is not possible to determine positively when after those disjunctives the conjunctive must be left out, and when not, nor when it is indifferent to express it or not. But these cases occurring very seldom, and being almost always confined to common conversation, it must suffice to take notice here of the following instances :

We say : Mon frère & lui sont arrivés, My brother and he are arrived ; not ils sont arrivés. ¶ The conjunctive ils is suppressed, because the noun frère, and the disjunctive pronoun lui are both of the same person, viz. the third.]

On the contrary, we say : Je demeure, & lui il part : I stay, and he goes. Je partirai, & toi tu resteras ; I shall set out, but you will stay. ¶ The conjunctive il, tu, can by no means be suppressed, because the subjects are of different persons. As for the suppression of the disjunctive, see the last paragraph next page. C.]

However, it is indifferent to say ; Je demurrai, & lui il s'en alla, or Je demurrai, & lui s'en alla ; I staid, and he went away ; Vous en êtes fâché, & eux s'en réjouissent, or & eux ils s'en réjouissent ; you are sorry for it, but they rejoice at it. ¶ The conjunctive il, ils, may be left out, notwithstanding the

A difference of persons, because the second verb is reflected, and the pronoun se, which accompanies it, is sufficient to indicate the third person.]

But observe, 1st, That it is only in common conversation you may express the conjunctive or not.

2dly, That, as in the first instance, the noun and pronoun may equally well come after the verb, and you may say : Ils sont arrivés mon frère & lui (which is the best way to avoid the difficulty); so it is always safe, and never improper, to begin the sentence, with the conjunctive, even in common conversation, and say : Nous apprenons le François, lui & moi : He and I learn French.

3dly, That the disjunctives lui and eux, as has been seen in some of the preceding phrases, may in a regular speech be the subject of and come before the verb, without any conjunctive : But,

1^o. Either the disjunctives must be attended by the adnoun seul : as, Plus je vis avec le Cacique & sa sœur, plus j'ai de peine à me persuader qu'ils soient de cette nation ; eux seuls connoissent & respectent la vertu. The more I live with the Cacick and his sister, the less I can believe that they are of that nation : they alone know and respect virtue.

2^o. Or it must be separated from its verb, by another middle sentence joining to it, by the means of a relative or gerund : as, Lui qui ne savoit pas qu'ils étoient réconciliés, fut sort surpris de les voir ensemble : He, who did not know that they were reconciled, was much surprised to see them together.

Eux, voyant que la pluralité des suffrages l'emporteroit, commencèrent par protester : They, seeing that the majority of votes would carry it, began with a protest.

3^o. Or the sentences wherein they are used, relate the particulars of some fact, declared in general in the former member (but distributed, in the latter, among the agents of it) : as,

Les deux frères & le cousin ont commis le meurtre ; eux ont lié l'homme, & lui l'a assommé, The two brothers and the cousin have committed the murder ; they have tied the man, and he has knock'd him on the head.

C ¶ In this phrase : Elle est contente, & lui l'est aussi ; She is satisfied, and so is he : the verb is repeated because the two subjects elle and lui are not of the same gender. In conversation, however, we may make the ellipsis of l'est, and say : Elle est contente, & lui aussi.

And in this, with much more reason : Elle est contente, mais lui ne l'est pas, She is satisfied, but he is not so ; because, besides the difference of gender, the second member of the phrase is negative.

But when there is no distribution of action to make : no contrast, opposition, or comparison to express, the disjunctive is by no means necessary, and the verb is contented with a conjunctive : as,

Je te quitte, & tu n'en témoignes point de regret ; I leave you, and you show no regret for it. Je lui ai parlé, & il a promis de venir ; I spoke to him, and he has promised to come.

3^o. If the pronouns are governed by the verb, either as its object, or end, the first must be a conjunctive, coming before the verb, and the other, or others, disjunctive, and put after it : as,

D On me parle aussi bien qu' à vous & à eux : I am spoken to as well as he and they, or They speak to me, as well as to you and to them.

4^o. Observe that the conjunctives of the third person of both genders, il, ils ; elle, elles, are used with respect to irrational and inanimate creatures ; which pronouns are englished by it, and they for the plural : as, speaking of	{	a tree,	}	il porte beaucoup de fruit,	It bears much fruit. an apple,		Elle n'est pas mûre,	It is not ripe.

		a horse,		Il boite,	He is lame.
		a hen,		Elle ne pond plus,	It or she lays no more eggs

Moreover il is used before verbs impersonal, or rather verbs are very often used impersonally with this pronoun, which is commonly rendered into English by it or there; as il arriva, it or there happened: as likewise before verbs neuter, followed by another subject besides, which second subject is the only one in English; as,

Il est arrivé un accident ;
An accident has happened, or
There an accident happened.
Il viendra tantôt quelqu'un ;
Somebody will come by and by.

It is the same when questions are asked; as,

Est-il arrivé quelque accident ?
Did some accident happen?
Viendra-t-il du monde, ou viendra-t-il quelqu'un tantôt ?
Will somebody come by and by?

But in this last case il most times comes the last, and the noun the first, as we shall see when we treat of Questions. But observe further, that in these impersonal ways of speaking, the noun that follows the verb requires before it the particle de or un, or some pronoun or adnoun indeterminate, such as quelqu'un, divers, certain, and never takes the article (except with the limiting particle), as in these instances:

Il est arrivé un accident, for Un accident est arrivé.

Il viendra quelqu'un, du monde, des gens, certaines ou diverses personnes, instead of Quelqu'un, du monde viendra ; des gens, certaines personnes viendront, Somebody, some people will come.

The disjunctives moi, lui, eux, as likewise nous, and vous, which are both conjunctives, and disjunctives, may come both before and after a verb, but with another conjunctive, unless the verb be in the infinitive, or imperative; as,

Vous dites cela, & moi je l'ai vu,
You say that, and I have seen it.
Lui il soutient cela, or Il soutient cela, lui ?
He maintains that, doth he?
Moi, faire cela !
Should, or could I do that!
Me soupçonner de cela, moi !
Should, or could I be suspected of that!
Faites-moi, Faites-nous cela comme il faut,
Do that as it should be.

Which pronouns, thus used as a redundancy, serve to give more weight to what one says, especially with the infinitive: for thus we intimate a sort of reproach to those we speak to, for their believing us guilty of what is mentioned; but observe, that in the last instance, moi and nous are the disjunctives of the third relation, that is implying the preposition à, and standing for à moi, à nous; that they are used only with the imperative; and that it is only in familiar conversation they may be thus used as a redundancy.

5°. The second state of the pronouns personal (viz. de moi, de lui, de vous, &c.) cannot be, strictly speaking, used after a noun in the second relation to which they are joined by the Enclitic &: but one must make use of a possessive pronoun, or a pronoun relative. Therefore, instead of saying

C'est le sentiment de mon frère & de moi, or & de lui, it is better to say C'est le sentiment de mon frère & le mien, or le sien, or take this turn, C'est mon sentiment & celui de mon frère. That is the opinion of my brother, and mine too.

A Except in the following expressions, wherein the possessive pronoun cannot be used as in English, but in the second relation of the person, governed by a noun that comes first.

Pour l'amour de moi, Pour l'amour de lui, d'elle, d'eux,
For my sake. For his, her, their sake.

A cause de moi, En dépit de moi,
On my account. In spite of me.

Or when the pronoun personal is compound, viz. of moi, lui, &c. and même: as, Je ne veux pas être homicide de moi-même, I won't be my own self's murderer. And tho' we say pour l'amour de moi, yet we don't say, l'amour de soi self-love, but l'amour de soi-même, or l'amour propre: but we say as the English do, pour mon plaisir for my pleasure, pour son plaisir for her or his pleasure.

B ¶ Likewise, un portrait de moi, means a portrait drawn by me; whereas mon portrait, my portrait, means a portrait representing my person.

§ II. 1°. When the verb governs the pronoun personal, it must come between the subject and the verb: as,

Je le vois, I see him: Vous lui parlez, You speak to him, or to her.

Il leur est avantageux, it is advantageous to them; and not Je vois lui, or le, Je parle à lui, or à elle, Il est avantageux à eux.

Except, 1st, When the verb is in the imperative, without a negation; for then the pronoun comes last: and if it is of the first or second person, and in the third state, the second disjunctives moi, toi, are used instead of the conjunctives me, and te: as,

Portez-le, carry him; voyez-la, see her; parlez-lui, speak to him; dites-moi, tell me: and not dites me nor me dites, nor dites à moi: though we say with the two pronouns, donnez-m'en, give me some; vous me parlez, you speak to me; parlez moi, speak to me; and with a negation, ne me parlez pas, do not speak to me. Voyons-les, let us see them; ne les voyons pas, don't let us see them.

But if two imperatives come together with a conjunction copulative, the latter will have the pronoun come before it: as,

Voyez la & la consolez, and not voyez-la & consolez la, see her and comfort her. At least the first construction is much better.

2dly, With the verbs être (signifying belonging), avoir, penser, songer, viser, (respecting a person and not a thing), aller, venir, courir, accourir, boire; as likewise with reciprocal verbs, the pronoun governed in the third state must be a disjunctive, and come after them: as,

Ce livre est moi, and not m'est,

That book is mine, or belongs to me.

Vous en avez un à lui, and not vous lui en avez un,
You have one of his. A

In these instances, we don't use the pron. possess. mien, as in English, instead of the personal moi, because, in the first instance, être signifies appartenir, which governs the third state; and, in the other, un livre à lui is said by ellipsis for un livre qui est à lui; tho' with appartenir we say, qui lui appartient not qui appartient à lui, that belongs to him.

Je songe, or Je pense à vous, and not Je vous songe, &c.

I am thinking of you.

Il vise à eux, he aims at them.

Elle boit à vous, she drinks to you.

Je vais à vous, I go to you. Ils viennent à moi, they come to me. B

Nous nous fions à vous, we trust you, and not nous nous vous fions.

Cela s'adresse à moi, that is directed to me, and not cela se m'adresse.

3dly, When the verb governs two pronouns in the third state, so that they are used as by opposition; as likewise, when it rather denotes the order in which a thing must be done, the pronouns must be disjunctive, and come after the verb: as,

Je parle à lui & non à vous, (or) C'est à lui que je parle & non pas à vous: I speak to him and not to you.

Buvez à elle, puis à la compagnie: drink to her, then to the company.

Donnez à lui d'abord, ensuite à elle, puis aux autres: C

Give to him first, then to her, then to the others.

2°. In all other cases, disjunctives must be used, as in answer to questions, and after prepositions: as,

Qui est-ce qui dit cela? lui & eux, or c'est lui, ce sont eux:

Who says that? He and they, or it is he, it is they.

Qui cherchez-vous? elle & sa fille?

Whom do you seek for? her and her daughter?

C'est lui, it is he. C'est elle, it is she. Ce n'est pas moi, It is not I.

Pour moi, for me. Après lui, after him. Devant elle, before her. (See p. 230. B. 2°.) D

3°. Ne and pas or point are particles answering the English negative not. The French put ne before the verb, and pas or point after it, if the tense is simple, and between the auxiliary and the participle, if it is compound.—Ne must always come immediately after the word that expresses the subject, whether a noun or pronoun conjunctive: as,

Je ne parle pas, I do not speak. Vous ne dites point, you don't say.

L'homme n'est pas venu, the man is not come.

A Except, 1st, When the verb is in the second person of the imperative ; in which case ne, that always comes before the verb, comes besides before the pronoun, if the verb is reciprocal ; but pas always follows the verb : as, Ne vous fâchez pas, don't be angry.

2dly, In sentences of Interrogation : as,

Ne fais-je pas ce que vous me dites? Don't I do what you bid me?

3dly, On such occasions when the Pronouns conjunctive governing the verb come after it : as,

Aussi ne prétend-il pas cela? Neither does he pretend to that.

See those cases page 230. A.

B ¶ 4thly, When there is a conjunctive governed by the verb : as, Je ne l'ai pas dit, I have not said it ; ne le faites pas, do not do it.]

4°. When the verb is attended by two pronouns personal, viz. one in the fourth state, and the other in the third, the pronoun in the third state must come before that in the fourth : as,

Je vous le dis, I tell it you. On me le donne, it is given me.

Except only when the pronoun in the third state is of the third person (lui or leur), or when the verb is in the imperative ; for then the conjunctive of the fourth relation comes before that of the third : as,

C Vous le lui dites, you tell it him or her. Il la leur refuse, he refuses it to them. Donnez-le-moi, give it me. Whereas we say in the indic. Il me le donne, he gives it to me.

5°. y and en come after other pronouns, and immediately before the verb : as,

Je vous les y enverrai, I will send them to you there.

Je ne vous en parle pas, I don't speak to you of it, or of them. And when y and en meet together, y comes before en ; as,

Je vous y enverrai, I will send you some there.

Je ne vous y en ferai pas tenir,

I will remit you none there, (money, for instance.)

D 6°. The pronouns governed of the verb come after it in this following case (but in the same order as when they come before it):

When the verb is in the second persons, and first plur. of the imperative, without negative. Thus, tho' we say in the third persons, Qu'il le fasse, let him do it : Qu'ils lui en parlent, let them mention it to him ; or in the other persons, with a negative,

Ne nous y fions pas, let us not trust to that ;

Ne lui en donnez pas, do not give him any : yet we say in the first person plur. and the second persons, without negative, Fions-nous-y, let us trust to that. Donnez-lui-en, give him some.

With the negative we say,

A

Ne les	y menez pas,	Don't carry them there.
Ne l	y menez pas,	Don't carry him there.
Ne nous	y menez pas,	Don't carry us there.
Ne m'	y menez pas,	Don't carry me there.
Ne m'	y envoyez pas,	Don't send me there.
Ne m'	y portez pas,	Don't carry me there.

Without the negative we say,

Menez-les- y, Carry them there.

Menez-l'- y, Carry him there.

Menez nous-y, Carry us there.

But, with a pronoun of the first person singular, we say,

Menez-y-moi, Take me there.

Envoyez-y-moi, Send me there.

Portez -y-moi, Carry me there.

and never Menez-moi-y, nor menez-m'y, &c.

¶ However, for the sake of harmony, we say, Conduisez-moi-là, conduct me there; not conduisez-y, to avoid the repetition of z in two contiguous syllables.]

In sentences of Interrogation the conjunctive pronouns come also after the verb.

§ III. 1°. The several ways of asking questions in French are, C
1st, With the pronoun Interrogative qui, and lequel, as Qui croit cela? Who believes that? Lequel des deux vous a plu? Which of the two has pleased you?

2dly, With the adnoun or incomplete pronoun quel, and the noun of the subject of the question before the verb, as in the declarative form: as, Quel homme seroit assez hardi pour, &c. What man should be so bold as to, &c.

3dly, If the subject of the question is a pronoun personal, or the primitive demonstrative ce, it comes after the verb, if the tense is simple; or between the auxiliary and participle, if it is compound: as, Est-ce votre livre? Is it your book? D
Avez-vous fait? Have you done?

Connoissez-vous Monsieur? Do you know the Gentleman?

4thly, If the subject of the question is a noun or a pronoun, intermediate, the sentence begins with that noun or pronoun, then the verb, if the tense is simple, or the auxiliary, if it is compound, and moreover the conjunctive il or elle, ils or elles, or on, agreeing in gender and number with the subject: as,

L'homme vient il? Does the man come?

La femme est-elle venue? Is the woman come?

A Les enfans peuvent-ils s'appliquer? Can children apply themselves?

Quelqu'un fait-il ce que vous faites, or Fait-on ce que vous faites?
Does any body do what you do ?

Personne ne fait-il cela? Does nobody do that ?

5thly, If the verb of the question is reciprocal, the sentence begins with one of the two pronouns, if the subject is expressed by a pronoun; or with a noun and a pronoun, if it is expressed by a noun; and the other pronoun comes after the verb, or between the auxiliary and participle, according to the tense being either simple or compound: as,

B Vous souvenez-vous de cela? Do you remember that ?

Ma femme se repent-elle de sa faute?

Does my wife repent her fault ?

Les matelots se sont-ils enrichis dans cette expédition?

Did the sailors grow rich in that expedition ?

And if the verb of the question ends with a vowel, t must be added to it between two hyphens (-t-) in order to avoid the hiatus. Therefore write and pronounce Aime-t-il, does he love? Va-t-elle, does she go? and never aime il, va elle.

2°. The pronouns attending the verb keep the same order in the interrogative form, as in the declarative, as Le ferai-je?

C shall I do it? Le lui direz-vous? will you tell it him? Me le commandez-vous? do you command it me? Y en porterons-nous? shall we carry some thither? Ne vous l'a-t-il pas dit? did he not tell it you ?

It is to be noted, that it is usual in French, among polite well-bred people, and when we speak to one of a higher station, or to whom we show respect, to speak to them with the pronoun of the third person, as if we were speaking of somebody else. Thus, to ask you how do you do, well-bred people say

Comment se porte Monsieur, or Madame?

How does your honour do?

Monsieur apprend-il le François?

Do you learn French?

Monsieur a-t-il voyagé en Italie?

instead of avez-vous voyagé, &c.

Have you travell'd to Italy?

Sa Majesté l'ordonne-t-elle?

Does your Majesty order it?

(or) Si sa Majesté l'ordonne,

If your Majesty orders it.

We have said, that when the question is asked with a pronoun personal of the first person, that pronoun comes after the verb thus, suis-je? am I? entends-je? Do I hear? But observe, 1st, that in verbs of the first conjugation, wherein the first person ends in e not sounded, that e is changed into é acute, before the pronoun, which ends also in e not sounded; as,

Aimé-je? do I love?

N'étudié-je-pas? don't I study?

2dly, That no question can be asked in this manner with some verbs, especially these five, mentir to lie, perdre to lose, rompre to break, sentir to feel, dormir to sleep: so that we neither say:

Menté-je, Perdé-je, Rompé-je, Senté-je, Dormé-je,	} nor	mens-je,	do I lie?	A
		perds-je,	do I lose?
		romps-je,	do I break?
		sens-je,	do I feel?
		dors-je,	do I sleep?

the former, because é acute cannot be used in this manner but with verbs of the first conjugation : and the latter (mens-je), because it sounds too harsh, and can besides occasion some ambiguity in speech. Therefore, in the case of these verbs, the question must be asked after another manner : as, Est-ce que je mens? or Croyez-vous que je mente? Do you think that I lie? Trouvez-vous que je rompe cela comme il faut? Do you think that I break that as it should be? or speak without interrogation?

3dly, This way of asking a question (Est-ce-que) is of great use in French : but it is less used in order to be informed merely of any thing, which is the chief purpose of interrogations, B than to assure others that we need not be informed of it, or that the case is not as they think. As likewise when we don't expect a thing, or we fear lest it should happen, we show our surprise or fear by Est-ce-que. For instance, when I ask this question, Pleut-il? Does it rain? I only want to know whether it rains or no. But when I say Est-ce qu'il pleut? I besides show my surprise at it, which is thus englished : It don't rain, does it? Again, when I say, A-t-il du jugement? Has he any judgment? I want to be informed whether the person spoken of has any judgment or no. But by this other question, Est-ce qu'il a du jugement? I intimate that I know very well that he has no judgment.

By this question, Viendra-t-il? Will he come? I want to know whether he will come or no : and by this other, Est-ce qu'il viendra? I show my surprise at, or fear of his coming. C

Again, by this question, Est-ce aujourd'hui fête? Is this day a holy-day? I desire to be informed whether or no this is a holy-day ; but by this other, Est-ce que c'est aujourd'hui fête? I show my wonder and surprise at this being a holy-day.

Sometimes, also, this way of speaking is used to deter people from believing what is said ; as, Est-ce que je joue? which is as much as Je ne joue point, and cannot be (I think) properly englished thus, Do I game? or Am I a gamester? but D (if I am not very much mistaken) thus, Who games? not I.

¶ This way of asking a question (Est-ce-que) is hardly used but with the first person singular of the present and preterite tenses in the indicative mood of some verbs wherein the simple way is too harsh, and never with the other persons ; unless we want to show surprise or fear. Therefore never say in France, as a great many people do in England, speaking to a hosier for instance, est-ce que vous rendez des bas de soie? do you sell silk-stockings? but only rendez-vous des bas de soie? for the hosier, instead of answering : yes, Sir ; would laugh, and answer you : Why not, Sir?

We never say in French parlé-je do I speak? with an è grave, as some people do : but parlé-je? with an é acute.]

A 4thly, The same way of asking a question with a negative (n'est-ce pas que) signifies always, that we take that for certain, which is the subject of the question, and want only to be confirmed in it, or to have it approved by others; and n'est-ce pas may equally well come at the beginning of the sentence with que, or at the end with a comma before; as,

N'est-ce pas qu'il pleut? N'est-ce pas qu'il a du jugement? N'est-ce pas qu'il viendra? B N'est-ce pas qu'il joue? N'est-ce pas qu'il fait froid?	} or {	Il pleut, n'est-ce pas? It rains, don't it? Il a du jugement, n'est-ce pas? He has judgment, ha'n't he? Il viendra, n'est-ce pas? He will come, won't he? Il joue, n'est-ce pas? He games, don't he? Il fait froid, n'est-ce pas? It is cold, i'n't it?
--	--------	---

Whereas, by these questions.

Ne pleut-il pas? N'a-t-il pas de jugement? Ne viendra-t-il pas? Ne joue-t-il pas? C Ne fait il pas froid?	Don't it rain? Has he no judgment? Won't he come? I'n't he a gamester? I'n't it cold?	} we only want to be informed of what we ask.
--	--	---

It will not be amiss, when the scholar has learnt so far, to make him conjugate every day a regular verb with an Interrogation, then with a Negative, then both with an Interrogation and Negative together, and with the particles en and y; which will both make him more ready in the conjugations, and render the dependence of those particles upon the verb more familiar to him.

Examples.

Je parle, I speak. Parlé-je? do I speak. Je ne parle pas, I don't speak. Ne parlé-je pas? don't I speak. J'en parle, I speak of it. En parlé-je? do I speak of it. Je n'en parle pas, I don't speak of it. D N'en parlé-je pas? don't I speak of it.	J'en envoie, I send some. Je n'en envoie pas, I send none. J'y en porte, I carry some thither. Je n'y en porte pas, I carry none thither. Y en porté-je, do I carry any there. N'y en porté-je pas, don't I carry some there. Vous y en porterai-je? shall I carry, &c. Ne vous y en porterai je pas? shall I not carry, &c.
---	--

§ IV. The Pronouns Conjunctives, whether governing, or governed of the verb, that is, whether its subject or object, are sometimes repeated, and sometimes not.

1st, These Conjunctives, je, tu, nous, vous, are repeated before each verb, when the verbs are in different tenses; as,

Je dis & je dirai toujours, I say, and will always say.

Nous avons parlé & nous parlerons encore pour lui,

We have spoken for him, and will speak again.

When the tenses are the same, they need not be repeated: as, A
Je pense & dis qu'il a bien fait, or Je pense & je dis qu'il, &c.
 I think and say that he has done very well.
Nous l'avons vu & touché, we have seen and touched it.

The pronouns of the third person, il, elle; ils, elles, need not be repeated in common conversation, tho' the tenses vary: as,
Il n'a jamais rien valu, & ne vaudra jamais rien,
 He never was good for any thing, and will always be good for nothing.

Elle est toujours fille, & la sera toute sa vie, or elle la sera, &c.
 She is a maid still, and will be so as long as she lives. (See page 249, C.)

2dly, All conjunctives governing are repeated, when in the same sentence one passes from the affirmative to the negative, and so reciprocally: as likewise when the second verb is preceded by one of these conjunctives, mais but, même even, cependant yet, néanmoins nevertheless, ainsi so, aussi therefore, ou or, and que (standing for a conjunction): as,

Il l'aime & il ne veut pas en convenir,

He loves her, and won't own it.

Il le dit, mais il ne le pense pas,

He says so, but he don't think so.

Elle n'en croit rien, & cependant elle ne veut pas l'épouser,

She believes nothing on't, and yet she won't marry him.

Il le fait, & même il s'en vante, (or) aussi il en convient,

He does it, and even boasts of it, or and therefore owns it.

Nous le trouverons, ou nous ne le trouverons pas,

We shall find him, or not.

Lorsque vous ferez votre devoir, & que vous vous comporterez bien,

When you will do your duty, and behave well.

3dly, All conjunctives governed are repeated before their D verbs: as,

Il me prie & me conjure, He desires and entreats me.

Je vous dis & vous déclare, I say and declare to you.

Except when the second verb is of the same signification, and composed of the first, or denotes only repetition of its action: as,

Il ne fait que nous dire & redire la même chose,

He does nothing but tell us the same thing over again.

Elle le fait & défait, or refait quand bon lui semble,

She does it and undoes, or does it again when she thinks fit

A The Use and Construction of the Pronoun Indeterminate on.

§ V. This pronoun (formed, by corruption, of the word homme) is called Indeterminate, because it is used to speak in general, without specifying any person particular; it is of a very extensive use.

1°. on is rendered into English several ways. Sometimes by one, as, on croiroit, one would think; sometimes by the pronoun of the third pers. plur. they, or that of the first, we; as on dit, they say; on apprend, we hear; sometimes also by these indeterminate words, people, men, a body, &c. as on s' imagine, people or men think: but on is more generally and better englished by converting the verb from the active voice into the passive; as, on croit, it is thought.

2°. Now the Passive voice, both in French and English, is expressed by the verb substantive (être to be), through all its tenses, joined to the participle of a verb active. For instance, the participle of to hold, being held, if you put to be before it, you have the verb passive to be held, and all the tenses of the same, in this manner:

	Active voice.		Passive voice.
C Inf.	To hold,	tenir.	To be held, être tenu.
Pref.	I hold,	Je tiens.	I am held, Je suis tenu.
Imp.	I did hold,	Je tenois.	I was held, J'étois tenu.
Pret.	I held,	Je tins.	I was held, Je fus tenu.
Fut.	I shall or will hold,	Je tiendrai.	I sh. &c. be held, Je serai tenu.
Cond.	I should, &c. hold,	Je tiendrois.	I should, &c. Je serois tenu.
Comp.	I have held,	J'ai tenu, &c.	I have, &c. J'ai été tenu, &c.

3°. In order, therefore, to put into English a sentence with the particle on, if the French verb governs no noun, or is followed by que, you need only English on by it, and convert the active state of the verb into the passive, thus: on croit it is thought, on avoit dit que, &c. it had been reported that, &c.— Sometimes the English pronoun is left out: as, comme on a déjà dit, as has been said already; in which sentence it is necessarily understood.

4°. If the French verb governed of on is a verb active, attended by a noun or pronoun as its object, that noun or pronoun must be made the subject of the verb in English, and the verb active converted into the passive state, and put in the same tense as in French: as,

On tint hier un conseil à Whitehall,
Yesterday a council was held at Whitehall.

un conseil (a council) being the noun that expresses the object A of the French verb, must be that of the subject in English: tint (held) being the preterite of the verb active, must be changed into the same tense of the passive state, fut tenu (was held) Again;

On le tiendra au palais de St. James, it will be held at St. James's.
Le conseil qu'on tint hier, the council that was held yesterday.

5° If the verb governed of on is not immediately followed by a noun or pronoun, but by another verb in the infinitive, then it is the noun or pronoun, the object of the second verb, that must be made the subject in English, and the second verb active converted into a passive state: as,

On doit tenir aujourd'hui un conseil à Whitehall,

This day a council is to be held at Whitehall.

On doit le tenir à St. James, it is to be held at St. James's.

Le conseil qu'on doit tenir demain,

The council that is to be held to-morrow.

In those instances on is the subject coming before the verbs tint, tiendrai, and doit: and the pronouns le and que, governed of the same verbs as object. are made the subject in English.

¶ The manner of translating on into English by they, is very improper; unless on be the consequent of an antecedent, in the plural number, expressed before; as,

Hier les Communes s'assemblèrent, or le Parlement s'assembla; on délibéra d'abord, &c. The House of Commons, or, The Parliament met yesterday: they C deliberated at first, &c.

Every where else, the safest is to turn on into the passive voice.]

6°. On the other hand, as the passive voice is very seldom used in French (for the expressing of which we make use of the particle on with the active voice), in order to put into French such sentences as are expressed by the verb substantive to be, and the participle of another verb, one need only consider the noun that expresses the subject of the verb in English; if that subject is the particle it, (not relating to any thing before), it must be rendered by on, and the verb converted from its passive state into the active, as it is thought, on croit. D

7°. If the verb has a noun or pronoun relative for its subject, after changing the passive state into the active, one must give it on for its subject, and the English subject for its object: as,

Yesterday a council was held at Whitehall,

On tint hier un conseil à Whitehall.

It is to be held at St. James's, on doit le tenir à St. James.

The council that was held yesterday, le conseil qu'on tint hier.

A In which instances the verb passive was held, and to be held, is changed into TINT and TENIR governed of the subject ON, and the words a council, it, and that, expressing the subject in English, are made the object of the French verb.

¶ Which evidently shows that the only difference between a phrase passive and a phrase active, is, that, in the latter, the object of the action is governed of the verb, whereas it is its leader in the former.

L'on is the same pronoun as on, which takes sometimes the article le, but for better sound's sake only; as will appear from the following observations:

1st, In the beginning of a speech or sentence, on must be used, and l'on never.

B 2dly, In the middle of a sentence after a word ending with a consonant, or e not sounded: as, Celui dont on parle, he that is spoken of; Quand il parle on écoute avec attention, when he speaks every body listens attentively.

On the other hand l'on is used, 1st, after all words ending with a vowel, except e not sounded; as En oette extrémité l'on ne sauroit faire autre chose, in this necessity nothing else can be done. ¶ However, l' might be left out, because there is naturally a little pause after extrémité, which would even require a comma.]

Nevertheless we say si on le veut, and not si l'on le veut, if they will have it so: si on le offending less the ear than si l'on le.

2dly, After &, et, and the particle ou, as likewise other words ending in ou: as, Voilà ce que je crois, & l'on ne me persuadera jamais le contraire, that's what I think, and nobody shall ever persuade me to the contrary; C'est un lieu où l'on vit à bon marché, it is a place very cheap to live in.

C 3dly, When the pronoun on comes after que, one must consider the other words that make up the sentence; for whenever the word coming before que ends also in que, or there are already, or upon the whole will be too many que's in the sentence (this particle being also of great use in French), one must then make use of qu'on, and not que l'on: as,

Il remarque qu'on ne l'a jamais fait auparavant, he observes that it has never been done before: Il n'est que trop vrai que depuis le temps qu'on a commencé, &c. and not que l'on because of the great number of que's, it is but too true that since they begun, &c.

4thly, For the same reason we make use of que l'on, and not qu'on, before verbs beginning with com or con: as, Que l'on commence, let them begin; Que l'on conduise Monsieur à, &c. let them take the gentleman to, &c. But we say, Qu'on le conduise let them take him, &c. and not que l'on le conduise, because of the pronoun between qu'on and the verb, l'on must never be used before a word beginning with l.

8°. On must always be repeated in the sentence before every verb of which it is the subject, and must continue the same without any variation, and notwithstanding the aforesaid observations concerning on and l'on: as,

On le loue, on le blâme, on le menace: on emploie avec lui la douceur & la rigueur: & malgré tout cela on n'en sauroit venir à bout.

They commend, they blame, and threaten him; gentle and severe means are used, and for all that he cannot be reclaimed.

In this instance the first four on's are conformable to the rules, but after tout cela we should say l'on, if it were not for the first on, which determines the others throughout the sentence.

Observe, that it is usual with French Authors, when they mention themselves, to make use of on and nous instead of je, out of modesty, and not to name their ownelves with the pronoun of the first pers. sing. or not to repeat it too often. A

¶ On is sometimes used for je and nous. Speaking to a friend whom we have not seen for a long while, we say in a familiar style: Il y a long-temps qu'on ne vous a vu, we have not seen you for this great while.]

¶ On, though of itself a masculine singular, and always governing its verb in the singular number, yet admits of an adjective feminine, when it refers to a woman; as,

Quand on aime bien son mari, on souffre de se voir séparée de lui; on est impatiente de recevoir de ses nouvelles; One who loves her husband really, suffers in being separated from him, and is impatient to hear of him.

When on refers to a plurality, it may be reputed a collective word, which requires the adjective or pronoun to be in the plural, though the verb remain in the singular number; as, B

On se batlit en désespérés, they fought like desperate men.

On se méfioit les uns des autres, they mistrusted each other.

In the same manner as vous, a pronoun plural, being used for tu, requires the adjective and participle in the singular, though the verb be in the plural; as, Vous êtes fort obligeant, you are very obliging. Vous êtes venu, you are come.]

¶ For the same reason, there is no fault of concord in the following sentence:

Il est impossible de n'être pas émue, quand on voit son mari traité d'une manière si outrageante; it is impossible not to be affected, when one sees her husband so contumeliously used.

But this is not the case with the supplying pronoun le, signifying so, as will be seen hereafter, page 247.]

9°. On has for its relations soi, de soi, à soi, se.

Soi is used in sentences, the subject whereof is a noun, taken in an universal indefinite sense, or a pronoun indeterminate: as, C

L'homme n'aime que soi; Man loves himself only.

Chacun agit pour soi; Every body acts for himself.

Qui n'est bon que pour soi, n'est pas digne de vivre;

He who minds nobody but himself, does not deserve to live.

Especially with inanimate objects; for the pronoun lui is used with animate objects only, except in few cases: as,

Le vice est odieux de soi; Vice is hateful of itself.

La terre est de soi fertile; The earth is fruitful of itself.

Tho' we can as well use elle instead of soi with nouns feminine: as, D

La terre renferme en soi, or en elle, toutes les semences;

The earth contains in itself all seeds.

But if the noun is taken in a particular definite sense, lui is used instead of soi: as,

C'est un homme qui n'est bon que pour lui, & qui parle de lui sans cesse;

'Tis a man who minds himself only, and is constantly speaking of himself.

Except in some sentences like this, wherein soi refers to something out of us;

- A Il ne porte jamais d'argent sur soi ; He never has money about him.

Se oneself (the 4th state of on) is chiefly used with verbs reflected, as we have seen in the second part : but it is besides used with verbs impersonal, which will be considered, when we treat of those verbs.

Soi is sometimes subject, but then it is only the repetition of another indefinite subject, put in opposition, and it must come immediately after the verb, and be attended by the word même : as, Chacun peut soi-même faire son bonheur ; every body can make his own happiness.

Soi-même can never be used in the plural, though soi can with a preposition : as Ces choses sont bonnes de soi ; These things are good of themselves. But we do not say Ces choses sont bonnes de soi-même.

- B If the pronoun relates to animate things, we say eux-mêmes or elles-mêmes ; as, Vos filles devoient prendre plus de soin d'elles-mêmes ; your daughters should take more care of themselves.

10°. Même is a sort of pronoun, though not of itself, but when it is joined to pronouns personal disjunctives, pronominal adverbs relative, and other nouns indeterminate ; in which last case même denotes, in a more special manner, the person or thing spoken of : as,

- | | | | | |
|---|-----------------------------------|----------|-----------------------|----------------|
| | moi-même, | myself, | nous-mêmes, | ourselves. |
| | toi-même, | thyself, | vous-mêmes, | yourselves. |
| | lui-même, | himself, | eux-mêmes, | } themselves. |
| | elle-même, | herself, | elles-mêmes, | |
| C | soi-même, | oneself, | la vertu même, | virtue itself. |
| | l'homme même, man himself. | | | |

¶ Soi-même widely differs from lui-même ; for instance : Il se loue soi-même, he praises his own person ; il se loue, lui-même, he is his own trumpeter.]

11°. Même is besides an adverb signifying the same, with the article, thus : le même, la même, les mêmes, relating to some noun expressed or understood : as, le même homme, the same man.

Même is also an adverb, answering to either of these, even, also, nay : as, Je crois même qu'on lui a fait son procès ; I even think, or nay I think that he has been tried.

When même is an adverb, it is sometimes spelt with an s at the end, but only in poetry ; authors having then regard to the style to make it more fluent and less harsh.

- D The adverb de même (so, likewise, after the same manner) is always spelt without s ; likewise the adverb à même ; as, Buvez à même le pot ; drink out of the mug.

The Use and Construction of the Pronoun Relative le.

§ V*. 1°. This pronoun stands not only for nouns, as it is common to all pronouns personal, but also for whole sentences.

Le, en, y, are chiefly used instead of the pronouns, lui, elle, eux, which (as we shall see in the next section) cannot always be said of irrational creatures, and relate to the person, thing, or A place spoken of. Le is rendered into English by it or so, or a whole sentence expressed or understood: en by some, any; of him, of her, of it, of them; for him, for her, for it, for them; with him, with her, with it, with them; about him, about her, it, them; thence, from thence; or a whole sentence: and y, by the same pronouns personal with other prepositions, as will appear in these following examples:

[En implies the preposition de; y, the preposition à; and le, no preposition.]

Vous êtes le maître, & moi je ne le suis pas;
You are the master, and I am not, (or) I am not so. } le stands for Ils sont heureux, & nous ne le sommes pas;
They are happy, and we are not, (or) are not so. } le maître B and heu- reux.

Newton vous plaît, vous en parlez toujours;
You like Newton, you always speak of him. } en stands for Ce sont des orgueilleuses, ne m'en parlez point;
They are proud creatures, don't tell me of them. } de Newton, & de ces or- gueilleuses.

Comme elle ne vouloit pas se taire, il prit un bâton, & lui en donna un coup;
As she would not hold her tongue, he took a stick, and gave her a blow with it.

Quand un homme est mort, on n'y pense plus;
When a man is dead, he is no more thought of. } y stands for C
Ce sont des folies, ne vous y fiez pas;
These are foolish things, don't trust to them. } à cet homme, and à ces
folies.

In which instances le, en, y stand for nouns of both genders and numbers. en in the fifth instance stands besides for a preposition and a noun (with a stick).

On ne me trompe point, je ne puis le croire, or je n'en puis rien croire.

Nous fumes maltraitées, & nous le sommes encore.

On a tout tenté pour faire passer le Bill, mais on n'y a pu réussir.

On le dit, mais je n'y ajoute pas foi.

In which instances le, en, y, stand for Je ne puis croire qu'on veuille me tromper;
Nous sommes encore maltraitées;

They don't deceive me, I cannot believe it, or, I can believe nothing of it.

We were ill used, and are en I so still (women speak).

Every thing has been tried to make the Bill pass, but they could never succeed.

They say so, but I give no credit to it.

- A *On n'a pu réussir à faire passer le Bill ;
Je n'ajoute pas foi à ce qu'on dit.*

These pronouns express always the object or end of the verb. They are used both for things and persons: en and y are indeclinable; le is generally so too, except in these two cases.

Le is declinable, 1st, whenever it relates to a noun: as Est-ce là votre pensée? Pouvez-vous douter que ce ne la soit? Is that your thought? Can you doubt that it is, or but it is? wherein la relates to, and stands for votre pensée.

Etes-vous Madame une telle! Oui, je la suis,

Are you mistress such a one? Yes, I am.

Etes-vous les filles de Mr. A? Oui, nous les sommes,

Are you the daughters of Mr. A? Yes, we are.

Sont-ce là vos chevaux, vos outils? Oui, ce les sont,

Are these your horses, or tools? Yes, it is, or they are.

- B If the question is about rational creatures, we answer with the pronoun personal: as, Sont-ce là vos gens? Oui, ce sont eux? Are these your people? Yes, it is they: Sont-ce là les filles de M. A? Oui, ce sont elles. Are these Mr. A's daughters? Yes, it is they. But with irrational and inanimate objects, we always use the pronoun les.

2dly, le is declinable, but in the singular only, in these and such like instances spoken by women: Je suis malade & je la serai long-temps, I am sick, and shall be so long: Je fus effrayée & je la suis encore, I was affrighted, and am so still.

But those sentences must be spoken by women themselves, and therefore expressed with the pronoun of the first person; for with any other pronoun tho' women are spoken of, the pronoun relative is indeclinable. Therefore we don't say Elle est malade & elle la sera long-temps, but elle le sera, &c. she is sick, and will be so long.

In all other cases, that is, when the pronoun supplying relates to an ad-noun, or many adnouns together, it is indeclinable: as,

- C Elle étoit jalouse de son autorité, & elle le devoit être.
She was jealous of her authority, and ought to have been so.
Nous avons été malades, & nous le sommes encore,
We have been sick, and are so still, (women speak.)

The French Academy and the best Grammarians do not admit of that over-nice distinction for a woman who speaks of herself, and say that, in any case, le is indeclinable when it relates to an adjective, and declinable only when to a noun.]

¶ A very judicious grammarian, and particular friend of mine, Mr. Satis, in his notes upon Holder's Chambaud's Grammar, has quoted the above remark, but at the same time expressed his disapprobation. His great argument is the law of concord, and Madame de Sévigné his chief supporter.

But 1^o. Why should not the law of concord respect the number, as well as the gender? In this phrase: Ils sont heureux, & nous ne le sommes pas: Mr. S. does not object to le being indeclinable; it would be the same, if the first member of the sentence were to run thus: Elles sont heureuses. The truth is that le is indeclinable because it supplies an adjective; as will be seen hereafter.

- D 2^o. As to Madame de Sévigné, her authority has certainly great weight in point of elegance and diction; but the very reason he alledged to justify her false concord, rather invalidates her testimony. "Je crovois, dit-elle, que j'ai de la barbe au menton, si je disois, je le suis." "I would readily think, said she, that my chin is furnished with a beard, if I were to say, je le suis." This answer is a mere sophism, which borders too much upon self-conceit, and of course renders her authority exceptionable. The French Academy, though perfectly aware of Madame de Sévigné's justly deserved fame, yet, in spite of her animadversion, gave their verdict against the declinability of le when it relates to an adjective; and certainly most of the members of that corps, as a d'Olivet, a Duclos, a Marmontel, so highly commendable for their learning had not forfeited their share of common sense and natural logic.

Therefore the safest is to abide by their decision, and say :

A

Je suis malade, & je le serai long-temps.

Je suis mal-heureuse, & je le serai toujours.

Je fus effrayée, & je le suis encore.

Vous êtes enrhumé, & je le suis aussi. (a woman speaks.)

Elles sont heureuses, & nous ne le sommes pas. (women speak.)

The reasons upon which the decision of the French Academy is grounded, are, in my humble opinion, as follows :

1^o. Le, being of itself an article, and becoming a pronoun merely by accident, that is, through the ellipsis of the substantive which it pointed out when an article, cannot assume its declinable form but when it relates to a substantive, because substantives are the only words which of themselves have a gender ; in all other cases le must be clad in the livery of the masculine singular ; a gender devolved to words which have none of their own, nearly in the same manner as il impersonal resembles il personal, that is, assumes the dress of the masculine singular : as, il arrive, it happens ; il arrive, he arrives. B

2^o. The phrases considered before, and the like, are never construed but with a verb substantive : as, être, paroître, devenir, &c.

3^o. In such phrases, the supplying pronoun le supplies their predicate only, and has nothing to do with their subject, either virtual or actual.

4^o. The predicate of such phrases is always either a mere adjective, or an adjective phrase, that is, a whole sentence, or a substantive used adjectively.

Now, when le supplies a mere adjective, it must remain indeclinable : because an adjective has no gender nor number of its own, but only jointly with a substantive, to which it is subservient, and in the livery of which it is clad.

When le supplies a whole sentence, it must, by all means, be indeclinable, because a sentence has no gender nor number of its own.

But when le supplies a substantive, it must be observed whether that substantive be used as a denomination or a qualification. C

If it be used as a qualification, it has the true force of an adjective, and is preceded by no article ; consequently le, its representative, is indeclinable ; as in this phrase :

Elle est encore fille à son âge, & il y apparence qu'elle le sera toute sa vie ; at her age she is a maid still, and very likely she will remain so for all her life.

If the substantive be used as a denomination, it preserves its true force, and then is preceded by an article, which of course is clad in its livery ; consequently le, its representative, must appear in the same dress : as in this phrase :

Etes-vous la fille de Mr. A ? Oui, je la suis. Are you Mr. A.'s daughter ? Yes, I am.

So true is this assertion, that when the predicate is a substantive masculine, le, its representative, wears its livery, though the subject of the sentence be feminine : as in these phrases :

Mademoiselle A. est le bijou de la famille : oui, elle le seroit, si elle étoit aussi aimable qu'elle est jolie. Miss A. is the jewel of the family : yes, she would be so, if she were as amiable as she is pretty. D

Mademoiselle B. est le plus riche parti de la province : oui, elle le sera, si son oncle vient à mourir sans enfans ; Miss B. is the richest match in the province : yes, she will be so, if her uncle should happen to die without issue. And likewise in the plural :

Mesdemoiselles B. sont les deux plus riches partis de la province : oui, elles les seroient si leur oncle venoit, &c.

And in this likewise, the subject of which is masculine, and the predicate feminine :

Il étoit la consolation de ses parens, & il la seroit encore, si, &c. He was the comfort of his parents, and he would be so still, if, &c.

I confess that such phrases, though grammatically right, present, at the first aspect, a kind of harshness, which a good writer knows how to avoid, by taking another turn.

A I must beg the reader's pardon, for having expatiated so long upon this matter; but having been in some measure challenged, I thought it my duty to give all the elucidation in my power. The error of Chambaud, Madame de Sévigné, and Mr. Satis, proceeds from their having attended more to the subject than to the predicate or attribute of the sentence.]

2°. ¶ En is usually the second state of the pronoun relative le, that is to say, always implies the preposition de; therefore it generally stands for a noun construed with that preposition; even for a noun taken in a limited sense, and governed of the verb as its object; for instance:

Whenever something is spoken, that has been named in the first part of the sentence, or in the question which is answered to, instead of repeating the name of that thing, the particle en is used, if that name has already been construed with de: as,

Si vous voulez voir de beaux tableaux, il en a; if you wish to see fine pictures, he has some.

En stands for de beaux tableaux (limited or partitive sense).

It is the same if the words of the second phrase require de or imply it: as,

J'ai été voir le Panorama: Nous en parlions dans le moment (2d state);

I went to see the Panorama: We were just speaking of it.

Vous avez vu le Panorama; en êtes-vous content?

You have seen the Panorama; have you been pleased with it?

C En is used because we say, parler de, être content de.

As also in this phrase wherein de is implied: La patience est une grande vertu: Oui, c'en est une grande; Patience is a great virtue; yes, it is a great one. En stands for des vertus, and the answering phrase is elliptical, viz. c'est une grande vertu des vertus.]

En refers also to the place: as En venez-vous? Oui j'en viens; Do you come from thence? (a place mentioned before.) Yes, I come from that place.

Moreover en is used through exaggeration, as in this phrase, Je n'en puis plus, I am quite gone; and others like, which are inserted in my Dialogues and Dictionary.

3°. The particle y relates to Places, Persons, and Things, considered as a Condition, State, Disposition, Obligation or Necessity, under which one is; the Subject or Matter which one applies oneself to; and the End one aims at; .in all which acceptations it is rendered into English, by there, thither, or within (when it has a reference to place), or by the pronouns it or them, with one of these prepositions, at, by, for, in, of, to, with: as,

C'est une belle charge, il y aspirait depuis long-temps;

It is a fine place, he aimed at it a great while ago.

Il l'a fait, mais il n'y gagnera rien;

He has done it, but he will get nothing by it.

Il n'aime pas sa profession, il n'y est pas propre : A
 He does not like his calling or business, he is not fit for it.
L'affaire dont vous parlez mérite bien qu'on y songe ;
 The affair you are speaking of is well worth thinking of.
Il aime son devoir, il s'y applique entièrement ;
 He loves his duty, he is entirely applied to it.
Il s'est engagé dans une étrange affaire, il n'y réussira pas ;
 He is engaged in an odd sort of affair, he will not succeed in it.

I have said that when y and en meet together, y goes first : but en is then a pronoun ; for when it is a preposition (in which case it is never used with verbs, but before their gerunds) it B goes before y ; as, En y allant, by the way, or when I go by.

¶ En may refer to persons : but y very seldom does, and never hardly, except in giving an answer ; for instance, having spoken of a man, we may say very properly, Je n'en fais point de cas ; I have no esteem for him.

But in this phrase, He is an honest man, court him ; we should say c'est un honnête homme, attachez-vous à lui ; and by no means, attachez-vous-y ; (which phrase would be very proper in speaking of any thing, as a science, an art, &c.) In this likewise ; I know that man, I will not trust him ; je connois cet homme-là, je ne veux point me fier à lui. (Je ne m'y fie pas, savours too much of a proverb.)

Whereas to this phrase, Mr. A. is your friend, you should think of him ; M. A. est votre ami, vous devriez penser à lui ; the answer may be given thus, oui, j'y penserai ; yes, I will ; or to this : Pensez-vous à votre ami ? Are you thinking of your friend ? Oui, j'y pense ; Yes, I am.

However, in this phrase : When a man is dead, he is no longer thought of ; C quand un homme est mort, on n'y pense plus ; y may be used, because the phrase presents an indefinite sense ; but it would be improper, if the sense were determinate ; and you should say in this phrase : Mrs. B. is dead ; Madame B. est morte : you no longer think of her ; vous ne pensez plus à elle ; or in this, My friend is dead, I think of him every day ; mon ami est mort, je pense à lui tous les jours ; the expression j'y pense would imply another meaning, viz. his or her death.

Moreover y is used in some particular phrases, which it is difficult to reduce to rules, with respect to the Genius of the English tongue ; but which are inserted in my Dialogues and Dictionary.

Particular Observations upon the Construction of the Pronouns Personal of the third Person, il, lui, elle.

§ VI. 1°. The pronouns il, ils ; elle, elles ; le, la, les : either governing, or being governed of a verb, are indifferently used D for all sorts of objects, rational and irrational, animate or inanimate. Therefore we say, speaking of	{	a Rock,	{	Il est escarpé ; it is stiff

		a Mountain,		Elle est haute ; it is high.
		Trees and Meadows.	{	Ils sont fleuris ; they are in blossom.
				Je le ferai couper ; I will get it cut down.
			{	Il faut les couper ; they must be cut down.

A But when the same pronouns attend the verb être to be, the pronoun relative indeclinable le must be used, in speaking of irrational and inanimate things. Thus, in answer to this question,

Est-ce-là la montagne dont vous parliez?

Is that the mountain that you were speaking of?

We say ce l'est it is it, (or) that's it; not c'est elle.

Est-ce-là votre livre? Oui ce l'est, and never c'est lui.

Is that your book? Yes, it is.

2°. Il, ils; elle, elles; are used through all their states, when objects are personified, and one attributes to them what is attributed to persons; which the French frequently do in

B speaking of virtues and vices: as,

L'amour-propre est captieux: c'est lui qui nous séduit; de lui viennent la plupart de nos maux; & ce n'est qu'à lui qu'il faut s'en prendre.

Self-love is deceitful: It seduces us; from it most of our evils proceed: and upon it only we must lay the blame of them.

La vertu est précieuse; d'elle seule nous devons attendre de véritables biens: c'est à elle que nous devons notre vraie gloire; & c'est pour elle qu'il faut sacrifier nos soins.

Virtue is precious: from it alone true blessings ought to be expected: to it we owe our true glory; and for it our cares must be sacrificed.

But,

3°. Usage, the only Master of the Rules in point of Languages, and the only rule of speaking properly, has, as it were, consecrated the other states of that pronoun (lui, leur, de lui, à elle, &c.) to such odd ways of construction, as are impossible to be reduced to rules, and can be learnt only by use. Thus speaking of inanimate things, we must sometimes use lui and leur, and sometimes we must not, tho' speaking of the same things. Thus we say of a sword, Je lui dois la vie; I owe my life to it (because épée sword, is personified); but it is not so
D in the following phrase, and we must say:

J'y ai fait mettre une nouvelle garde; I have got a new hilt put to it; not Je lui ai fait mettre.

Again we say of mineral waters,

Je leur suis redevable de ma santé;

I am indebted to them for my health (they are personified);

but we say,

On y a fait de beaux réservoirs;

Fine reservoirs have been built for them; not on leur a fait.

The conjunctives lui and leur are generally said of animate A things, as horses, birds, and other living creatures : as, speak- } a bird, } Coupez-lui les ailes, cut his wings.
ing of } chickens, } Donnez-leur à manger, give them to eat.

However, the practice of these Constructions is so much the easier to learn, as they don't extend to a great many cases, which I have taken care to insert in my Exercises.

4°. The disjunctive pronouns lui and elle, eux and elles, governed by a preposition, can never be said at all of irrational and inanimate creatures. Thus we don't say D'abord on plaça le poteau, (or la poutre) & après lui (or elle) une barre de fer; but

D'abord on plaça le poteau, or la poutre, & ensuite une barre de fer;

They first placed the post, or beam, and then (after it) an iron-bar.

Therefore in those cases, to remove the difficulty, one must make use of an adverb, whose signification comprehends, and answers to that of both the preposition and pronoun. Thus we say :

Prenez ce cheval, & montez dessus; not sur lui.

Take that horse, and mount or ride him.

Ouvrez ce cabinet, & mettez-vous dedans; not dans lui.

Open that closet and get in.

Ils étoient à l'entour; not autour de lui.

They were round it (speaking of a tree, for instance).

5°. These following, being both prepositions and adverbs according as they are or are not followed by a noun or pronoun, when any of them meet with such a pronoun which can't be said of inanimate things, one need only suppress the pronoun, and the word which was a preposition becomes thereby an adverb.

à côté, aside, by. dessous, underneath.

à couvert, sheltered. au dessous, below.

à l'abri, under shelter. par-dessous, under.

en deçà, on this side. loin, far. D au de-là, on that side, or beyond. proche, for près de, near.

auprès, near, by. au travers, for à travers de, cross.

avec, with. tout contre, hard by.

dessus, upon. tout auprès, just by.

au-dessus, above, over. vis-à-vis, over-against.

par-dessus, over and above. aux environs, round about.

Therefore, when speaking of a brute or a tree, we say :

Mettez-vous vis-à-vis, put yourself over-against it; not vis-à-vis de lui, or d'elle.

A The Use and Construction of the Pronominal Adnouns.

§ VII. We have seen that they are of two sorts, the Absolute and Relative.

1°. Pronominal adnouns absolute (or rather possessive articles, see p. 389.) mon, ton, son, &c. do not agree in French in gender with the noun of the possessor, as in English, but with that of the thing possessed: as, La mère aime son fils, & le père sa fille, The mother loves her son, and the father his daughter.

2°. When a noun feminine (which should naturally take before it the feminine of these adnouns, ma, ta, sa) begins with a vowel, or h mute, it takes the masculine, mon, ton, son, in order to avoid the meeting of two vowels: as,

B mon âme, my soul. son élévation, his or her rise.
son histoire, his or her story. sa haute élévation, his great preferment.
son habileté, his or her skill. sa hont, his or her shame.

3°. We always use these pronominal adnouns before nouns of relations and friends, when we address ourselves to them; whereas such particles are in general left out in English: as, Venez-çà, ma fille, mon enfant; Come hither, daughter, child.

Tout à l'heure, ma mère; mon père; oui, ma tante, &c.

C Presently, mother, father; yes, aunt, &c.

4°. Pronominal adnouns absolute, coming after a verb with a noun, are resolved in French by their primitive pronoun personal in the third state: as, He has cut off his head, Il lui a coupé la tête, and not il a coupé sa tête. You cut my finger, Vous me coupez le doigt; and never vous coupez mon doigt. Twist his neck, Tordez-lui le cou, and never tordez son cou, &c.

5°. When nouns are preceded by a personal pronoun, which sufficiently denotes whose is the thing you speak of, the pronominal adnouns are wholly left out, and supplied by the article: as,

Je lui dois la vie; I owe my life to him; or to it (never ma vie).

Il grince les dents; he gnashes his teeth (never ses dents): the pronouns je and il, specifying enough whose life and teeth are meant, and therefore making the possessive unnecessary.

For the same reason we say: J'ai mal à la tête; I have a pain in my head, I have the head-ach, &c.; Elle a mal aux dents; she has the tooth-ach: Il a le pied foulé; his foot is sprained, &c. not j'ai mal à ma tête: son pied est foulé.

But we say: Je vois que ma jambe s'enfle; I see that my leg swells; because, in saying only Je vois que la jambe s'enfle, the pronoun se cannot denote that I mean my own leg, since I can A likewise see that another's leg swells.

Nevertheless, if the pain is become, as it were, habitual, we may say (in speaking to somebody who knows it) Ma tête, or Ma jambe me fait mal, my head, or leg pains me; Ma migraine m'a fort tourmenté aujourd'hui, my megrim has tormented me much to-day; Sa fièvre le consume, his fever consumes him: because the pronominal adnoun denotes the particular habit which one has contracted with the aching part of the body, or the disease itself.

It is for the same reason we say, Il ne se tient pas ferme sur ses pieds, he don't stand firm upon his feet; Tenez-vous ferme B sur vos jambes, stand firm upon your legs; because this ought to be habitual and natural.

We say in a proverbial way of speaking, se trouver sur ses pieds, to signify that one cannot be the worse for undertaking some particular things: and retomber sur ses pieds, to signify, that one always gets off clear and safe, whatever he attempts.

Pronominal adnouns are also very properly used with the names of the members of the body in some few sentences like these; Il lui donna sa main à baiser, he gave him his hand to kiss; Elle a donné hardiment son bras au Chirurgien, she boldly gave her arm to the Surgeon; Il perd tout son sang, he loses all his blood, &c. But they must be learnt by practice, as well as when it is indifferent to use or not the pronominal adnoun; as, Elever la voix, or Elever sa voix, to raise one's voice, &c.

But observe here; that son, so, ses, are not always englished by his, her, its, nor the English pronoun oneself rendered into French by soi, or soi-même; but that one must consider the term of its relation; for if it relates to the pronoun indeterminate on, or some of its oblique relations, as in the instance se trouver sur ses pieds; or in other words, if considered with its substantive, it relates to nothing specified, as in the other instance, retomber sur ses pieds, then son, sa, ses, cannot be rendered in English by his, her, &c. which has a reference to something specified, but by the pronoun indeterminate oneself, or only one's followed by a noun; as, on the other hand, oneself must be rendered into French by se, as se blesser, to hurt oneself, and one's followed by a noun, by a pronominal adnoun absolute agreeing with it, as in the same instances se trouver sur ses pieds (word for word), to be put upon one's feet still; retomber sur ses pieds, to light upon one's feet again.

2dly, As the pronouns personal of the third person, il, elle, lui, leur, &c. cannot be used in some particular cases, when we speak of irrational and inanimate things; so in like case we do not use the pronominal adnouns, son, sa, ses; leur, leurs, le sien, &c. instead whereof we use the relative (en), and we say, Cette maladie est fort cachée, cependant j'en connois l'origine & les effets (not son origine); This illness is much hid, yet I know its origin and effects, or I know both the origin and effects of it. Though we say, Je connois cette maladie, son origine, ses symptômes, & ses effets; I know this illness, its origin, symptoms, and effects.

¶ The reason of this difference is, that in the first sentence there are two verbs, one governed by the premised substantive maladie, the other governing the subsequent substantives origine, effets. Whereas in the second sentence there is but one verb, governing both the premised and subsequent substantives.]

We say, likewise, Voilà de bonne eau, j'en connois toutes les qualités (not ses qualités); This water is good, I know all its qualities. Voyez-vous cette maison? la situation en est belle, les pavillons en sont grands (not sa situation, ses pavillons); Do you see that house? It is pleasantly situated: its pavilions are large. Though we say, Cette maison a ses commodités & ses inconvéniens, That house has its conveniences and inconveniences. Likewise, we say of a tree: Les fruits en sont bons, &c. ils sont meilleurs que ceux d'un autre, &c. Its fruit is good; it is better than another's.

¶ The above exception and distinction hold good when the substantive pointed out by the possessive is either the subject or object of the sentence, but when it is used as a compound regimen, that is, with a preposition, the possessive must not be supplied by the relative en, because en represents a compound regimen, and two compound regimens of the same kind cannot take place in the same sentence. A short example will elucidate the matter. On admire Paris, ses bâtimens, ses promenades, &c. (in this sentence there is but one verb, ses is used). Paris est beau, on en admire les bâtimens, les promenades, &c. (in this there are two verbs, en is used, not ses). Paris est beau, on admire la grandeur de ses bâtimens, de ses promenades, &c. (in this bâtimens, promenades, form a compound regimen, ses is used, and by no means en.)

The pronominal adnouns are safely used when the term of their relation is expressed before, in the same sentence, by a noun or pronoun; as,

Remettez-ce livre à sa place; Put this book in its place again.

Mettez-le en sa place; Put it in its place.

- B 6°. The Pronominal adnouns absolute must always be repeated in French before every noun, when there are many in the sentence, with which they are grammatically construed; as,
Son père & sa mère, his father and mother (not son père & mère).
Nos amis & nos ennemis, our friends and foes (not nos amis & ennemis).

Elle lui fit voir ses plus beaux & ses plus vilains habits;
 She showed him her best and worst clothes.

¶ Except when the two adnouns have almost the same signification: as,
Elle lui fit voir ses plus beaux & plus magnifiques habits; She showed him her finest and most magnificent clothes.]

- 7°. The Pronominal adnouns relative, le mien, le vôtre, &c.
 C are of the same use, and have the same construction as in English, being never put before a noun, but always relating to a foregoing one; as,

Est-ce là votre livre? Oui, c'est le mien, or ce l'est,
 Is that your book? Yes, it is mine. or Yes, it is.

But when this adnoun (referring to its antecedent expressed in the same sentence) comes after to be, in the sense of to belong, it must be resolved in French by a pronoun personal disjunctive, in the third relation: as,

That book is mine; That house is his or yours;

Ce livre est à moi. Cette maison est à lui, or à vous.

- D 8°. The noun in the 2d state that comes after to be, used in the same signification, must likewise be put in the third state; as,

This hat is the Gentleman's; This fan is the Lady's;

Ce chapeau est à Monsieur. Cet éventail est à Madame.

Moreover, we use the Pronominal adnouns in the following case, when the English use the adnoun relative.

A friend of mine; Un de mes amis (not un ami des miens).

Of the Construction of the Pronouns Relative qui, lequel, &c. A so called as always referring to some Noun or Pronoun which precedes, and then is styled Antecedent.

§ VIII. 1°. The Relative qui always comes next to the Antecedent: as, Ces gens qui demeuroient chez moi sont partis, Those people are gone who lodged at my house.

Except when the antecedent is a pronoun personal, coming before its verb: as, Il la trouva qui pleuroit à chaudes larmes; He found her weeping most bitterly.

† The antecedent, when a pronoun demonstrative, is sometimes left out; as, Qui répond, paye; He who bails (or the security) must pay. Celui, nominative to paye, is understood, and qui is said to be used absolutely. (See qui-conque, p. 270. C.)

Sometimes the two verbs are elegantly inverted; as, Travailloit qui pouvoit; They worked that could. Joua qui voulut; They that chose played at cards.]

2°. The relative qui is used only in the first and fourth states for both genders and numbers, with respect to all sorts of objects; but in the other states, that is, after a preposition, it is said of personal objects only, or considered as such. When we speak of irrational and inanimate objects, we use the other pronouns lequel and quoi. Thus we say:

L'homme, (or) la femme qui vous a parlé, (or) que vous voyez;
The man (or) woman who spoke to you, (or) whom you see.

Le Prince, (or) la Princesse de qui il a reçu tant de faveurs; C
The Prince, (or) Princess of whom he has received so many favours.

Le maître, (or) la maîtresse à qui il appartient;

The master, (or) mistress whom he belongs to. [most.

Le choses qui lui plaisent le plus; The things that please him

Le cheval que vous montez; The horse that you ride upon.

Les malheurs que vous appréhendez; The misfortunes which you fear.

But speaking of irrational and inanimate creatures, we say:

Le cheval duquel (or) dont je me sers; The horse that I use (or) use to ride (not de qui).

L'opinion à laquelle (or) à quoi je m'attache; The opinion D which I adhere to (not à qui).

La chose sur laquelle (or) sur quoi je fais fond; The thing which I rely upon (not sur qui).

We say: La Fortune, de qui j'attends tout; Fortune, from which I expect all.

Le Ciel, de qui j'espère; Heaven, from which I hope, &c.—because la Fortune and le Ciel are there personified.

3°. Dont is used for both genders and numbers, instead of the second state of the three pronouns relative, qui, lequel, quoi. It

A always comes before the conjunctives, je, nous; tu, vous; il, ils; elle, elles; and is said both of persons and things: as,

C'est l'homme dont je parle; He is the man whom I am speaking of.

C'est une charge dont il ne se soucie pas; It is a place which he does not care for. [he spoke of

Vous voyez les femmes dont il parloit; You see the women

Except when questions are asked, for they cannot begin with dont: as, De qui (or) de quoi parlez-vous? Whom (or) what are you speaking of?

B De qui is used as well as dont, but with this difference, that it expresses the Ablative of the Latins, and is denoted by from in English: as,

L'homme de qui j'ai reçu une lettre; The man from whom I have received a letter.

Whereas of whom, of which, whose, must always be rendered by dont, which expresses the Genitive of the Latins: as,

La personne dont la réputation vous étonne; The person whose reputation you wonder at.

But dont must have immediately before it the term which it refers to, and be followed by a subject, either noun or pronoun, and a verb, or by a verb impersonal followed by another

C verb: as,

Le Ciel, dont le secours est nécessaire; Heaven, whose aid is necessary.

Le Ciel, dont le secours ne manque jamais; Heaven, whose assistance never fails.

Le Ciel, dont il faut implorer le secours; Heaven, whose aid must be implored.

However, this phrase, and the like: Heaven, without whose assistance we cannot prosper, must be expressed with the pronoun de qui or duquel, thus: Le Ciel, sans le secours duquel nous ne pouvons réussir; not dont sans or sans dont le secours, because though dont would have immediately before it the D noun which it relates to, yet it would not be followed immediately by the subject of the verb.

4°. Où is likewise used for the third state of the three pronouns relative, to whom, to which, to what; as also when they are governed by any of these prepositions, at, in, into, with. It serves for both genders and numbers, and relates to things denoting Time, Place, Condition, Disposition, Design, End, and Aim; but never to persons: as,

Voilà le but où il tend; That is the end which he aims at.

Le siècle où nous vivons; The age wherein we live.

Une affaire où je ne veux pas entrer ;

A thing in which I won't be concerned.

Les malheurs où il est plongé ; the misfortunes into which he is plunged.

Où in the first instance stands for auquel ; in the 2d, for dans lequel ; in the 3d, for dans laquelle ; and in the 4th, for dans lesquels.

From où are formed the adverbs of place d'où from whence, and par où through where, through which place.

5°. Que is sometimes used instead of de qui and à qui : so that que, besides its being the fourth state of qui, is also used for the second and third, for both genders and numbers ; whenever there comes immediately before it the second or third B state of a noun or pronoun personal for which it is a substitute ; but the sentence must begin with ce and the verb être : as,

C'est de vous qu'on parle (instead of de qui or dont) ;

It is you they are speaking of.

C'est à vous qu'on s'adresse (instead of à qui) ;

It is you they make application to.

C'est à vous qu'il appartient, de . . . (not à qui) ;

It is to you that it belongs, to . . .

¶ In such phrases que is rather conductive, and answers to ce : the following verb is to determine what preposition must be employed after the verb être ; hence the complement of that preposition is the virtual regimen of the following verb.]

6°. Que among a great many other constructions which shall C be mentioned in the Appendix, has a particular one, which may be called Conductive, being a Conjunction then used to bring the sense of the sentence to its perfection : que, so used, is englished by that, when expressed, for it is very often left out in English, even when it is relative ; but it must be always expressed in French, where it always governs, or is governed : as, Je crois que vous parlez ; I think you speak, or that you speak. L'homme que vous voyez ; The man you see, or that, or whom you see.

In the first instance, the verb Je crois, coming before que, D requires another verb to make the whole sentence, the continuity of the sense whereof is performed by que. In the other, que is governed of vous voyez, and relates to l'homme.

That que Conductive, (See p. 332, A.) is used in a very emphatical manner, before a noun terminating a sentence, or a verb, thus :

C'est une passion dangereuse que le jeu ;

Gaming is a dangerous passion.

C'est une sorte de honte que d'être malheureux ;

It is a sort of shame to be miserable.

But observe, 1st, that those sentences wherein que is thus used, always begin with the demonstrative c'est it is, or at least the pronoun primitive ce, and end with the noun which begins the sentence in English, and before which que is put.

2dly, That que always requires de after it, when it comes before the infinitive.

A Moreover, 1st, Qui, besides its being relative, is also interrogative and declarative, signifying quelle personne ? what person ? and then it takes qui and not que for its fourth state ; as Qui a fait cela ? or Qui est-ce qui a fait cela ? Who has done that ? Je sais qui vous voulez dire ; I know whom you mean. Qui verrez-vous tantôt ? Whom are you to see this evening.

2dly, Sometimes qui, in asking a question, signifies quelle chose (what thing) : as Qui fait l'oiseau ? or Qui est-ce qui fait l'oiseau ? What makes the bird ?

3dly, Sometimes also qui between two verbs, and even in the beginning of a sentence, signifies celui qui, he who, he that, and quiconque whosoever, any body who : when it meets between two verbs, it is governed of the first, at the same time that it governs the second ; as in these phrases : C'est l'excuse ordinaire de qui n'en a point de bonne ; It is the usual excuse of those who have not a good one. Il le dit à qui veut l'entendre ; He says it to any body who is willing to hear it.

B ¶ Where it seems that at the same time qui is both governed and governing ; but the truth is (see p. 257, B.), that its antecedent is understood.]

¶ This elliptical construction is an elegance, because it favours the brevity of diction ; but it is allowed only when there is no clashing of regimen : the ellipsis may take place in the above phrases, or in this :

Voulez-vous que je m'attache à qui je n'ai jamais su plaire ? Do you wish me to pay my addresses to the person whom I never was able to please ?

S'attacher and plaire have the same regimen, that is, both are construed with the preposition à.

But in this phrase, Voulez-vous que je m'éloigne de la personne à qui j'ai toujours su plaire ? Do you want me to break off correspondence with the person whom I have always been able to please ? the ellipsis cannot take place, because s'éloigner requires the preposition de, and plaire the preposition à.

C This phrase, à qui mieux mieux (the meaning of which is, in emulation of one another), may likewise be accounted for, by rectifying the ellipsis of celui.]

4thly, The relative qui and lequel can never agree with a noun that has no article before it. Therefore these English sentences :

He did that through avarice, which is capable of any thing ;

I know that by experience, which is a great master ;

must be rendered into French without the relative, and make two distinct sentences, one of which ends with the noun, and the other begins with et or mais with the noun repeated, instead of the relative, thus :

Il a fait cela par avarice ; mais l'avarice est capable de tout.

Je sais cela par expérience ; Et l'expérience est un grand maître ; or Et vous savez, or Et l'on sait bien que l'expérience est un grand maître.

¶ Because, in French, the relative cannot refer to a substantive taken adverbially, and in an unlimited sense.]

D Except from this rule ; 1st, Proper names, which are sufficiently determined and specified by themselves, without taking the article : as, Je lis Cicéron, qui est aussi bon Philosophe qu'Orateur ; I read Cicero, who is as good a Philosopher as Orator.

J'ai vu Paris, qui est une des plus belles villes du monde ;

I have seen Paris, which is one of the finest cities in the world.

2dly, Such nouns as have de before them, on account of some previous word that requires it, and thereby sufficiently determines the next noun ; as the adverbs capable, coupable, the nouns sorte, espèce, &c. the adverbs assez, point, &c. as,

Il est coupable de crimes qui méritent la mort ; He is guilty of crimes which deserve death.

Il n'y a point d'homme qui n'ait son foible ; There is no man but has his weak side.

Une sorte de liqueur qui est bonne à boire ; A sort of liquor that is good to drink.

3dly, Such Nouns of the things which are called to, and answer the vocative A of the Latins, before which the particle exclamative ô may come : as, Hommes, qui vivez en bêtes! Men who live like brutes! Avarice, qui causes tant de maux! Oh, Covetousness, that causeth so many mischiefs.

4thly, Such other nouns that have before them any number, as un, deux, trois, vingt, &c. any of these pronouns, ce, quelque, plusieurs, tout, nul, aucun (which perform there the office of the article), or the particle en signifying us or like; as, Il en vint un, or plusieurs qui n'étoient pas invités; There came one, or many, who were not invited.

Il parle en Philosophe qui sait la raison des choses;

He speaks like a Philosopher who knows the reason of things.

The reason both of this rule and exception is, that the Genius of the French language does not allow the relative qui to be used after a noun, unless it is specified by the article, or by some other specifying word, or by its own signification.

¶ For the same reason, which, referring to a whole sentence, cannot be translated into French by the mere relative qui or que, but by ce qui or ce que; B the intervention of the pronoun ce being necessary to individuate, as it were, the whole phrase related to.]

7°. The pronoun lequel, laquelle, is used for the sake of avoiding the too frequent repetitions of qui, and of removing the ambiguities that may arise from that pronoun, which is of both genders and numbers, and said, in the first state, both of persons and things; as in these sentences :

Alexandre fils de Philippe, qui régna le premier en Asie, Alexander, Philip's son, who reigned the first in Asia.

One cannot tell whether it was Alexander or Philip who C reigned : whereas lequel, used instead of qui, will denote that it was Alexander; because, when two nouns of the same gender come together, the relative lequel refers to the former, and therefore removes the ambiguity that may be occasioned by qui.

C'est la cause de cet effet dont je vais traiter, (or) que je vais examiner; It is the cause of that effect which I am going to treat of, (or) to examine.

One cannot see whether dont or que, which are used for both genders, relate to effet or cause; therefore lequel, or laquelle, must be used, according to the gender of its antecedent.

However, it is much better to repeat qui, though ever so D often, when it causes no ambiguity, than to use lequel, which is quite appropriated to the style of proclamations, edicts, treaties, contracts, and other acts of that nature, wherein less regard is to be had to the purity, than to the perspicuity of the language.

8°. Qui must be repeated before every verb of which it is the subject; as,

C'est un homme qui est savant, qui danse bien, qui joue de plusieurs instrumens, & qui se fait aimer de tout le monde. He is a

A learned man, who dances well, plays upon several instruments, and makes himself beloved by every body.

¶ Qui and lequel are sometimes used to imply indecision, choice comparison between several persons or things; in which case the names of such persons or things are each pointed out by the preposition de; whereas, in English, they admit of no preposition; as,

1. Je ne sais à qui m'adresser, de Pierre, de Paul, ou de Jean, I do not know whom I should apply to, Peter, Paul, or John.

2. Choisissez laquelle vous voudrez, de la montre ou de la bague; choose which you like best, the watch or the ring.

Such phrases are elliptical. The 1st stands for Je ne sais à qui des trois m'adresser, &c. which itself stands for, Je ne sais quel est celui des trois à qui je dois m'adresser, &c. As celui (see p. 264, A.) requires the preposition de before the next noun, and it is the genius of the French (see p. 375, B.) to repeat most prepositions before each noun governed, it may account for the prefixing of de to each subsequent noun.

The same may be said of the second phrase, which stands for, choisissez laquelle des deux vous voudrez, or choisissez celle des deux que vous voudrez, &c.

Sometimes the same preposition prefixed to the relative, may also be prefixed to the following nouns; but then the phrase will imply quite a different sense.

For instance, the 1st phrase construed with the preposition de means that I should apply to one of the three persons, and auquel might be used instead of à qui. Whereas this phrase:

Je ne sais à qui m'adresser; à Pierre, à Paul, ou à Jean: non, je m'adresserai à Philippe; means no intention, no obligation of applying to any of them, since I determined to apply to Philip; and auquel cannot be substituted to à qui. Again,

Avec qui sortirez-vous, de Pierre ou de Paul? With whom will you go out, Peter or Paul? des deux, of the two, is understood; therefore the phrase is very different from this:

Avec qui sortirez vous, avec Pierre ou avec Paul? in which the ellipsis of celui may be rectified, but not that of des deux; and to which the answer may be: Avec ni l'un ni l'autre, with neither.]

9°. The pronoun quoi is also used for both genders and numbers. It is said of things only, and never of persons, and is sometimes used instead of lequel: as, Le plus grand vice à quoi il soit sujet, instead of auquel il soit sujet, The greatest vice which he is addicted to. Ce sont des choses à quoi il faut penser, instead of auxquelles il faut, &c. These are things which one must think of.

¶ Quoi has of itself an indeterminate signification; therefore, though it may sometimes be used for lequel, laquelle, &c. yet there are cases wherein lequel, &c. cannot be employed instead of quoi. In such phrases for instance: C'est à quoi je vous exhorte; This is what I exhort you to.

Il n'y a rien à quoi je ne sois disposé; There is not any thing I am not disposed for.

On account of the ellipsis of its antecedent, quoi sometimes appears to be used absolutely, or rather substantively; as,

Je n'ai pas de quoi vivre; I have nothing wherewith to live upon.

En quoi il est doublement coupable; In that he is in a double manner culpable.]

¶ As qui sometimes signifies quelque personne (what person); so quoi sometimes signifies quelle chose (what thing); as, De quoi parlez-vous? What are you speaking of? A quoi pensez-vous? What are you thinking on? Il y a je ne sais quoi; There is I don't know what.]

Quoi makes que in its first and fourth state, and sometimes A in its second state; it is then chiefly used interrogatively: as, —Qu'est-ce que c'est? What is it? and never Quoi-est-ce, &c. Que dites-vous? What do you say?—Que sert, or de quoi sert d'avoir du bien, si l'on n'en sçit pas jouir? What avail riches, if one knows not how to enjoy them?

If somebody said, Il m'est arrivé une étrange affaire, An odd sort of affair has befallen me, one should ask quoi? what? or quelle affaire? what affair? But quoi is never used before a verb; and it is for that reason we say, Que vous est-il arrivé? What has happened to you? Que dites-vous? Quoi is never used in such phrases.

1°. The same pronouns relatives are used to ask questions, B to which add quel: as, Qui est cet homme-là, or Quel est cet homme-là? Who is that man, or what is that man? De qui ne médit-on pas? Who is not traduced? A qui se fier? Who can one trust to? (an ellipsis for A qui peut-on se fier?) Quelle est cette femme-là? Who is that woman? Duquel, de laquelle, desquels parlez-vous? Which do you speak of?

But qui is said of persons, and quel of things. Therefore to this preposition Voilà des gens, (or) des femmes qui vous demandent, There are people or women who ask for you, we answer,

Qui sont-ils? or Qui sont elles? Who are they? But to these others,

Il court d'étranges bruits, Strange reports are spread, we ask C Quels sont-ils? What are they? and not Qui sont-ils?

J'ai appris de grandes nouvelles, I have heard great news.

Quelles sont-elles? What are they? Quelles sont ces nouvelles?

The pronoun interrogative quel (without the article) answers to the what of the English; and lequel to their which: lequel being followed by the second state, when it comes before a noun? as, Quel homme voulez-vous dire? What man do you mean? Lequel choisissez-vous? Which do you choose? Laquelle des deux souhaitez-vous? Which of the two will you have? (See p. 262, B.)

Moreover we observe a very remarkable Pleonasm most commonly, and sometimes necessarily, used in asking questions with the pronoun, qui and quoi.—The most natural (and the best) French for these questions and the D the other like, is—Who is there? Qui est-là?—Who has done that? Qui a fait cela?—What do you say? Que dites-vous?—What do you ask? Que demandez-vous?

Yet the common idiom of the language is to express them thus: Qui est-ce qui est-là?—Qui est-ce qui a fait cela? Qu'est-ce que vous dites? Qu'est-ce que vous demandez? Nay, we often say, —Qu'est-ce que c'est que vous dites? —Qu'est-ce que c'est que vous demandez?

And to this Preposition, J'ai quelque chose à vous dire, I have something to say to you, the most natural and common answer is, Qu'est-ce que c'est? What is it? And not Qu'est-ce, nor Quoi est-ce, nor Quoi what? which last would rather intimate that we did not hear what was said to us.

A Of the Use and Construction of the Pron. Demonstrative, ce, celui, ceci, cela, &c.

§ IX. 1°. The particles demonstrative, ce, cet, cette, ces, are mere adnouns: celui-ci, celle-ci; celui-là; celle-là, ceux-ci, celles-ci, ceux-là, celles-là, are used absolutely without any noun, and celui, celle, ceux, celles, always require after them a noun in the second state, or the relative qui (in any of its states): as,

Ce tableau this or that picture, cet ouvrage that work, cet homme that man, cette femme that woman, ces gens those people, ces filles those girls.

Celui-ci est meilleur que celui-là, This is better than that.

Celles-là ne sont pas si belles que celles-ci,

Those are not so good as these.

Votre cheval est aussi beau que celui du Maquignon,

Your horse is as fine as that of the Jockey (or as the Jockey's).

Celui qui aime la vertu, He that loves virtue.

Ci and là are sometimes added to the noun that comes after the demonstrative ce, cet, cette, ces, in order to specify and particularise it still more; as cet homme-ci this man, cette femme-là that woman; ci, denoting a near or present object, and là a distant and absent one; and ce, thus followed by a noun attended by ci or là, answers to this or that before a noun.

C ¶ The same must be said of the pronouns ceci (this), and cela (that), which relate to things only, and are formed of the pronoun ce prefixed to the particles ci and là; as,

Ceci est pour moi, and cela est pour vous; This is for me, and that is for you.

This and that are sometimes well rendered into French by ce or cet only; but one cannot in some cases leave out ci or là, and those cases must be determined by judgment only. Thus, if being at London I write a letter, and after mentioning Paris or Vienna, I add something that has happened there, I must necessarily say en cette ville-là, là added to ville specifying the distant city which I have been mentioning. For should I say only en cette ville, these words would intimate that it was at London where the thing I am speaking of happened.

D 2°. The pronouns celui, celle, ceux, which relate both to persons and things, being followed by the relative qui are englished by he who, or he that, she who or that, they who or that, and celui is the subject of one verb, and qui that of another: as, Celui qui aime la vertu est heureux; He who loves virtue is happy.

Celle qui refuse un mari n'est pas toujours sûre d'en retrouver un autre;

She who refuses a husband is not always sure to get another again.

Ceux qui méprisent la science n'en connoissent pas le prix.

They who despise learning know not the value of it.

Observe, therefore, 1st, that he who, he that, she who, she that, A &c. are never rendered into French by il qui, elle qui, ils or eux qui, but by celui qui, celle qui, ceux qui, celles qui.

2dly, That though these two words may be separated in English, and come before their respective verb, yet they must always come together in French before the first verb, unless là is added to the first: as,

They know not the value of learning who despise it;

Ceux-là ne connoissent pas le prix de la science qui la méprisent, (or better) Ceux qui méprisent la science n'en connoissent pas le prix.

3dly, He who, or ne that, they who, or they that (separated in English) are also elegantly rendered into French by the im- B personal c'est, with an infinitive followed by que de before a second infinitive: as,

They know not the value of learning who despise it;

C'est ne pas connoître le prix de la science que de la mépriser.

C'est se tromper que de croire; He is mistaken who thinks, or they, or those are mistaken who think, &c.

4thly, The pronominal adnouns absolute, his, her, their, construed in English with a noun followed by the pronoun relative who or they before a verb, is made into French by the second state of celui, celle, ceux, followed by qui, and the possessive is left out: as, C

All men blame his manners who often says that which himself does not think;

Tout le monde blâme les mœurs de celui qui dit souvent ce qu'il ne pense pas.

Providence does not prosper their labours that slight their best friends;

La Providence ne bénit point les travaux de ceux qui méprisent leurs meilleurs amis.

5thly, The pronoun indeterminate such, followed by as or that (but not governed of the verb substantive to be), is also rendered into French by ceux qui, or celui qui: as, D

Such as don't love virtue don't know it,

Ceux qui n'aiment pas la vertu, ne la connoissent pas.

6thly, These two words, the former, the latter, referring to nouns mentioned in the foregoing speech, are made by l'un and l'autre, or celui-ci and celui-là, agreeing in gender with the noun; and celui-ci relates to the noun last mentioned, and celui-là to the first mentioned; but l'un and l'autre may relate to either you please, according to its gender: as,

A Virtue is nothing else but an entire conformity to the eternal rule of things; Vice is the infringement of that rule: This causes the misery of men: That makes them happy: Therefore let us love the former, and detest the latter.

La vertu n'est autre chose qu'une entière conformité à la règle éternelle des choses; Le vice est l'infraction de cette règle: Celui-ci fait le malheur des hommes; Celle-là les rend heureux; Aimons donc l'une, & ayons l'autre en horreur.

3°. The Primitive ce coming before qui or que is englished by that which, or what; these two words making a sort of pronoun that points and relates to something either spoken of before, or to be mentioned after: as,

Il dit ce qu'il sait, He says what he knows.

C'est ce qui ne sera jamais, It is what will never be.

4°. When ce qui or ce que, in the beginning of a sentence of two parts, is, jointly with the verb, the subject coming before the verb est in the second part of the sentence, ce must be repeated before est, and est followed by de, if it comes before an infinitive, or by que if it is another mood: as,

Ce que je crains, c'est d'être surpris, and not est d'être surpris,
What I fear, is to be surprised.

¶ It is the same with the other tenses of être; as, Ce que je craignois, c'étoit d'être surpris.]

Ce qui l'afflige, c'est qu'on le croit coupable,
What concerns him, is that he is thought guilty.

But ce must not be repeated before est, when there comes next an adnoun: as, Ce que vous dites est vrai, what you say is true; and when it is a noun, it is indifferent to repeat it or to leave it out: as, Ce que je dis est la vérité, or e'est la vérité, what I say is the truth.

Except when the verb substantive is in the plural; for then ce must be repeated: as, Ce que je ne puis souffrir, ce sont les insolences & les trahisons, what I cannot bear are insolences and treacheries.

D ¶ Ce, both in asking and answering a question, signifies sometimes cette personne, sometimes cette chose.

Qui est-ce qui est venu? Who is come? ce stands for qui est cette personne qui, &c. Qu'est ce que je vois là? What do I see there? ce stands for quelle est cette chose que, &c.

Qui est là? Who is there? c'est Pierre; ce stands for cette personne; viz. Pierre est cette personne qui est là? Que vois-je là, or qu'est-ce que je vois là? What do I see there? C'est mon canif, It is my penknife: that is, mon canif est cette chose que je vois là.

From which it appears that in such phrases the virtual nominative to the verb être is not ce, but the following substantive.]

The pron. primit. ce is besides of a very extensive use with être, as we shall see p. 327.

Of Pronouns Indeterminate.

Quelqu'un, chacun, quiconque, personne, nul, pas un, aucun, l'un l'autre, l'un & l'autre, plusieurs, tout, &c.

§ X. 1°. ¶ Quelqu'un and chacun are formed of quelque un, chaque un; both take the mark of gender, and we say quelqu'un quelqu'une, chacun chacune; but chacun has no plural, whereas the plural of quelqu'un quelqu'une, is quelques-uns quelques-unes.

Both quelqu'un and chacun may be used either absolutely or relatively; absolutely, when there is no noun or pronoun to which they refer; relatively, when they refer to a noun or pronoun expressed before or after.

B

When used relatively, they require the preposition de after them, before the noun or pronoun to which they refer. Sometimes quelqu'un is contented with being preceded by the particle en (which implies de); but chacun never admits of it for its antecedent, even it is often used by apposition, and sometimes without the preposition de.

Quelqu'un and chacun, used absolutely, are said of persons only; and relatively, they are both said of persons and things.

Quelqu'un always presents an indefinite sense: used absolutely, it signifies somebody, any body, has no plural, and is generally of the masculine gender: used relatively, it signifies C some or any, and takes the mark of gender and number.

Chacun, used absolutely, denotes sometimes a collective, sometimes a distributive sense: when collective, it signifies every body, and is of the masculine gender; when distributive, it signifies every one, each, and takes the mark of gender.

Chacun, used relatively, is always distributive, refers to a noun or pronoun plural which it is to distribute, takes the mark of gender, and is englished by every one and mostly by each.]

¶ Examples of quelqu'un and chacun used absolutely.

Quelqu'un m'a dit que; Somebody told me that

Si je vois quelqu'un; If I see any body.

J'ai ouï dire à quelqu'un; I heard somebody say.

Je parle de quelqu'un que vous connoissez: I speak of somebody you know.

Est-il venu quelqu'un? Did any body come?

Quelqu'un est-il venu me demander? Has any body called on me?

Chacun veut être heureux; Every body wishes to be happy.

Chacun sent son mal; Every one feels for himself.

Chacun en parle; Every body speaks of it.

Chacun s'en plaint; Every one complains of it.

Il faut rendre à chacun ce qui lui appartient; We must give to every one his due.

Chacun se gouverne à sa mode; Every one lives after his own manner.

D

A Chacun pour soi ; Every one for himself.

Chacun à son tour ; Each in his turn.]

¶ Examples of quelqu'un and chacun used relatively.

Quelques-uns de ses amis vinrent à sa rencontre ; Some of his friends came to meet him.

C'est quelqu'une d'elles qui vous l'aura dit ; None but some of them must have told you of it.

J'apperçois quelques-uns de vos nouveaux livres ; I perceive some of your new books.

Avez-vous de bons amis ? oui, j'en ai quelques-uns ; Have you good friends ? yes, I have some.

Adressez-vous à quelqu'un d'eux, or à quelques-uns d'entre eux ; Apply to some of them.

Vous avez de beaux livres, prêtez-m'en quelques-uns ; You have fine books, lend me some of them.

B Voilà de belles oranges ; achetons-en quelques-unes ; There are fine oranges ; let us buy some.

Chacun de vous fait ce qu'il lui plaît ; Every one of you does what he pleases.

Chacun d'eux se dispute ; Each of them is quarrelling.

Chacune d'elles jouera son rôle ; Each of them will play her part.

Chacun de ces tableaux-là est d'un grand prix ; Each of these pictures is very valuable.

Chacune de ces statues est parfaite ; Each of these statues is accomplished.]

¶ As the pronouns disjunctive eux and elles cannot be said of things, they are, together with the preposition de, entirely left out after chacun, when they do not relate to persons ; and we say, speaking of cards, for instance, Voilà trois cartes, je mets tant sur chacune ; There are three cards, I stake so much upon each of them. Speaking of horses ; Vous avez acheté quatre chevaux, combien avez-vous donné de chacun ? You bought four horses, how much have you paid for each ?

C Whereas we say of persons : J'ai parlé à chacun d'eux, à chacune d'elles, I have spoken to each of them.

¶ As chacun, when referring to things, is not used absolutely, it cannot then be the subject of a sentence, and we say, speaking of knives, for instance ; Ils content un écu chacun ; They cost half-a-crown each : not chacun coute. A personal pronoun plural is there used instead of chacun, which is placed, as it were, by apposition, and has the same import as chacun de ces couteaux coute un écu.]

¶ Chacun, though used relatively, is sometimes employed as above by apposition, and unaccompanied with de, but placed in the middle of the sentence which it is to distribute : as,

Qu'on s'en retourne chacun chez soi ; Let every one return to his own home.

Retournons-nous-en chacun chez nous ; Let every one of us return to his own home. Vous vous en retournerez chacun chez vous ; Every one of you will return to his own home.

D Ils s'en retournerent chacun chez eux ; elles s'en retournerent chacune chez elles ; Each of them returned to their own home.

The above sentences might be construed without chacun ; but then they would imply quite a different sense. For instance : Retournons-en chez nous ; Let us return home, means that we all live in the same house ; whereas, by inserting chacun, it means that each of us lives in a separate house.

The same may be said of the following phrases :

Nous danserons chacun à notre tour ; We shall dance every one in turn.

Vous aurez chacune le vôtre ; Each of you will have her own.

Ils auront chacun leur part ; Each of them will have his share.

Nous avons chacun nos droits ; Each of us has his rights.

Ce deux auteurs ont chacun leur mérite ; Each of these two authors have their worth.

Les matelots allèrent chacun à leurs fonctions; Each of the sailors went to A their functions

Ils ont apporté chacun leur offrande, & ont rempli chacun leur devoir de religion; Each of them brought his offering, and fulfilled his religious duty.

Appliquons-nous à mériter l'estime du public, chacun dans notre état; Let every one of us try to deserve the public esteem, each in his station of life.

Qu'ils s'appliquent à mériter l'estime du public, chacun dans leur état; Let them try to deserve the public esteem, each in his station of life.]

¶ From the foregoing examples it appears that chacun, either in the middle, or at the end of a sentence which it is to distribute, sometimes meets with a noun pointed out by a possessive. Now, when chacun relates to the subject of the sentence, the possessive must be of the same person as the subject; and such is the case in the above phrases.

It is the same when chacun relates to the term of the sentence, that is, a pronoun construed with, or implying the preposition à: as,

Dieu rendra à chacun selon ses œuvres; .

God will reward every one according to his works.

Dieu nous rendra à chacun selon nos œuvres;

God will reward each of us according to our works.

Dieu vous rendra à chacun selon vos œuvres;

God will reward each of you according to your works.

Dieu leur rendra à chacun selon leurs œuvres;

God will reward each of them according to their works.

Donnez à chacun sa part; Give every one his share.

Donnez-nous à chacun notre part; Give every one of us our share.

Donnez leur à chacun leur part; Give every one of them their share.]

¶ But if chacun relate to the object of the sentence, and that object be of the third person, the possessive must, by all means, be of the third person singular; as,

Otez ces livres, & les mettez chacun à sa place; Take these books away, and put each of them in its place.

Serrez ces médailles, chacune dans sa case; Lay up these medals, and C place each of them in its case.

Ils ont tous apporté des offrandes, chacun selon ses moyens & sa dévotion; They have all brought offerings, each of them according to their abilities and devotion.

In the above phrases chacun relates to livres, médailles, offrandes, the objects of their respective sentences; it is the nominative to a verb understood, the subject of another sentence distributive of the former. (N.B. As the offerings, viz. their quantity and quality, are according to the abilities of the bringers, it cannot be said that chacun relates to another word.)

Girard, Wailly, and other grammarians say, that, in such distributive phrases, son, sa, ses, must be used, when chacun comes after the regimen of the verb; and leur, when chacun comes before; or, in other words, when the sense of the sentence distributed by chacun, is either complete or incomplete.

But this rule is more ingenious than accurate; for many instances may occur, in which son, sa, ses, would be improper; and others, in which either leur, or son, sa, ses, may be used; for instance:

Les arbres portent leurs fruits, chacun dans leur saison; Trees bear their D fruits, each in their season: Sa would be improper, because chacun relates to arbres, not to fruits. Vous taillerez ces arbres, chacun dans sa saison; you will cut these trees, each in its season: the phrase is grammatical: however leur would not be improper, because there are not as many seasons as trees.

A coachman may say, Je les prendrai dans ma voiture, & les descendrai chacun à sa porte; I will take them in my coach, and let down each of them at his door; but you could not say of him, il les prendra dans sa voiture, & les descendra chacun à sa porte; The two sa's would clash; Chacun à leur porte will prevent the ambiguity: or take another turn; viz. Chacun chez eux.]

A ¶ When the object, to which chacun relates, is a pronoun of the first or second persons, the possessive, which comes after chacun, is generally of the same persons: The coachman may say, for instance, Je vous prendrai tous dans ma voiture, & je vous descendrai chacun à votre porte, or je descendrai chacun de vous à sa porte; because he speaks to the very persons he is to take.

Likewise many persons may bring offerings, and their spokesman will say; Nous vous apportons des offrandes, chacun selon nos moyens, or chacun de nous selon ses moyens; because he speaks collectively.

N. B. Chacun relating to a collective noun of the feminine gender, remains of the masculine, when the collective refers to men; as, Les communes se séparèrent tout irritées, & se retirèrent chacun chez soi (les membres is understood); the Commons, quite enraged, parted and retired, each to his respective home.

But we say; Les Provinces y envoyèrent chacune leur député; The provinces sent thither each its deputy; because the provinces are many, whereas the commons is said of one single body, composed of men.

B ¶ This explanation of quelqu'un and chacun will perhaps appear pretty long; but it has been thought that in a professed Grammar matters could not be presented too clearly.

2°. Quiconque signifies and is said of any body whatever, and is only of the singular number: as,

Quiconque méprise les belles-lettres se rend lui-même méprisable; Whoever despises polite learning makes himself despicable.

In which phrase quiconque is the subject of, or nominative to the two verbs.

C Quiconque de vous sera assez hardi (or hardie) pour médire de moi, je l'en ferai repentir,

If any of you is so bold as to slander me, I'll make him (or her) repent it.

Quiconque, as well as its substitute qui (see p. 257), having the force of toute personne qui, contains in itself the relative with its antecedent; therefore it is sometimes the object of one verb, at the same time that it is the subject of another: as,

Il a ordre d'arrêter quiconque passera par là;

He has orders to arrest any body that shall go by.

En dépit de quiconque y trouvera à redire;

In spite of any body that will find it amiss.

D Ce reproche s'adresse à quiconque se croit coupable;

This reproach is addressed to any body who thinks he deserves it.

For the same reason we do not say en dépit de quiconque, to signify in spite of any body whatever; but en dépit de tout le monde, or de qui que ce soit.

3°. Personne (nobody) is directly opposite to quiconque, and is never used but with verbs attended by a negative, or in exclusive prepositions: as,

Ne faire tort à personne, To wrong nobody. A Vivre sans faire tort à personne, To live without wronging any body.

Personne is used without a negative in sentences of interrogation, or rather of admiration, wonder, and doubt; and where the adverb trop is used; wherein it does not signify nobody, but any body: as,

Y a-t-il personne au monde qui vous estime plus que moi?
 Is there any body in the world that esteems you more than I do?

Je doute que personne ait jamais mieux connu les hommes que La Bruyère; B

I doubt if ever any body knew men better than La Bruyère.

Il est trop hardi pour craindre personne;

He is too bold to fear any body.

Personne a-t-il jamais pu trouver la pierre Philosophale?

Could ever any body find the Philosopher's stone?

In which instances one does not only inquire after the thing in question, but also shows one's doubt and wonder at it:

Whereas in this following, one only inquires after the thing in question:

Personne n'a-t-il jamais pu trouver la pierre Philosophale?

Could never any body find out the Philosopher's stone? C

Though personne is said of both genders, yet it requires the adnoun or pronoun which refers to it, in the masculine, even in speaking of a woman: as,

Personne n'est venu, and not venue; Nobody is come.

Il n'y a personne d'assez hardi pour oser; There is nobody so bold as to dare.

Personne n'est si malheureux qu'elle; Nobody is so unhappy as she is. D

Nevertheless, if the pronoun personne is applied to a woman, or to women, in such a manner that it ceases to be indefinite, and becomes specified, then it requires the adnoun in the feminine, as speaking to women:

Il n'y a personne de vous assez hardie pour, &c.

There is none among you so bold as to, &c.

4°. Nul, pas un, aucun, are also pronouns negative requiring another negative before the verb, except in sentences of interrogation, or doubt: as,

Nul n'ose en approcher; No one dares come near him, or her.

Pas un ne le croit; No one believes it?

Y a-t-il aucun de vous qui le souffrît?

Is there any of you that would bear it?

A Aucun is hardly used but in sentences of interrogation, and is followed by the second state, as in the last instance.

N. B. ¶ Aucun, in the nominative case, is said of persons only: as, Aucun ne l'a vu; No one has seen it.

But in the oblique cases, it is said both of persons and things: as, Il a beaucoup de livres, & il n'en lit aucun: He has many books, and reads none of them.]

Any body signifies tout le monde, and never aucune personne: which (if it were a French expression) would require a negative; and imply quite the contrary, to wit, nobody. Therefore this phrase,

Ask upon Change where he lives, any body will tell it you; must be translated thus: Demandez à la Bourse où il demeure, tout le monde vous le dira, or, Il n'y a personne qui ne vous le dise, (not by aucune personne).

5°. Ni l'un ni l'autre will have the verb in the singular, if it comes after it; and in the plural, if it comes before: but l'un & l'autre will always have it in the plural:

Ni l'un ni l'autre n'est venu, } Neither of them is or, Ils ne sont venus ni l'un ni l'autre, } come.

L'un & l'autre ont raison, } Both are in the right, or or, Ils ont raison l'un & l'autre. } They are both in the right.

C ¶ When there is a preposition used before l'un, the same must be repeated before l'autre; as, Il est ami de l'un & de l'autre; He is a friend to both.]

6°. The verb construed with l'un l'autre must be a reciprocal one, except it is the verb être: as Il se font des grimaces l'un à l'autre, They make faces to one another.

Ils sont ennemis l'un de l'autre; They are enemies to each other.

¶ The prepositions are placed between l'un and l'autre.

L'un l'autre are sometimes separated: as, L'un est riche, l'autre est pauvre; One is rich, the other poor. Sometimes l'un signifies the former, and l'autre the latter.

D After reflected verbs, to which the particle entre is prefixed to make them reciprocal, l'un l'autre must be omitted, as redundant, ils s'entre-tuent; They kill one another; Ils s'entre-frappent; They strike each other; has the same meaning as ils se tuent l'un l'autre, &c.]

Some, repeated in a sentence, is expressed in French by les uns in the first part of the sentence, and les autres in the other: as,

Les uns aiment une chose & les autres une autre, or & les autres en aiment une autre; some like one thing, and some another.

7°. Plusieurs is of both genders, and of the plural number only: as plusieurs hommes many men, plusieurs femmes many women;—many a man, is rendered into French by plusieurs hommes, or plus d'un homme.

8^o. Tout is construed several ways; 1st, It is an adnoun signifying all and whole, and always coming before the article of its noun, besides the preposition de and à, which it requires before itself; as tout le monde, all the world, or the whole world; de tout le monde, of the whole world; à tout le monde, to the whole world; toute une ville, a whole city; tous mes livres, all my books.

It is to be observed, that when this adnoun is construed with the name of a city or town of the feminine, it does not agree with it in gender, and besides causes the other adnoun (if there be any) to be masculine: as, Tout Rome le sait, not toute la Rome, as you should say toute la ville le sait, all Rome, all the city knows it; tout la Haye en est alarmé, not toute . . . alarmée, All the Hague is frighted at it.

2^{dly}, It signifies any or every, and its noun has no article: as,

Toute verité n'est pas toujours bonne à dire,

All truth (i. e. any truth) is not to be told at all times.

Tout homme est mortel, Every man is mortal.

3^{dly}, Tout construed with some verbs, especially with être, is taken substantively, and signifies most times every thing: as, tout est vanité en ce monde, every thing is vanity in this world.

Sometimes it signifies the whole: as, le tout est plus grand que sa partie, the whole is bigger than its part. It signifies also every in these words, tous les jours every day, toutes les semaines every week, tous les mois every month, tous les ans every year, à toute heure every hour, à tout moment every moment; but we do not say à tout instant, or à toute minute, but à chaque instant, à chaque minute.

Tout, being adnoun, must be repeated before each noun of which it can be said, especially when they are of different genders: as,

Je suis, avec toute l'ardeur & tout le respect possible, &c.

I am, with all possible zeal and respect, &c.

Tout, besides its construction of noun, adnoun, and pronoun, has three others: 1st, It is used before an adnoun followed by que, and is rendered by although, or however, or by as, repeated with an adnoun between, or only coming after an adnoun. In this signification it is indeclinable, except (which is worth observing) when the adnoun feminine, before which it comes, begins with a consonant; for then it is used in the feminine gender and plural number; but when the adnoun, though feminine and plural, begins with a vowel, D tout remains indeclinable; as,

Tout Philosophe qu'il est, il juge souvent de travers;

Though he is a Philosopher, he often judges very wrong.

Tout ignorant qu'il est, il a beaucoup de jugement;

As ignorant as he is, he has much judgment.

Toutes laides qu'elles sont, elles sont bien fières;

As ugly as they are, (or) for all they are ugly, they are very proud creatures.

Toute petite qu'est son armée, il leur donnera bataille;

Small as his army is, he will give them battle.

Tout étonnantes que sont ces aventures, on les a vues arriver;

However surprising these adventures are, they have been seen to happen.

- A 2dly, Tout is also used before an adnoun, without being followed by que: but it is liable to the same rules and restrictions just mentioned, and is eng-lished by the adverbs quite, entirely, &c. as,
Il est tout autre, He is quite another man.
Elle est tout abattue de sa disgrâce, She is entirely cast down by her disgrace.
Ils sont tout transportés de joie, } They are quite overjoyed, or trans-
Elles sont toutes transportées de joie, } ported with joy.
Elles sont tout éperdues, They are quite affrighted.
Ces des nouvelles toutes fraîches, These news are quite fresh.
But when the adnoun is preceded by aussi, tout is indeclinable; as,
Elles sont tout aussi fraîches que si on ne faisait que de les cueillir,
They are quite as fresh as if they had been pick'd just now.
3dly, Tout is besides used before these adverbs, bas and doucement; as, Parlez tout bas, speak quite low; Marchez tout doucement, walk softly.
- B Tout is expletive, and only energetic in, Tout comme vous voudrez; Just as you please.

9°. To these pronouns is added autrui, which has neither gender nor number. It is used in the second and third state in these and such like expressions: Désirer, or Convoiter le bien d'autrui, To covet another man's property.
Œ Affliger du mal d'autrui, To be sorry for another's trouble or misfortune.
Dépendre d'autrui, To depend upon others.

Nuire à autrui, To wrong, hurt, or prejudice others.

Faire à autrui comme nous voudrions qu'on nous fît;

To do by others as we would be done by.

As to quelconque, quelque, and chaque, they are mere adnouns, inseparable from a noun—Quelconque signifies any whatever, and always follows its noun, being used only in some law-phrases like this, Nonobstant opposition, or appellation quelconque, notwithstanding any opposition or appeal whatever; and such sentences like this,

Il n'y a raison quelconque qui puisse le convaincre,

There is no reason whatever can convince him.

N. B. Aucun is preferred to quelconque; as, Il n'y a aucune raison . . .

10°. Quelque, in the singular, denotes an Object; in the plural, a Number indeterminate; it also indicates a Quality, or Quantity indeterminate. In the first signification, it answers to the word some; as, Quelque fripon, some knave; quelques hommes, some men; quelques femmes, some women.

In the other signification it answers to these expressions, whatever, whatsoever, though with ever so, or ever so much: as, Quelque mérite qu'on ait, on ne reussit guères dans le monde sans protecteur:

- D Whatever merit a man has, or though a man has ever so much merit, or though a man is ever so deserving, he very seldom meets with success in the world without a patron.

Quelque, signifying some, is always an adnoun; but when it signifies whatever, &c. it is sometimes an adverb, and therefore indeclinable; and sometimes a pronoun incomplete adjective, which agrees in gender and number with the following noun or adnoun.

Quelque is only an adverb, when it comes before an adnoun A and a noun governed of être, or only when it comes before an adnoun; which can never happen but with être, and it then signifies however; as,

Quelque riches qu'il soient ;

However rich they be; though they are ever so rich.

Quelque belles que soient ses actions;

However fine his actions may be.

Quelque grandes que soient les actions qu'il a faites ;

How great soever may be the actions that he has done.

But when quelque comes before a noun attended by an ad- B noun, or before a noun only, but with any other verb than être, it is an adnoun following the same rule as others; as,

Quelques richesses qu'il possède ;

Whatever riches he is possessed of.

Quelques grandes actions qu'il ait faites :

Whatever great actions he has done.

Note, 1st, That quelque signifying whatever, followed immediately by a noun or adnoun, always requires, if indeclinable, the particle que, and if declinable, the relative qui, before the next verb, which it governs in the subjunctive, and of which it is governed, as to its state. In the aforesaid sentences, and most of the same kind, the relative is the fourth state (que) which has made our Grammarians lay it down as a rule, that quelque is always followed by que; but these following instances prove that it is by the relative qui that quelque C is always followed, when it is declinable; as,

Quelque chose qui arrive,

Whatever happens.

Quelques évènements qui puissent arriver, Whatever events may happen.

2dly, That in those sorts of sentences, quelque with its noun and adnoun, or with either, makes a sort of nominative absolute, i. e. a subject which goes for nothing in the grammatical order of the sentence, and that the verb must besides have another noun coming before it for its subject, and another for its object, unless it be neuter. Which again evinces that it is not que (as it should be, were the rule of our Grammarians true), but qui that follows quelque, and is the subject coming before the verbs neuter in the last instances.

3dly, That as whatsoever is a pronoun compound, which is sometimes separated in two parts by a word between; as in what condition soever I be (en quelque état que je me trouve), so is likewise quelque separated in two words, viz. quel and que, but without any word between as in English; and quel que must be immediately followed by a verb, or a pronoun personal in the first state: then quel must agree in gender and number with the following noun or D pronoun, that comes before the verb. (N. B. If the word that expresses the subject is a noun, it comes after the verb; and the verb requires no other state of the relative qui before it, though it is still governed in the subjunctive by que): as,

Quels que puissent être vos desseins,

} which amounts to the same of { Quelques desseins que vous puissiez avoir,

Whatever your designs may be, or whatever designs you may have.

Quel que je sois,

Whatever I am.

Quels que nous soyons,

Whatever we are.

Quelles qu'elles puissent être, Whatever they may be (speaking of women).

Vide Tel . . . que, page 277, A.

A 4thly, Whatever and whatsoever cannot always be rendered by quelque. We have seen before that they express sometimes quelconque. They are moreover rendered by quoi que, tout ce qui, tout ce que : as,

Whatever it may be,	Quoi que ce soit.
Whatever happens,	Quoi qu'il arrive.
Whatever pleases,	Tout ce qui plaît.
Whatever you will,	Tout ce que vous voudrez.

Note, That quoi que in the two first instances, is very different from the conjunction quoique, although; the former being a pronoun composed of quoi and que, signifying whatever.

From qui and quoi are formed these two other pronouns indeterminate ;

qui que ce soit,	qui que ce fût ;
quoi que ce soit,	quoi que ce fût ;

B the two first are said of persons, the two others of things; qui que ce soit answers to any body, whosoever : and when its verb is attended by a negative, it signifies no man in the world, no man living, nobody at all : as,

Qui que ce soit qui vous parle, pensez à ce qu'on vous dit ;

Whosoever speaks to you, mind what is said to you.

Qui que ce soit ne m'en a parlé ; No body at all spoke to me of it.

Je n'ai vu qui que ce soit ; I have seen no body in the world.

Qui que ce fût, is the same pronoun used with the other tense of the subjunctive, according as the construction requires it ; as,

Qui que ce fût qui lui parlât, il ne répondoit rien ;

Whosoever spoke to him, he answered nothing.

Il ne se défioit de qui que ce fût ; He mistrusted no body at all.

These two pronouns, used without a negative, make a sort of nominative absolute, which must be followed by the pron. personal il ; and when the sentence has two parts, qui que ce soit, qui que ce fût, must be immediately

C followed by the relative qui, before the verb of the first part, and il must come besides before that of the second ; as,

Qui que ce soit qui me trompe, il sera découvert ;

Whosoever cheats me shall be found out.

Qui que ce soit, il s'en repentira ;

Whoever he be, or let him be who he will, he shall repent it.

} qui que ce soit is put in apposition, as also quoi que ce soit, hereafter.

Quoi que ce soit, quoi que ce fût, without a negative, signifies any thing whatsoever : and with a negative, nothing in the world ; as,

Quoi que ce soit qui arrive, faites-le-moi savoir,

Whatever happens, let me know it.

Quoi que ce soit n'est arrivé ; Nothing in the world has happened.

Those pronouns are used in their three states, viz. with de and à.

D ¶ 11°. Chaque, each, every, implies separation and distribution, is said both of persons and things, is of both genders, and has no plural.

Chaque citoyen doit contribuer au bien de l'état ; Every citizen ought to contribute to the welfare of the state.

Chaque science a ses principes ; Every science has its principles.]

¶ 12°. Rien nothing, tel such, and certain certain, may also pass for pronouns indeterminate, in sentences like these ;

Il ne dit rien ; He says nothing.

Je ne saurois vous rien donner ; I cannot give you any thing.

Il n'a rien de grand que la naissance ; There is nothing great in him but his birth.

Il ne fait rien qui soit digne de sa réputation ;

He does not do any thing worthy of his character.

Tel sème, qui ne recueille pas ; Such sow as do not reap. A

Otherwise tel is an adnoun, generally followed by que, and signifying such as ; such that ; like, &c. as,

Il est tel qu'on le dit ; He is such as they say.

Il est tel que son père, He is like his father.

Tel maître, tel valet (a prov.) ; Like master, like man.

N. B. There are many other ways of using tel, both with and without que, which may be seen in Chambaud's Dictionary.]

¶ Tel . . . que always implies comparison ; therefore it must not be mistaken for quelque . . . que or quel que ; for instance :

A quelque degré d'honneur qu'on l'élève, il ne sera jamais content ; To whatever degree of honour he may be raised, he will never be content (not à tel degré).

Un titre, quel qu'il soit, n'est rien, si ceux qui le portent ne sont pas grands par eux-mêmes ; A title, whatever it may be, is nothing, unless they who bear it be great of themselves, (not tel qu'il soit.) B

¶ Certain, certain, considered as a pronoun, is said both of persons and things, and has generally the force of quelque ;

Certain philosophe, a certain philosopher.

Certaines qualités, certain qualities.

Certaine nouvelle, a certain piece of news.

Whereas in une nouvelle certaine, certain news, certaine is an adjective.

In ne quittez jamais le certain pour l'incertain, never quit a certainty for an uncertainty, certain is used substantively.]

CHAP. V.

D

Observations upon Nouns of Number.

1°. CARDINAL numbers are indeclinable, except cent and million, which take an s in the plural, as also vingt, but only when it comes after quatre and six, before a noun : as deux quatre, trois cinq, deux-cens guinées, trois-millions, quatre-vingts, livres, six-vingts hommes : but we say, quatre-vingt-dix hommes, quatre-vingt-un.

¶ Cent is indeclinable before another number ; as, Deux-cent-cinquante guinées, two hundred and fifty guineas.] D

These numbers always come immediately before the things numbered, and cannot be preceded by any noun or adnoun, except the adnouns possessive mon, ma, mes, &c. as ses deux amis his two friends, mes trois frères my three brothers, leurs six chevaux their six horses.

The first number is the only one liable to gender, making une in the feminine.

A 2°. The conjunction & (and) is put before the unity only, as vingt & un, trente & un, quarante & un, and le vingt & unième, le cinquante & unième, &c. but it is not put before the other combined numbers, except those that follow soixante; we say vingt-deux, vingt-trois, trente-quatre, quarante-cinq, cinquante-six, &c. but it is put after all the numbers that follow soixante; as soixante & un, soixante et deux, soixante & dix, soixante & quinze, till you come to quatre-vingts. But after quatre-vingts there is no & put even before the unity quatre-vingt-un, quatre-vingt-deux, quatre-vingt-dix, cent-un, cent-deux, cent-unième, cent-deuxième, &c. However, some good writers and speakers

B never use the conjunction copulative in the aforesaid cases, except before the unity, and they say vingt & un, trente & un, soixante & un, soixante-deux, soixante-dix, &c. We don't say six-vingt-un, but cent-vingt & un. We don't say sept-vingt, huit-vingt, &c. as the English do seven-score, eight-score, &c. but cent-quarante, cent-soixante. We say mille, and never dix-cens, nor vingt-cens; but we say onze-cens eleven hundred, douze-cens twelve hundred, and so on to deux-mille, deux-mille cent, deux mille deux cens, &c. un million, and never dix-cent-mille.

3°. We don't say septante for soixante & dix, seventy; huitante for quatre-vingt, eighty or four score; and nonante

C for quatre-vingt-dix, ninety; as the Swiss, the Gascons, and others of the south of France say. Except in Geometry, where nonante is preserved.—We mean by les Septante, the Septuagint, or the seventy-two translators of the Bible.

4°. When we speak of Time, we say huit jours, a week, and not une semaine; quinze jours, a fortnight, and not quatorze-nuit; trois semaines, three weeks; quatre, cinq semaines, un mois, a month; six semaines, six weeks; deux mois, deux mois & demi, and not neuf or dix semaines; trois mois, six mois, and never un quartier, un demi-an; sept, huit, neuf mois, and not

D trois quarts, nor trois quartiers d'an; un an, un an & demi, deux ans; &c. We don't say un an & un mois, un an & deux mois, &c. but treize mois, quatorze mois, &c.

5°. When we speak of an indeterminate number, of which we are not sure, we say un ou deux, deux ou trois, down to sept ou huit, seven or eight; then we say huit ou dix, dix ou douze, douze ou quinze, quinze ou vingt, vingt ou trente, trente ou quarante, as far as sixty; then soixante ou quatre-vingts quatre-vingts ou cent ; but we say environ cent-vingt, environ A cent-trente, &c. and not cent ou cent vingt, cent-trente ou cent-quarante. When we know the number very near, we say dix ou onze, onze ou douze, douze ou treize, &c.

6°. We say trente et un jours, thirty-one days ; vingt & un ans, one-and-twenty years ; vingt & un écus, twenty-one crowns ; vingt & un chevaux, one-and-twenty horses, &c. but never vingt & un cheval, vingt & un an, &c. ; and when the noun is attended by an adnoun, that adnoun is plural likewise : Il a vingt & un ans accomplis, He is full one-and-twenty years old ; Il y a quarante & un jours passés, It is about one-and-forty B days ; Trente & un écus bien comptés, One-and-thirty crowns well told ; Vingt et une guinées bien comptées, One-and-twenty guineas well told.

7°. The Cardinal numbers take not the article, except when they are used substantively, as le dix du mois, the tenth of the month (in which case le dix stands for le dixième jour) ; See paragraph 10°. hereafter, the other numbers always do. The collective are commonly preceded by un or une, and must, besides, be followed by the preposition de before the next noun : as, J'ai douze noix, ou une douzaine de noix, & vous en avez trente, I have twelve walnuts, or a dozen of walnuts, and you C have got thirty : Donnez-m'en la moitié, ou le tiers, Give me half, or the third part of them : Prenez-en une douzaine, Take a dozen.

8°. From the Cardinal numbers the Ordinal are formed, in adding ième to the last consonant of the Cardinal, and cutting off therefore the final e in those that have it : as from deux, deuxième ; dix, dixième ; quatre, quatrième (except premier & second), that are formed by the Cardinal numbers. In neuf, the f is changed into v in neuvième, the ninth. Though we say le premier & le second ; yet we don't say le vingt & premier, le vingt second, but le vingt & unième, le vingt-deuxième. To the Ordinal numbers belong these three, le dernier the last, D le pénultième, or l'avant-dernier before the last, the last but one, and l'antépénultième the last but two.

¶ We use the Ordinal number without the article in these cases : Livre premier, Book the first ; Chapitre troisième, Chapter the third, &c. As also in such phrases :

J'y allai moi cinquième, I went thither with four others.

Il s'enfuit lui troisième, He fled with two others.

But a personal pronoun disjunctive must precede the number.]

A 9°. Ordinal numbers form also each an adverb, with the addition of ment to their feminine; as premièrement firstly, secondement, or deuxiément, secondly, troisiément thirdly, and so on to twenty. We also say, en premier lieu, en second lieu, en troisième lieu, in the first place, &c.

10°. We use the Cardinal number, not the Ordinal, in dating and speaking of the years of the world, and we do not write mille nor cens, but mil and cent, as l'an mil sept cent quatre-vingt dix-sept de l'Ere Chrétienne, the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven of the Christian Æra l'an mil huit cent douze: but we say la seconde, la quatrième année de la centième, ou de la dixième Olympiade, the 2d or 4th year of the 100, or 10th Olympiad. We also use the Cardinal number, when we name the days of the month, &c.: as le deux the second, le trois the third, le six the sixth, le onze the eleventh, le quinze the fifteenth, le vingt the twentieth, le vingt & un the twenty-first, &c. and not le deuxième, le vingtième du mois, &c. but we do not say, l'un du mois, but le premier, the first day of the month. Observe, besides, that we put no particle before cent and mille, as in English, except it be to denote unity in opposition to many; as un cent de plumes, a hundred pens; C J'en ai cent, J'en ai mille, I have got a hundred, a thousand. We say le onze, du onze, au onze; and likewise vers les onze heures about eleven o'clock, sur les une heure about one o'clock, without sounding s at all, as if the first syllable of onze & une were aspirated, &c. We also say, le onzième, la onzième, the eleventh, not l'onzième.

11°. When two Ordinal numbers come together, we make the first Cardinal, and say le dix ou douzième, the tenth or twelfth, le sept ou huitième, the seventh or eighth, instead of dixième ou douzième, &c.

12°. Speaking of Kings and Sovereigns, we use the Cardinal number without the article, instead of the Ordinal, with the D article, as in English; as Henri trois, Henri quatre, Henry the third, the fourth; Alexandre sept, Alexander the seventh; Charles neuf, Charles the ninth; Benoît treize, Benedict the thirteenth, Louis quinze, Lewis the fifteenth. But we say Henri premier, Henri second, François premier, George second, George the second, and not François un, Henri deux, George deux. We say Charles-quint, Charles the fifth (Emperor of Germany), to distinguish him from the Kings of the same name. We also say Sixte-quint, Pope Sixtus the fifth.

13°. Huitaine and neuvaine are said of the interval of eight or nine days. Octave is said both of the interval of eight days during which a Church festival is kept, and of eight musical notes together. Tercet, quatrain, sizain, huitain, and dizain, are terms of Poetry, said of staves of three, four, six, eight, and ten verses. Quintain and trentain are Tennis-terms, signifying fifteen or thirty all; as quinte, tierce, and quarte, are Card-terms, to denote a sequence of three, four, or five cards. Tierce and quarte are also said of a periodical fit of an ague, returning every third or fourth day, la fièvre tierce ou quarte, the tertian or quartan ague. Tricon, another Card-term, signifies a prial or pair royal. Tierce, quinte sixième, septième, are likewise musical terms.

14°. Besides the distributive numbers la moitié, le tiers, le quart, we also say la troisième & la quatrième partie, the third and fourth part; then we say un cinquième, a fifth, un ou deux sixièmes, a sixth or two, un dixième, a tenth, &c. La dixme, the tithe, is said only of the tenth part of the fruits of the earth; and décime, of the tenth part of the ecclesiastical revenues.

15°. Demi half, is a sort of adnoun indeclinable, when it comes before its nouns, making together a compound word, as une demi-heure half an hour, Demi-Dieux Semi-Gods; but when the noun comes first, it agrees with it in gender, to which it is joined with the conjunction &, as un muid & demi, a hog-head and a half, une livre & demie, a pound and a half. Demi is said of things sold by the hundred, as un demi-cent de plumes, half an hundred of quills.

16°. Mi, another distributive word, used only with the following nouns, of which it makes compound words, signifies also moitié half, or rather milieu middle: but (what is worth observing) it requires the article feminine, though the noun before which it comes be masculine; as la mi-Août, (pron. mi-ou,) la mi-Mai, the middle of August or May, la mi-Carême, the middle of Lent: and is never construed without the article feminine, except in some adverbial expressions used without the article: as à mi-jambe to the middle of the leg; à mi-chemin, in the middle of the way.

17°. Quartier, the fourth part of a thing, is said of those that are cut into parts, and quarteron of those that are sold by the hundred or the pound; un quartier d'orange, the fourth part of an orange, un quarteron de thé, a quarter of a pound of tea, trois quarterons d'huitres three quarters of a hundred of oysters.—Quintal is an hundred weight, un quintal deux quintaux de poudre, one or two hundred weight of powder; and millier is said of things sold by the hundred, as un millier

A d'épingles ten hundred of pins. We also say un quartier, deux ou trois quartiers de loyer, instead of trois mois, six ou neuf mois de loyer, a quarter, two or three quarters-rent. We also say quartier and semestre of three or six months waiting at a prince's : as, être en quartier, to be in waiting, sortir de semestre, to go or be out of waiting.

¶ N. B. We say, figuratively, Je m'en vais dans le quartier ; I am going in the neighbourhood : quartier signifying part of a city.]

18°. We say couple and paire for two, but not promiscuously : couple is said of two natural things of the same kind that can be parted, as une couple d'œufs, a couple of eggs ; B une couple de poulets, a couple of chickens ; une couple de guinées, a couple of guineas. We do not say une couple de gens, une couple de personnes, a couple of people : but speaking of two persons connected by marriage, for instance, we say, un beau couple, a fine couple ; un heureux couple, a happy match ; voilà un beau couple d'amans, there is a fine couple of lovers : in which case couple is of the masculine gender.

Paire is said of two artificial things that always go together, being fellows, and are in that respect inseparable, as une paire de gants, de bas, de souliers, a pair of gloves, stockings, shoes, une paire de ciseaux, une paire de manches, a pair of scissors, C sleeves, &c. We do not say une paire de culottes, as the English do of a pair of breeches, but only une culotte.

¶ N. B. Une paire de bœufs is said of two bullocks yoked, for instance, to the same plough ; whereas a butcher, who wants two oxen, will express himself by une couple de bœufs.]

19°. Les Vingt-quatre is said of the four-and-twenty violins belonging to the chapel of the King of France ; les Quarante, of the forty members of the French Academy ; les Septante, the seventy-two translators of the Bible ; and les Quinze-vingt, the three hundred blind people belonging to an hospital of D that name founded by St. Louis at Paris.

20°. Moreover, we say centenaire, millénaire, and millésime ; as also sexagénaire, septuagénaire, octogénaire, and nonagénaire.

Centenaire is mostly an adnoun, as le nombre centenaire, the centenary number, prescription centenaire ou de cent ans, a hundred years prescription.—Millénaire is sometimes an adnoun, as le nombre millénaire, the millenary number, and sometimes a noun, as le premier, le second millénaire (the ten first centuries, or the ten next). Millésime, said only of the date set on medals is always a noun ; as le millésime de la médaille est effacé, the date or year of the medal is erased. Sexagénaire, septuagénaire, and the two others, are used both as nouns and adnouns ; as un bon vieillard septuagénaire, a good old man of seventy ; On voit peu d'octogénaires : les nonagénaires sont encore plus rares, We see few people eighty years old : those of ninety are still more uncommon.

CHAP. VI.

Of VERBS.

§ I. 1°. THE verb always has a noun or pronoun before it, B for its subject, with which it agrees in person and number ; as,

Je vois, I see ; Il croit, he thinks ; Vous faites, you do ;
Ils disent, they say.

Le maître enseigne, & l'écolier apprend ;
The master teaches, and the scholar learns.

And when the subject is a relative, it is of the same person with the pronoun personal, or noun, which it refers to : as,

C'est moi qui ai fait cela ; C'est lui qui a vu cela ; C
It is I who have done that. It is he who has seen that.

C'est nous qui ne le croyons pas ; Je vois un homme qui boit ;
It is we who do not believe it. I see a man who is drinking.

2°. Many nouns singular will have the verb in the plural ; as,

Son esprit, sa douceur, & sa patience l'abandonnèrent ;
His understanding, good nature, and patience, forsook him.

Ni la douceur ni la force ne l'y feront consentir ;
Neither gentle nor forcible means will make him consent to it.

Except when the two nouns singular are joined by the conjunction disjunctive ou ; for then the last noun is supposed to D govern the verb : as,

Ou la douceur ou la force le fera, and not le feront ;
Either gentle or forcible means will do it.

¶ When of two substantives connected by ni repeated, one only is to do or receive the action, the verb must be in the singular : as, Ce ne sera ni M. le Duc, ni M. le Comte qui sera nommé Ambassadeur ; Neither the Duke nor the Count is to be nominated Ambassador (because only one Ambassador is supposed to be appointed).

Whereas if two Ambassadors were to be appointed, the phrase should be worded thus : Ni M. le Duc, ni M. le Comte ne seront nommés Ambassadeurs ; Neither, &c. without ce ne sera

A Likewise with regard to the conjunction ou, when the nominative consists of different persons, though in the singular number, the verb must be in the plural: as, Ou lui ou moi nous irons; Either he or I shall go. Ou toi ou lui vous le ferez; Either you or he will do it.

If one of the nouns is in the plural, the verb must agree with it: as,

Le Prince autant que les peuples souhaitent la paix;
The Prince as much as the people wish for peace.

But if the last noun is preceded by mais, the verb must agree with it, though it be singular, and there be many plural before: as, Non-seulement ses honneurs & ses richesses, mais sa vertu même s'évanouit; Not only his honours and riches, but also his very virtue vanished away (because mais indicates the ellipsis of s'évanouirènt after richesses).

Some pretend that when the last noun is preceded by tout, the verb must agree with it too:

Ses biens, ses avantages, & tout son repos fut sacrifié;

His riches, advantages, and all his quiet were sacrificed.

But it is more correct to put the verb in the plural, and to say:

Ses honneurs, ses richesses, & toute sa vertu s'évanouirent,

His honours, riches, and all his virtue vanished away;

besides the phrase is more harmonious.

¶ Tout or rien, completing, and, as it were, summing up a phrase enumerative, even composed of many substantives plural, is the leader of the verb, and governs it in the singular: as,

C Dignités, richesses, amis, tout enfin l'abandonna; Dignities, riches, friends, all in fine forsook him.

Ni les livres, ni les promenades, ni ma belle maison, rien de tout cela ne m'occupe; Neither books, nor walking, nor my handsome house, none of all these engage my attention.]

3°. When the verb has many pronouns of different persons for its subject, it must agree with the first person rather than the second, and the second rather than the third: as,

Vous et moi nous sommes d'accord; You and I agree.

Vous vous ferez des affaires, vous & lui;

You and he will bring yourselves into trouble.

D Note, that in French, the person who speaks, always names himself last: as, Vous & moi nous sommes d'accord, and never moi & vous nous sommes d'accord. (See p. 230, and 231.)

¶ Of the Concord of Verbs with Collective Nouns.

A collective noun is a substantive which expresses a multitude, though itself be singular.

Collective nouns are either general or partitive: general, when they express a multitude considered as a whole, a body; as, le peuple, the people; l'armée, the army; le Parlement, the Parliament; &c.: partitive, when they express a multitude, but considered as making part of a whole; as, un grand nombre de soldats, a great number of soldiers; la plupart des membres, most of the members, &c. whereby a number of soldiers is expressed, who all make but a part of the army; a collection of members, who all make but a part of the Parliament. A

N. B. The noun which follows a collective partitive is always attended by the preposition de, of.

In English, collective nouns, both general and partitive, govern their verbs in the plural number; as, the people are, the army were, the Parliament have met, a great number of soldiers were, most of the members wish, &c.

In French, a collective noun general, though followed by a noun plural, governs its verb in the singular, because it presents, of itself, a single idea independent on the following noun; and we say:

L'armée des infidèles fut entièrement défaite; the army of the infidels were entirely defeated.

Le peuple souhaite la paix; the people wish for a peace.

Le Parlement s'est assemblé; the Parliament have met. B

L'ennemi se présenta aux portes de la ville; the enemy presented themselves before the gates of the town.

N. B. What is said of verbs must be understood of adverbs, &c.; a reason why défaite, assemblé, agree likewise with the subject of their respective sentences.

But a collective noun partitive, followed by a noun plural, governs its verb in the plural, because it depends on the following noun, from which it borrows all its import, and with which it forms, as it were, a compound word: as,

Une infinité de gens pensent; an infinite number of people think.

Un grand nombre de savans, or un nombre infini de savans soutiennent cette opinion; a great number of learned men maintain that opinion.

Un petit nombre d'amis lui restèrent attachés; a small number of friends remained attached to him.

The same may be said of adverbs of quantity used substantively. (See C p. 217.)

Tant d'années d'habitude étoient des chaînes de fer, qui me lioient à ces deux hommes; so many years of acquaintance were iron-chains, which tied me to these two men.

Beaucoup de personnes sont capables de faire une action sage; on en voit un plus grand nombre qui sont capables de faire une action d'esprit & d'adresse; mais bien peu sont capables de faire une action généreuse; Many persons are capable of doing a prudent action, a great many more are to be met with, capable of doing an ingenious and clever action; but very few are capable of doing a generous one.

Peu de jours se sont écoulés depuis votre départ; a few days have elapsed since your departure.

Plus d'enfans lui seroient à charge; more children would be a charge to him or to her.

The verb is still in the plural, though it precede its nominative: as, Ainsi furent accomplies tant de prédictions; thus were so many predictions accomplished. D

When the verb is impersonal, it must of course be singular; as,

Il parut alors un grand nombre de soldats; then a vast number of soldiers appeared.

But every other word depending on the collective must agree with it; as, Il y a peu de personnes qui soient de votre sentiment; there are but few persons of your sentiment.

Many good writers use likewise the verb in the plural number after other collective partitives: as, foule, troupe, multitude, &c. which are always followed by a noun plural: as,

Une foule de lettres en font mention; a vast number of letters make mention of it.

Une troupe d'enfans le poursuivirent à coups de pierre; a band of children pelted him.

Une multitude d'habitans allèrent à sa rencontre; a multitude of inhabitants went to meet him.

- A But such collective nouns, to govern their verbs in the plural, must be preceded by the indefinite particle un, une; for, if they were pointed out by the definite particle le, la, the case would be different; and we say, for instance,

La foule de soldats qui survint, l'obligea de se retirer; the crowd of soldiers which came on, obliged him to retreat.

And with much more reason, when the noun plural is, itself, preceded by the definite particle les; as,

La foule des soldats qui survinrent, l'obligea, &c. the crowd of the soldiers who came on, obliged him, &c.

However, there are some peculiarities to observe, which render the collective infinité widely different from the other collectives foule, troupe, multitude, &c.

- B 1^o. Infinité, in this sense, cannot take the definite particle la, it is always preceded by the indefinite particle une.

2^o. After infinité, the ellipsis of the next preposition and noun may take place, which is not allowed after foule, troupe, &c. and we may say, Une infinité s'imaginent (de gens is understood); a vast number of people fancy.

3^o. The collective foule, multitude, &c. may be accompanied with an adjective; as, une foule immense, une multitude innombrable, &c. whereas infinité can never admit of any adjective.

To the above collective nouns partitive must be added, la plus grande partie, and its vice-gerent la plupart: but with this difference, that, as it is always preceded by the article la, the next noun must also be preceded by an article; as,

La plus grande partie des femmes ont envie de plaire; the generality of women wish to please.

La plupart de ses amis l'abandonnèrent; most of his friends forsook him.

La plupart may be used absolutely; that is, like une infinité, it allows the ellipsis of the next preposition and noun, but still requiring its verb to be in the plural, because the noun understood is supposed to be in that number: as,

- C La plupart coururent aux armes; most part ran to arms.

Dans cette assemblée, la plupart vouloient; in this assembly the most part wished

Un grand nombre is seldom used absolutely.

When the aforesaid collective partitives la plupart, une infinité, as also adverbs of quantity are prefixed to a noun singular, the verb is, of course, in the singular number; as,

Une infinité de monde y accouroit de toutes parts; a vast number of people resorted thither from all parts.

La plupart du monde fait cela: most people do that.

Tant de beauté sera sa perte: so much beauty will be her ruin.

Plus d'esprit ne lui mesieroit pas; more wit would not be amiss in him.

Le plus grand nombre, not being used indefinitely, requires the article before the next noun, and the verb in the singular; as,

- D Le plus grand nombre des membres, or simply, le plus grand nombre étoit de cet avis; the greatest number of the members, or simply, the greatest number was of that opinion.

The collective partitives, just considered, are of a tribe which may be called indéterminée, but there are other collective partitives, as la moitié, the half; le tiers, the third part; les trois quarts, three parts out of four, &c. which, expressing a positive quantity, may be called déterminée; and consequently follow the general rule, that is, require the verb to agree with them in number; as,

La moitié des ennemis déserta; Half of the enemies deserted.

Le tiers des vignes est gelé; The third part of the vines are frozen.

Les trois quarts du château furent brûlés; Three parts out of four of the castle were burnt.

However, there are some instances which seem to deviate from the above A rule: as,

Plus de la moitié de ses dépens, sont payés (said of an old man): The best part of his bread is already eat.

La moitié de ces bouteilles sont vides: Half of these bottles are empty; (very different from ces bouteilles sont à moitié vides; these bottles are half empty.

The reason is that in such phrases, a determinate number is employed for an indeterminate one.

This may likewise account for the apparent irregularity of concord in the phrases mentioned, p. 207, B. C. une partie du bras cassé; une partie de ses hommes morts, &c.

N. B. Buffier and other Grammarians would rather say, une partie des soldats s'enfuit, than s'enfuirent; part of the soldiers ran away; and in that respect advise to consult the ear and taste.]

4°. The noun expressing the subject comes after the verb (or between the auxiliary and the participle, if the subject is a B pronoun, and the verb in a compound tense), in a short sentence, used by a parenthesis, and as an accessory member to the chief sentence. (See p. 229, D.); as also after some conjunctions (See p. 230, A.), and some verbs in the optative mood, or resolved by a conjunction: as, Tous les hommes sont fous, dit Boileau: All men are mad, says Boileau. Vous avez fini, m'a-t-il dit; You have done, said he to me. Ainsi fut terminé le différend; Thus the difference ended. Enfin, disoit ce bon Roi, je ne me croirai heureux, qu'autant que je ferai le bonheur de mes peuples; In short, said that good King, I will not think myself happy, only as much as I shall make the happiness of my people. Puissent nos jours sereins ignorer la C tristesse! May our days be serene and strangers to sorrow! La Vanité, fût-elle dans l'esprit des Dieux, est toujours méprisable; Vanity, were it in the minds of the gods, is always despicable.

The subject (especially when accompanied by many words depending on it) is likewise better put after the verb in the narrative discourse, when the verb has no object; or when the object is expressed by one of these conjunctive pronouns, se, que, dont, le, où, or when the adjective tel comes before the verb: as, Là coulent mille ruisseaux qui distribuent par-tout une eau claire; There flow a thousand rivulets that distribute D a clear water every where. Sur cela parut le Prince; Thereupon the Prince appeared. L'argent que m'envoya mon père: The money which my father sent me. À notre arrivée, se présenta un Ecuyer pour nous conduire; When we arrived, a gentleman-usher came to us to be our guide. Les égards dont nous préviennent nos parens; The regards by which our relations are before-hand with us. La prison où furent mis les malfaiteurs; The prison in which the malefactors were put. Tel parut à ses yeux l'éclat de sa beauté; Such the brightness of her beauty appeared in his eyes.

A The Use and Construction of the Tenses.

§ II. 1°. The Present tense of the indicative is used to denote the thing that is, or is a-doing, in the present period of time wherein we speak : as, Je vois, I see ; Je pense, I think ; that is, I, at this present time of speaking, do see, or think, or am seeing, or am thinking.

2°. The Imperfect, so called, because it partakes something both of the present and preterite, is used 1st, to denote that the thing which we are speaking of was present in a time past specified ; as, J'écrivois quand il arriva, I was writing when he arrived ; that is, at the time when he arrived, which is a time past specified, my action of writing, which is also past, was then present.

2dly, To denote a thing that was, without any respect to the time ; and therefore it is used to express in a narration, the inclinations and qualifications a person had : as, Titus étoit les délices du genre humain ; Titus was the delight of mankind. Mon père étoit bel homme, my father was a handsome man.

But if we speak of people that are still living (for the last instances are said of persons supposed to be dead), we use the compound of the present : as, Mon père a été bel homme ; or if we use the imperfect, we must mention a particular time : as,

Ma sœur étoit belle ; My sister was handsome (supposing she is dead).

Ma sœur a été belle ; My sister has been handsome (supposing she lives still).

Ma sœur étoit belle dans sa jeunesse, or avant d'avoir eu la petite vérole ;

My sister was handsome in her youth, (or) before she had the small pox (whether she is dead or no).

3dly, The imperfect is used to denote a thing uncertain, and doubtful, and even one that has something of a contingent futurity, that is, implying uncertainty ; in which respect that tense is always attended, either before or after, by a conditional, and that thing, or action, is sometimes expressed in English by should : as, S'il l'aimoit, il l'épouserait ; If he loved her, or should he love her, he would marry her. S'il venoit, vous lui diriez que j'ai été obligé de sortir pour affaire ; If he should happen to come, you would tell him that I have been obliged to go out on account of business.

3°. The Preterite is used to denote a thing past in such a manner, that nothing remains of the time wherein it was a doing, and therefore is chiefly used in historical relations: as, J'allai A l'année passée en France; I went to France last year. J'appris la semaine dernière que, &c. I heard last week that, &c. Je fus hier à la Comédie; I went to the play last night. Quand César vit; When Cæsar saw.

4°. The Future denotes a thing which is to be in a time not yet come; as, Nous aurons la paix; We shall have peace. We have not peace yet, but it is to come.

5°. The Conditional, or uncertain, tense is used to denote a B thing that would, should, or could be in an unspecified and uncertain time, because it depends upon another uncertain and conditional thing. It denotes the time to come, but conditionally: as, S'il demandoit cette place, on la lui donneroit; If he asked for that place, they would give it him. The action of giving would be in an uncertain time, because it depends on one's asking, which is also uncertain, at least conditional.

The Conditional is also used in a sense that denotes the present, especially in sentences of Wish: as, Je voudrois (or) Je souhaiterois qu'il fît beau Dimanche; I wish it would be fair weather on Sunday. Voudriez-vous me faire un plaisir? Would you do me a kindness? Pourriez-vous me prêter vingt guinées? C Could you, or Can you lend me twenty guineas? (Which manner of asking carries with it an appearance of modesty and respect).

6°. The Compound of the Present denotes, indeed, as the preterite, a thing that is past, but so that there is still actually remaining some part to slide away of the time wherein we declare the thing has been done: whereas the Preterite denotes the thing or action past in such a manner that nothing remains of that time wherein it was done: as, J'ai lu cette semaine la déclaration de guerre; I have read this week the declaration of war. J'ai appris ce matin de grandes nouvelles; I have heard great news this morning. I have read and heard denote a thing D past; but it is this week and to-day, and still there remains a part of this week, and day, wherein I speak.

The English have, as the French, three tenses to denote an action that is over, I did write, I wrote, I have written: but they often use them promiscuously to signify the same idea, without having any regard to the principal time when: whereas those three tenses, and even all compound tenses, which are really so

A many preterite tenses, and as well compound in the sense implied, as in the words expressed, denote in French so many circumstances of an action that is over, and must not be confounded.

In order, therefore, to give a perfect notion of the use and construction, especially of these three preterites, which so much puzzle Foreigners, and to omit as little as possible on that point of the language, I will try further to illustrate what I have said thereon, in giving it another turn.

1°. The Imperfect, which, when used in the first of the three respects wherein it is construed, denotes an action past, but B that was present in a specified time past (as, J'écrivois quand il arriva, I was writing when he arrived), is properly englished by the imperfect of the verb substantive to be, and the gerund of the verb in question, as I have translated it. At least, whenever the tense to be denoted may be thus englished, it is infallibly by the imperfect it must be expressed in French: for then one denotes an action that was present, in a specified time past.

The second respect, considered in the construction of the imperfect, admits of no difficulty. And as to the third, when the tense denotes uncertainty, doubt, or even futurity, one need only consider the tense that comes after it in English: for if it C has should, would, or could, for its sign, the first verb must be expressed in French by the imperfect: as,
If he loved her, he would marry her: S'il l'aimoit, il l'épouserait.

2°. When the thing spoken of happened in the day, week, month, year, and age wherein we live, we use the compound of the present to denote it: as, *

J'ai appris aujourd'hui de grandes nouvelles;

I have heard great news to-day.

J'ai vu le Roi cette semaine; I have seen the King this week.

J'ai été à la Comédie ce mois-ci; I have been to the play this month.

D Les François ont battu les Alliés cette année;

The French have beat the Allies this year.

Notre siècle a produit de grands hommes;

Our age has produced great men. And never J'appris aujourd'hui de grandes nouvelles; Je vis le Roi cette semaine; J'allai à la Comédie ce mois-ci; Les François battirent les Alliés cette année; Notre siècle produisit de grands hommes; because all those actions denote the day, week, month, year, age, in short, the time we live in, and there remains still some part of that time, viz. of this year, month, day, &c. to slide A away. Whereas we say, 3°. J'appris hier de grandes nouvelles; I heard great news yesterday.

Je vis le Roi la semaine passée; I saw the King last week.

Je fus or J'allai à la Comédie le mois dernier;

I went to the play last month.

Les François battirent les Allies en 1746;

The French did beat the Allies in 1746.

Les Espagnols conquièrent l'Amérique dans le 16 siècle;

The Spaniards conquered America in the 16th century.

And we do not express those actions with the compound of the present, because we are no longer in the day, week, month, year, age, which is spoken of, and the time of the action is quite over. B

Again, The Imperfect may be said of yesterday, so it denote an action or passion being then present on that day that is past: as, Quand avez-vous perdu votre bourse? Je l'ai perdue ce matin: Je l'avois hier au soir, Je l'admirois encore en m'allant coucher. When did you lose your purse? I have lost it this morning: I had it last night, I admired it still in going to bed.

The Compound of the Present is likewise used to denote a thing that has been done, and is entirely over, without mentioning any particular time: as, Avez-vous vu l'Opéra de Cadmus? Oui, je l'ai vu: Je le vis l'année passée; Have you seen the Opera of Cadmus? Yes, I have; I did last year. As also when there is in the sentence some word or other showing distinctly something present; as J'ai fait cela il n'y a qu'un moment; I did that but just now. Il y a plus de quinze jours que je ne suis sorti; It is above a fortnight since I have been out.

We may on some occasions indifferently use either of these three tenses, when we only want to denote in general an action that is over: as Alexandre étoit, (or) fut, (or) a été un grand Capitaine; Alexander was a great Captain. C In which instance it is indifferent to denote in what particular time Alexander was a great Captain, so his courage and abilities only are denoted. But if there be in the sentence some word or other that should specify a particular circumstance of the time when he showed his courage, then regard must be had to the aforesaid Rules.

7°. The Compound of the Imperfect (called in Latin Plusquamperfectum, because it denotes the preterite in a double manner) is used to denote, that in a certain specified time past the thing spoken of was also past: as, J'avois écrit ma lettre quand il entra; I had written my letter when he came in. My action of writing is here denoted, not only as past in itself, but D also with respect to another thing (his coming in), which is also past.

8°. The Compound of the Preterite is used in the same sense as the preterite; that is, it denotes a thing past, in a time of which no part remains to slide away: but it intimates something later, and besides most commonly expresses a thing past before another, and is almost always construed with these conjunctions, quand, lorsque, dès que, aussitôt que, après que, &c.

A as Quand j'eus fini ma lettre, or Après que j'eus fini ma lettre, elle me pria de lui en écrire une; When, or after I had finished my letter, she desired me to write one for her.

But if the action past before another was done in a time wherein we are still, and which is not quite over, then the super-compound tenses must be used: as, Elle est venue me voir aujourd'hui. J'étois à écrire quand elle est entrée; Quand j'ai eu fini ma lettre, elle m'a prié de lui en écrire une; She is come to see me to-day; I was writing when she came in; When I had finished my letter, she has desired me to write one for her.

B 9°. The Compound of the Future is used to denote a thing that is yet to be, with respect to itself, but that shall be over with respect to another future thing, which is to follow it: as, J'aurai soupé quand il viendra; I shall have supped when he will come, or Quand j'aurai soupé il entrera; When I have supped he will come in. My supping, which is not yet come, but is to be, will be over, at the time of his coming, which is to be after my supping. The English very seldom express the sign of this future after when.

10°. The Compound of the Conditional is used to denote a thing that could, or would, or should have happened in an uncertain time, had it not been for some other conditional thing: as, Le Ministre lui auroit donné cette place, s'il l'avoit demandée; The Minister would have given him that place, had he asked for it. (Observe this conditional way of speaking, which the French express by the conjunction conditional si, and the compound of the imperfect or preterite.)

Moreover the Indicative has three other tenses compound in a double manner: as,

Il a eu bientôt fait; He has had soon done; or He soon had done.

J'ai eu diné en un instant; I had have dined in a minute: or I have dined, &c.

Quand j'eus eu fini ce que je faisais; When I had finished what I was doing.

Elle n'auroit pas eu sitôt fait sans lui; She would not have done so soon without him.

J'aurois eu diné plutôt, si j'eusse su qu'il devoit venir à cette heure-là;

I would have dined sooner, if I had known that he was to come at that time.

The double compound or super-compound tenses are liable to the same rules of construction as the other compounds; that is, Il a eu fait, J'ai eu diné, &c. are said, as well as J'ai eu, J'ai fait, J'ai diné, only of that period of time wherein we are still; and J'eus eu fini, as well as J'eus eu, J'eus fait, J'eus diné, &c. of a time entirely past, so that there remains no part of it. They besides express the action past in a more emphatical manner.

As the Subjunctive represents the action or event in an indirect manner, and always subsequent to another event, the tenses of this mood are determined by that anterior event. Its practice will be established by sure rules in the following section, (p. 300.)

The Gerund and Participle are comprehended in the infinitive mood, for A method sake only : as these words represent the event under three different states or situations, and therefore constitute each its own mood.

The Infinitive represents it in its simple production, without any circumstance, that is, without being adapted to any subject or time : as, Il sait boire ; He can drink.

The Gerund represents the event as a circumstance connected with another event : as, Il se fâche en parlant : He is angry when he speaks.

The Participle represents it as complete and quite over ; as, Cela dit, il s'en alla ; Having said this, he went away. It is on that account it serves to form the compound tenses of the verb.

The auxiliary and participle are not always immediately joined together in compound tenses, but are sometimes separated by one or more words : as Nous avons, par la Grâce de Dieu, vaincu nos ennemis ; We have, by the Grace of God, overcome our enemies.

Correspondence of the Subjunctive to the Indicative Mood.

B

N. B. This is intended as an elucidation of the 10th paragraph, page 300.

¶ A verb in the subjunctive or conjunctive mood, is chiefly subjoined to, and depending on another verb in the indicative, to which it is connected by the conjunction que, or the relative qui.

Now what tense of the subjunctive must be used depends on the tense of the former verb in the indicative.

1^o. When the former verb is in the present or future of the indicative, the latter must be in the present of the subjunctive, if you mean to express a thing present or future ; as,

Il faut que celui qui parle, se mette à la portée de ceux qui l'écoutent ; He who speaks must confine himself within the reach of the understanding of those who listen to him.

(N. B. Se mettre à portée would signify to place oneself within the hearing, &c.)

Je ne crois pas qu'il vienne demain ; I do not think he will come to-morrow.

Il faudra qu'ils se rendent à la force de la vérité ; They will be obliged to yield to the force of truth.

C

But to express a thing past, the compound of the present must be used : as,

Il suffit qu'un habile homme n'ait rien négligé pour faire réussir une entreprise ; le mauvais succès ne doit pas diminuer son mérite : It is enough that a skilful man has not neglected any thing to make an undertaking succeed ; the bad success ought not to diminish his merit.

Speaking, for instance, of a skilful General who has betrayed his country, you will say : Il est fâcheux que de si grands talents aient été ternis par le plus odieux de tous les vices—la perfidie ; It is sorrowful that so great talents have been tarnished by the most odious of all vices—perfidy.

However, when a conditional member is subjoined to the sentence, the tense of the subjunctive is determined by that of the conditional verb : as,

Je ne doute pas qu'il ne vienne, si on l'en prie, (the present viene is used on account of the present prie) ; I do not doubt he will come, if he be asked.

Il n'est point d'homme, quelque mérite qu'il ait, qui ne fût très-mortifié, s'il savoit tout ce qu'on pense de lui (the preterite fût is used on account of the imperfect savoit) ; There is not a man, whatever merit he may possess, who would not be concerned very much, if he knew all that is thought of him.

Je doute qu'il eût réussi, sans votre secours, that is, si vous ne l'aviez pas secouru (the compound of the preterite, eût réussi is used on account of the compound of the imperfect aviez secouru) ; I doubt whether he had succeeded without your assistance, that is, if you had not assisted him.

2^o. When the former verb is in the compound of the present of the indicative, the latter must be in the preterite of the subjunctive, if you mean to express a thing present or future (with respect to the former verb) ; as,

D

A On s'est servi d'écorces d'arbres ou de peaux pour écrire, avant que le papier fût en usage ;

The bark of trees or pells were in use to write upon before paper were invented.

But to express a thing past (with respect to the former verb), the compound of the present must be used : as,

Il a fallu, pour gagner ce procès-là, qu'il ait sollicité ses juges de la manière la plus pressante, ou plutôt qu'il les ait corrompus : To have carried such a cause, he must have solicited his judges in the most earnest manner, or rather corrupted them.

However, to express an action which is still done, and may be done at all times, the simple present of the subjunctive may be used : as,

Dieu a entouré les yeux de tuniques fort minces, transparentes au-devant, afin que l'on puisse voir à travers ; God has surrounded the eyes with pellicles, very thin and transparent in front, that we may be able to see through them.

B 30. When the former verb is in the imperfect, the preterite, the compound of the imperfect, or either of the conditional tenses, the latter must be in the preterite of the subjunctive, if you mean to express a thing present or future (with respect to the former verb) ; as,

M. de Turenne ne voulut jamais rien prendre à crédit chez les marchands, de peur, disoit-il, qu'ils n'en perdissent une bonne partie, s'il venoit à être tué : Turenne would never take any thing upon trust from tradesmen, lest, he said, they should lose a great part of it, if he happened to be killed.

Tous les ouvriers qui travailloient pour sa maison, avoient ordre d'apporter leurs mémoires, avant qu'on partit pour la campagne, & ils étoient payés régulièrement ; All the tradesmen who worked for his house, had order to bring their bills before he set out for the campaign, and they were regularly paid off.

Il vaudroit mieux pour un homme de qualité, qu'il perdît la vie, que de perdre l'honneur par quelque action honteuse & criminelle ; It would be better for a man of quality to lose his life, than to lose his honour, for some shameful and criminal action.

C Lycurgue, par une de ses lois, avoit défendu qu'on éclairât ceux qui sortoient le soir d'un festin, afin que la crainte de ne pouvoir se rendre chez eux, les empêchât de s'enivrer ; Lycurgus, by one of his laws, forbade to light those who went out in the evening from a festival, that the fear of not finding their way home might prevent them from getting drunk.

But to mark a past event, the compound of the preterite must be used ; as,

Tout gouvernement étoit vicieux, avant que la suite des siècles, & en particulier le Christianisme, eussent adouci & perfectionné l'esprit humain ; Every government was vicious, before that series of ages, and particularly Christianity had softened and improved the human mind.

Of MOODS.

D § III. The tenses of the Subjunctive Mood, whether simple or compound, have always before them the conjunctive que, or the relative qui, except in some few sentences of Wishing, wherein the present is used without que ; as, Puissiez-vous vivre heureux avec elle ; May you be happy with her. Fasse le Ciel que cela arrive ; Grant God that the thing may fall out. Dieu m'en préserve, nous en préserve, or l'en préserve ; Which God avert from me, from us, from him, or her. Ecrive qui voudra ; Let him write who will please. Heureux l'homme qui peut, ne fût-ce que dans sa vieillesse, parvenir à être sage, & à penser sainement : Happy is the man, who, be it only in his old age, may arrive at wisdom and a rational way of thinking.

The tenses of the subjunctive are used, 1°. after the conjunctions afin que, avant que, and others, that shall be taken notice of in the chapter of the Conjunctions; as likewise in some few sentences of Reluctancy, Astonishment, and Imprecation, expressed in English by should, shall, or let: as,

Que j'aïlle le voir après cet affront!

Should or shall I go and see him after that affront!

Que je meure, si cela n'est pas vrai; Let me die, if that be not true.

2°. Verbs Willing, Wishing, Commanding, Permitting, Prohibiting, and Hindering; Asking, Desiring, Beseeking, and Entreating; Fearing, Doubting, Suspecting; Admiring, Wondering, Being glad and Rejoicing, Sorry and Grudging; B Verbs Denying, and denoting Ignorance, Doubt, Fear, Wish, Intention; and, generally speaking, all verbs expressing some Desire, Affection, Passion, Sentiment, or Motion of the Mind, govern the subjunctive with the particle que: as, Je souhaite qu'il réussisse; I wish he may succeed or prosper.

Je veux que vous étudiez; I will have you study.

Je doute qu'il le fasse; I question whether he will do it.

Je suis surpris que vous osiez le faire; I wonder that you dare do it.

J'ignore qu'il soit arrivé; I do not know that he is arrived.

Plût à Dieu que cela fût; Would to God that it were so. C

Il nie qu'il l'ait pris; He denies that he has taken it.

Agissez de manière, or faites en sorte que vous réussissiez; Do in such a manner as you succeed.

In this last instance agissez, do, denotes the inclination and desire which I have that you may succeed, which is a passion of my soul: but when no such desire, passion, or inclination is expressed by the verb, we use the indicative: as Vous agissez de manière que vous réussissiez; You do in such a manner that you succeed.

[Such is always the case when the phrase implies no doubt, condition, or uncertainty.]

But when those verbs are attended by a noun, or pronoun, expressing either their object or end, then they require the next word in the infinitive with the preposition de, as does likewise se repentir, to repent; as,

Je vous ordonne de faire cela, and not que vous fassiez;

I order you to do that.

Il lui demande seulement d'y aller, and not qu'il y aille;

He only asks him leave to go there.

Le Ministre se repentit d'avoir proposé ce Bill, and not qu'il eût proposé:

The Minister repented having moved for that Bill.

We also say Je veux apprendre le François; I am willing or desirous to learn French; for the verb vouloir cannot be construed with the subjunctive, when it is one and the same subject, expressed by the pronoun, which governs both verbs

- A 3°. Verbs denoting Belief or Certainty of something, as Assurer, to assure; Être sûr, to be sure; Affirmer, to affirm; Croire, Penser, to think; Gager, Parier, to lay a wager; Mettre en fait, to take for granted; Soutenir, to maintain; Prétendre, in the sense of to maintain (for in the sense of being willing, it governs the subjunctive); Jurer, to swear; Montrer, faire voir, to show; Prouver, to prove; Démontrer, to demonstrate: or Verbs signifying only Telling, Foretelling, Saying, Seeing, Foreseeing, Conjecturing, Presaging, Declaring, Certifying, Notifying, Signifying, Intimating, Setting forth, Supposing (but not Proposing and Voting,) Presuming,
- B Being sensible, Perceiving, Hearing, Apprehending (in the sense of Conceiving, for in that of Fearing it governs the subjunctive), Knowing, Understanding, Hoping, (though it signifies affection of the soul,) Reckoning, Agreeing, Confessing, Owning, Reputing, Publishing, Remembering, Forgetting, Promising, Concluding, Fancying, Imagining, Judging; all which (as well as any other like, if there be any forgotten) expressing the faculties of the Understanding, and not those of the mind or soul, govern the indicative with que: as,
Je sais qu'il est venu; I know that he is come.
J'ai appris qu'il est guéri; I have heard that he is cured.
Je vous assure que cela est, (or) n'est pas ainsi;
- C I assure you that it is, or is not so.

But when the same verbs are used interrogatively, or with a negative, or with the particle si, there is a distinction to be made. If they signify merely Knowing, Saying, Hearing, in short, express only their natural import (especially the verbs Saying, Telling, Declaring, and Affirming), the next verb is put in the indicative: but they most commonly imply Doubt or Ignorance in those constructions, and therefore it is better to construe them with the subjunctive, if however the next verb be the present, preterite, future, or their compounds; for in any other tense it must be left in the indicative (save the excep-

- D tions comprehended in the next observation): as,
Croyez-vous que le Roi fasse la Campagne?
 Do you think that the King will make the Campaign?
Je n'apprends pas qu'il soit guéri; I do not hear that he is cured.
Si j'entends dire qu'il soit arrivé; If I hear that he is arrived.

But we say, [qu'il aille ?
Avez-vous entendu dire, (or) Savez-vous qu'il va voyager, not Have you heard, (or) Do you know that he goes a travelling?
Croyez-vous qu'il iroit voyager, si—and not qu'il allât?
 Do you think that he would go a travelling, if ?

Some of the aforesaid verbs may sometimes be not improperly construed A with the indicative; as Je n'apprends pas qu'il est guéri: Croyez-vous que le Roi fera la Campagne? but sometimes also they cannot be construed but with the subjunctive; as Croyez-vous qu'il vienne, and not qu'il viendra? Therefore in this uncertainty it is better, and more safe, to construe them with the subjunctive.

Moreover it is to be observed, 1st, that after those verbs used interrogatively, the next verb is put in the indicative, when the person that asks the question makes no doubt of the thing which is the object of the question. As if knowing that peace is made, I want to know if the people, whom I converse with, know of it too, I will express myself thus, Savez-vous que la paix est faite? Do you know that peace is made? But if I have it only by report, and doubt of it, and want to be informed of it, I must ask the question thus, Savez-vous que la paix soit faite? and by no means Savez-vous que la paix est faite?—Likewise when the second verb is in the future B in English, it must be put in the present of the subjunctive in French: as,

Croyez-vous que la paix se fasse cet hiver?

Do you think that peace will be made this winter? or with a negative.

Je ne crois pas que nous ayons la paix si tôt:

I do not think that we shall have a peace so soon.

2dly, Dire, écrire, prétendre, entendre, and perhaps some other verbs, whose most natural and common signification is that of saying, writing, declaring, are also used sometimes in the sense of Advising, Commanding, and Willing, and therefore govern the subjunctive: as,

Dites qu'on vienne de bonne heure; Bid them come in time.

J'écris qu'on m'envoie de l'argent; I write to them to send me money.

Je prétends qu'on m'obéisse; I pretend to be obeyed.

3dly, These verbs Ignorer not to know, Nier to deny, Disconvenir to disown, implying of themselves a negative sense, govern the subjunctive, C though they do not meet with a particular negative: as, J'ignore qu'il ait fait cela, Je nie qu'il ait fait cela, Je disconviens qu'il ait fait cela; I do not know, or I deny, or I do not agree that he has done that.

4thly, After Douter the particle si may be used in some cases, although very few, with the future; as Je doute s'il viendra; I question whether he will come: But it is better to use the subjunctive with que, as Je doute qu'il vienne; I question whether he will come; and when douter is attended by a negative, it must, by all means, be construed with que, and the subjunctive preceded also by another negative: as, Je ne doute pas qu'il ne vienne; I do not doubt but he will come. (See the chap. of the Negatives, p. 341.)

4°. These following verbs Impersonal govern the Subjunctive with que:

Il faut, it must,	il y a de la gloire, or ily	il est de la bienséance,
il convient, it becomes,	a de la honte, there is	it is seemly,	D

A	agréable, pleasant, aisé, easy, affligeant, afflicting, beau, fine, chagrinant, vexatious, cruel, cruel, dangereux, dangerous, difficile, difficult, divertissant, diverting, doux, sweet, pleasant,	ennuyeux, tedious, étonnant, astonishing, facile, easy, fâcheux, sorrowful, glorieux, glorious, gracieux, graceful, agreeable, heureux, happy, lucky, honteux, shameful, impossible, impossible,	mal-aisé, difficult, mortifiant, mortify- ing, possible, possible, plaisant, odd, droll, sensible, sensible, surprenant, sur- prising, triste, sad, vilain, ugly, juste, just, fair,
B	douloureux, grievous, dur, hard, disgracieux, unpleasant,	indifférent, indiffer- ent, malheureux, unlucky,	injuste, unjust, un- fair,

Examples. Il faut qu'il vienne ; He must come.

Il importe qu'elle y soit ; It is of moment that she should be there.

Il est juste qu'il le sache ; It is just, or right for him to know it.

Il est à propos, expédient, bienséant, nécessaire, &c. qu'il la voie ;

It is fit, proper, meet, decent, necessary, &c. for him to see her, &c.

Observe, 1st, that il est, with these adnouns, may be turned into c'est une chose : as,

C C'est une chose fâcheuse, triste, mortifiante, &c. qu'il soit arrivé si tard ;

It is sad, grievous, &c. that he should have come so late.

2dly, That the same verbs impersonal, except il y a, govern the infinitive with de, when they do not govern the subjunctive with que : which usually happens when they are attended by a pronoun : as,

Il est indifférent qu'il soit en Angleterre ou en Irlande ;

It is indifferent whether he is in England or Ireland.

Il lui est indifférent de vivre en Angleterre ou en Irlande.

It is indifferent for him to live in England or Ireland.

5°. The following verbs impersonal govern the indicative with que.

D	Il semble, it seems, il paroît, it appears, il y a apparence, it is likely, on dit, it is said, on croit, it is thought, on croiroit, one would think, (and all impersonals formed with on ,)	il est, it is ; with these adnouns, avéré, averred, or evinced, clair, clear, certain, certain, évident, evident, constant, constant, indubitable, unquestionable,	manifeste, manifest, notoire, notorious, palpable, palpable, sensible, plain, sensible, sûr, sure, vrai, true, visible, obvious, As likewise all verbs impersonal, denoting
----------	--	---	---

a positive certainty of something :

A

Il est certain (or) il est vrai que le Roi va à Hanovre ;

It is certain, or true, that the King goes to Hanover.

Il est clair (or) il est évident que cela ne sauroit arriver ;

It is clear or evident that that cannot happen.

Il paroît (or) il y a apparence qu'il dit vrai ;

It appears, or it is likely that he says true.

But when the same impersonals cease to denote a positive certainty of the thing (which happens when they are used interrogatively, or with a negative, or the particle conditional si, if, whether), they then govern the subjunctive : as,

Est-il certain (or) est-il vrai que le Roi aille à Hanovre ?

B

Is it certain (or) is it true that the King goes to Hanover ?

Il n'est pas certain (or) il n'est pas vrai que le Roi aille à Hanovre ;

It is not certain (or) it is not true that the King goes to Hanover.

S'il est certain (or) s'il est vrai que le Roi aille à Hanovre ;

If it be true that the King goes to Hanover.

I have said, that it is sometimes but an elegance, not a necessity, to use the subjunctive after verbs denoting Belief, or Certainty, and others mentioned in the third paragraph, when they are used interrogatively or negatively, or with si ; but the impersonals, which are the object of the last observation, when used in these three respects, require, by all means, the subjunctive after them.

Again, when the impersonal il semble meets with a noun governed by the preposition à, or a pronoun implying it, the following verb must not be in the subjunctive, but in the indicative with que, or the infinitive without any particle at all : as,

Il me semble que vous avez peur ; It seems to me that you are afraid.

Il me semble la voir (or) que je la vois ; Methinks I see her.

Il semble à un Mahométan que les Chrétiens sont dans l'erreur ;

It seems to a Mahometan that Christians are in error.

Whereas without a pronoun before the impersonal, or a noun after it, the subjunctive mood must be used : as,

Il semble que vous ayez peur ; It seems that you are afraid.

Il semble que les Turcs soient dans l'erreur ;

The Turks seem to be in error.

Observe besides, that semble has two significations in French : when it signifies plain, evident, obvious, it governs the indicative, and when used in the sense of grievous, painful, it governs the subjunctive.

- A 6°. The subjunctive is used after quelque, quel que, and quoi que taken in the sense of whatever and whatsoever: as,
Quelques amis que j'aie, Whatever friends I have.
Quels que soient les hommes, Whatever men be.
Quoi que je fasse, Whatever I do.

7°. After que, used instead of repeating si (as we shall see more particularly in the chapter of Conjunctions), as also after que following the comparative si: as,

- Si vous y consentez, & que vous preniez des mesures pour, &c.*
 If you consent to it, and take measures to, &c.
 B Il n'est pas si fou qu'il ne sache bien ce qu'il fait ;
 He is not so foolish but he knows well what he does.

8°. After the relative qui, when it comes after a superlative or negative: and generally after any relation of that relative, (viz. que, dont, où), between two verbs, so it denote some desire, wish, want, or necessity: as,

- Le meilleur ouvrage qui soit (or qu'il y ait) ; The best work extant, or that is.*
Je ne connois personne qui fasse plus de cas des habiles gens ;
 I know nobody that has more regard for learned men.
 C Choisissez une femme que vous aimez, & qui soit prudente ;
 Choose a wife whom you love, and who is prudent.

But when the relative qui denotes no desire, wish, &c. the next verb must be put in the indicative: as,

- Je plains un homme qui a une méchante femme ;*
 I pity a man who has a bad wife.

9°. The present subjunctive of savoir is familiarly used, when it is attended by a negative, instead of the indicative, though without being governed by any thing before; as,

- Je ne sache rien de plus fâcheux que, &c.*
 D I know nothing more grievous than, &c.

But this subjunctive, thus used, is confined only to the first person singular; for we do not say in the other persons, Vous ne sachiez rien, or Il ne sache rien de plus fâcheux instead of vous ne savez rien, il ne sait rien, &c. Pas or non pas que je sache; Not that I know of. (Such phrases are only used in conversation.)

10°. The present tense of the subjunctive mood is used, when the first verb, governing the other, according to the aforesaid rules, is in the present, or future of the indicative; for when it is in any other tense, either simple or compound, it is the preterite of the subjunctive it requires, unless there comes a third verb in the imperfect. As in the present and future we say, Je souhaite qu'il vienne; I wish he comes, or he would come. Il souhaitera que nous ne venions pas;

He will wish that we may not come.

So with the imperfect, conditional, and other tenses, we say, Je souhaitois qu'il vînt; I wished that he had come.

Je voudrois qu'il se dépêchât; I would have him make haste.

J'aurois craint que vous ne l'eussiez frappé;

I should have feared that you would have struck him. B

But if the tense that comes after the present be followed by an imperfect, or preterite in English, which is an imperfect in French, it (the second verb) must be put in the preterite. As when the first verb is in the present, we put the second in the present too, thus,

Je ne doute pas qu'il ne vienne, si on l'en prie;

I do not doubt but he will come if he be asked:

so when it is the imperfect, we put the second in the preterite, thus,

Je ne doute pas qu'il ne vînt si on l'en prioit;

I do not doubt he would come, if he were asked. (See p. 293.)

Notwithstanding what has been said of the construction of the tenses, some are nevertheless confounded sometimes, and used for others; and it is common to all languages to use the present for the future; as, C

Avez-vous bientôt fait? Have you almost done?

Dinez-vous aujourd'hui chez vous? Do you dine at home to-day?

J'irai demain, s'il fait beau; I will go to-morrow, if it is fine weather.

We use especially the present subjunctive for the future, as in these sentences, and others like,

Je ne doute pas qu'il ne vienne; I do not doubt but he will come.

Croyez-vous que le Roi aille à Hanovre?

Do you think that the King will go to Hanover? D

Therefore avoid carefully those faults which Foreigners are so apt to make, in considering rather the tense which they want to turn into French, than the mood, which the genius of the language requires: and do not say, Je ne crois pas qu'il viendra; I do not believe that he will come: Je doute qu'il le fera; I doubt that, or whether he will do it: because the tense is

A a future in English ; but mind that que coming after a negative, and after douter, requires the subjunctive, thus :

Je ne crois pas qu'il vienne. Je doute qu'il le fasse.

As likewise that the conjunction si is hardly ever construed with the future, except with the verb savoir and dire : as, Je ne sais s'il viendra ; I do not know whether he will come.

Dites-moi si vous viendrez ou non ; Tell me whether you will come or no.

The present is used for the preterite in narrations : as,

L'Amour rassemble les Nymphes, & leur dit : Télémaque est encore en vos mains ; hâtez-vous de brûler ce vaisseau que ce téméraire Mentor a fait pour s'enfuir. Aussitôt elles allument des flambeaux, elles accourent sur le rivage, elles frémissent, elles poussent des hurlemens, elles secouent leurs cheveux épars comme des Bacchantes. Déjà la flâme vole, elle dévore le vaisseau, qui est d'un bois sec & enduit de résine ; des tourbillons de fumée & de flâme s'élèvent dans les nues.

Cupid gathers the Nymphs together and tells them : Telemachus is still in your hands ; haste, and let devouring flames consume the ship which the rash Mentor has built to favour his escape. Immediately they light torches, run towards the sea-shore, they quake, fill the air with dreadful howlings, and toss about their dishevelled hair, like frantic Bacchanals. And now the greedy flames devour the ship, which burn the more fiercely, as she is made of dry wood, daubed over with rosin ; and rolling clouds of smoke, streak'd with flames, ascend the skies.

Moreover the compound of the preterite of the subjunctive is often used for, and in the same sense as the compound of the conditional ; as, J'eusse été bien fâché de ne vous pas voir ; I should have been very sorry not to have seen you : which is the same as, but more elegant than, J'aurais été bien fâché de ne vous pas voir : as likewise for the compound of the imperfect after si : as,

C Si J'eusse fait cela, better than si j'avois fait cela ; if I had done that.

The present of the infinitive has in many cases a sense merely passive : as,

Il n'y a rien à voir ;

There is nothing to see, or to be seen.

Cela n'est bon qu' à jeter ;

That is good only to throw away.

An infinitive may, as well as a substantive, be the subject coming before a verb ; in which case it has no preposition, takes sometimes the article, and is properly englished by the gerund : as,

Munger & dormir sont les plus grandes nécessités de la vie ;

Eating and sleeping are the greatest necessities of life.

Part of a sentence, nay a whole sentence, may also serve as a subject to a verb ; then the adnoun referring to it (when an adnoun follows) is of the masculine gender.

Of the Government of Verbs.

§ IV. 1°. Verbs active are always attended by a noun, or pronoun, and sometimes by two. When they are attended by two, the one is the Object of the verb, and the other the End. The noun expressing the end is always preceded by the preposition à, the pronoun generally implies it ; as,

Donner quelque chose à quelqu'un ;

To give something to somebody.

quelque chose is the Object of the verb, à quelqu'un is the End.

Je le lui donne ; I give it to him or to her ; le is the Object, lui is the End.

2°. Verbs passive, or taken passively, require the preposition de, or par, before the next noun, used on the same occasions as the English prepositions by, of, from: as,

La vertu est estimée de tous; Virtue is esteemed by all.

Il a été tué par ses domestiques; He has been killed by his servants. Par is used only with a verb that denotes action.

Therefore we do not say,

Je suis environné par des gens ennuyeux, but de gens, &c.

I am surrounded by tedious people.

However, when the verb passive is followed in English by any other prepositions than of, by, and from (as with, &c.), it must be expressed in French by de. (See Exerc. p. 6.) B

3°. The following verbs active require the preposition de before the next infinitive. Such of them as are marked with an asterisk, require moreover the subjunctive with que, according to the observation of the fourth paragraph of the third Section.

	omettre,	to omit,	suffire,	to suffice,
	* ordonner,	to order,	suggérer,	to suggest,
C	oublier,	to forget,	* supplier,	to beg, beseech,
	pardonner,	to pardon, forgive,	surprendre,	to surprise,
	* permettre,	to permit, allow,	susciter,	to put in mind of,
	persuader,	to persuade,	tromper,	to deceive,
	plaindre,	to pity,	troubler,	to trouble, disturb,
	presser,	to press, to urge,

Prier requires de before the next infinitive : as, Prier quelqu'un de faire quelque chose, to desire, or beg one to do a thing. Except before these four verbs, manger, déjeuner, dîner and souper, with which it requires à, with this exception.

D We say both Prier quelqu'un à dîner and Prier quelqu'un de dîner, To invite one to dine ; with this difference, that prier à dîner is said of, and properly implies, a formal, express invitation ; and prier de dîner, a sudden and accidental one ; as,

Il l'a envoyé prier à dîner ; He sent to his house to invite him to dinner.

Je me suis trouvé chez lui comme il alloit se mettre à table, & il m'a prié de dîner avec lui ; I was at his house as he was going to dine, and he has invited me, or offered me to take a dinner with him.

4°. The following verbs (for the most part neuter or reflected) A require the preposition de before the next noun or infinitive.

abuser,	to abuse,	s'étonner,	{ to wonder, to
s'abstenir de,	to abstain from,	être surpris,	{ be amazed, or
s'accommoder	} to make shift, or hold with		{ surprised.

être consterné,		to be dismayed,	s'ingérer,	to take upon oneself,
convenir,	to agree to,	s'in-	} to be provoked, incensed, exasperated,
se défier ou méfier de quelqu'un,	} to mistrust or distrust one,	digner,		se lasser,
se déshabituer,		} to leave off doing a thing	manquer de quelque chose,	} to want something,
se désacoutumer,	médire,		to traduce, slander,
se dépêcher,	to make haste,	menacer de,	to threaten with,
se désister,	to desist,	se mêler de,	to meddle with,
se démettre d'une place,	} to resign a place,	se moquer de,	{ to mock, laugh at,
disconvenir,		to disagree,	parler,	to speak,
s'empêcher,	to forbear,	profiter,	to improve,
s'empresser,	to hasten,	se précipiter,	{ to over-hasten D oneself,
s'amouracher d'une fille,	} to fall in love with a girl,	avoir pitié de,	to have pity on,
s'emparer,		to take hold,	se plaindre,	to complain,
s'émanciper,	} to take too much liberty.	se piquer (d'une chose),	} to pretend to, to set up for a thing,
s'ennuyer,		to grow weary,		se piquer (de faire une chose),
s'ennor-	} to grow proud, be puffed up,	se rire,	} to laugh at,
gueillir,		and rire de,		se réjouir de,

A se repentir de,	to repent,	se scandaliser	} to take an offence at, or to be scandalised at one thing,

se rebuter,	{ to despond, be disheartened,	cer,
se retenir de,	{ to keep oneself from,	se vanter,	} to boast,
se soucier de,	to care for	user and se servir d'une chose,
se saisir de,	to seize upon,

Observe that most of those verbs (if not all) which require the preposition de before them, are commonly, and can always be, rendered into English by a gerund, either absolutely, or with any of these prepositions of, from, with, &c. as,

Il m'empêche de le faire ; He hinders me from doing it.

J'ai du moins le plaisir de la voir ; I have at least the pleasure of seeing her.

Vous me reprochez de vous aimer ; You upbraid me with loving you.

J'ai l'honneur de le connoître ; I have the honour to be, or of being acquainted with him, &c.

C 5°. The following verbs require the preposition à before the next infinitive :

admettre (quel-	} to give one a fair hearing, and suffer him to justify himself,	convier and inviter,	to invite,
qu'un) à se		dépenser à,	to spend in,
justifier,	} to stay, tarry, delay to,	demeurer à,	} to stay, tarry, delay to,
aimer,		tarder à,
avoir to have,	to love, to like,	destiner à,	to design for,
apprendre à,	and être, to be,	disposer,	to dispose,
D apprêter à }	to afford matter of laughing,	donner,	to give,
rire,	} to summon, or cite to appear,	dresser,	to train up,
assigner à com-		} to empower,	éclairer,
parôître,	employer (quel-		employer (quel-
autoriser,	qu'un) à,	qu'un) à,
chercher à,	{ to seek to, to want to,	encourager,	to encourage,
condamner,	to condemn,	engager,	to engage,
consister à,	to consist in,	enhardir,	to embolden,
contribuer,	to contribute,	enseigner,	to teach,
		exciter,	to excite,
		exercer,	to exercise,
		exhorter	to exhort,

habituier , to use, accustom one,	porter and pousser } to induce, A
inciter , to incite,	quelqu'un à } excite, spur
incliner , to incline,	agir , } one to do,
montrer , to show,	présenter , } to present.
perdre , to lose,

6°. The following verbs (for the most part neuter) require the preposition à before the noun or infinitive.

s'abandonner , } to indulge, abandon oneself,	s'engager , { to take upon oneself to,	B
aboutir à , to come to touch,	s'exposer , to expose oneself,
s'accoutumer , } to accustom, or	se fier à } to trust one,
s'habituier à , } use oneself to,	quelqu'un , }
s'adonner , to give oneself,	insulter aux } to insult the
adhérer , to adhere,	misérables , } unfortunate,

s'attendre à } to expect to	temps à , } time in,
voir , }	see ,
compatir , to compassionate,	s'opposer , to oppose,
con- } to condescend, to	* pardonner , to forgive, D
scendre , }	parvenir , to arrive to, to get,
comply with ,	penser and songer , } to think of
contrevenir , } to act contrary	à faire une } doing a
aux ordres , } to orders,	chose , } thing,
déplaire , to displease,	persister à } to persist in
désobéir , to disobey,	faire quel- } doing some-
se déterminer , } to resolve	que chose , } thing,
se résoudre à , } upon,	* plaire à quel- } to please one
s'endurcir à } to inure oneself	qu'un , }
la fatigue , } to hardships,

A	se plaire, or prendre plaisir à faire quelque chose,	} to delight } in a thing, } to take a } pleasure in } doing it.	résister, to resist, withstand,
			rester à rien faire, } to stand idle,
	pourvoir au salut de l'Etat,	} to provide for } the safety of } the state,	se mettre à faire quelque chose, } to go, fall, } set about } a thing,
			subvenir aux nécessaires, } to relieve the } needy,
	prétendre à une chose,	} to aim at, to lay } claim to a thing,	* suffire, to suffice, be enough,
			survivre à quelqu'un, } to outlive one, to } survive him,
B	renoncer, to give over,	procéder à élire, } to proceed to } the election,	tendre, viser } to aim at an } end,
			à un but, }
	ressembler, to resemble, be like,	travailler, to work.

Observe that most of those verbs which require the preposition à before them, are commonly, and can always be rendered into English by a gerund, with the preposition in, or for: as,

Aidez-moi à faire cela; Help me to do that, or in doing that.
Apprêter à rire; To afford matter for laughing.
Elle prend plaisir à le faire endéver;
 She takes a pleasure in teasing him.

C But * aider and pourvoir take indifferently the 3d and 4th state of pronouns; as,

Aidez-lui, Help him; Aidez-le à faire cela, Help him to do that.

* Plaire, * pardonner, and suffire, require the preposition de and not à, before the infinitive: as,

Il me plaît de faire cela; I like or choose to do that, &c.

Satisfaire (to satisfy) governs the 4th state of the person, and the 3d of the thing: as,

Il n'a pas encore satisfait ses créanciers;

D He has not as yet satisfied his creditors.

Satisfaire à ses passions, à son ambition, &c.

To gratify one's passions, ambition, &c.

7°. These nine verbs take indifferently de or à before the next infinitive. One must, however, in some cases, have regard to the best sound.

commencer, to begin, discontinuer, to discontinue, contraindre, to constrain, essayer, to try, continuer, to continue, go on, forcer, to force, compel s'efforcer, { to endeavour, to coûter, to cost, A { exert oneself, manquer, to fail.

Contraindre (to constrain, force, oblige), when used actively, indifferently takes à, or de, before the next infinitive: but when it is used in the passive voice, it always requires de: as,

Contraignez-le à faire cela; constrain him to do that.

Je l'ai contraint de garder la maison; I have obliged him to stay at home.

Il fut contraint de se retirer; He was obliged to withdraw.

Cette fière nation est à la fin contrainte de se soumettre;

That proud nation is at last obliged to submit.

Obliger, signifying to force, requires à, and sometimes de, B before the next infinitive in the active state: but in the passive state it always requires de: as,

Vous m'obligerez à vous abandonner; You will force me to abandon you.

Je suis obligé de vous abandonner; I am forced to abandon you.

When it signifies to do a kindness, it is followed by no preposition, neither à, nor de. (French Academy.)

Voulez-vous bien m'excuser auprès d'elle, vous m'obligerez;

Be pleased to excuse me to her, you will oblige me.

Manquer requires de before an infinitive, when it signifies to C fail: and à when it signifies to forget: as,

Les malheureux ne manquent jamais de se plaindre:

The miserable never fail to complain.

J'ai manqué à faire ce que je vous avois promis:

I forgot to do what I had promised you.

¶ It is not always indifferent to use either de or à after the same verb, and more regard must be had to the meaning than to the best sound of the phrase: most of the above examples countenance the remark. There is a material difference between the two prepositions: à denoting tendency, and de consequence.

For instance, Pour les forcer à se rendre, To force them to surrender, marks the end one aims at; whereas, Pour les forcer de se rendre, marks that one has succeeded, that they have been obliged to yield to a superior force, that they have actually surrendered. D

Likewise, S'efforcer à means to employ all one's strength; Il s'est efforcé à courir; He has exerted himself to run. S'efforcer de means to employ one's industry; Il s'efforce d'être plaisant, He endeavours to be witty.]

8°. ¶ These following verbs will have no preposition before the next infinitive, before the next noun.

aller, to go. affirmer, to affirm, to assert.
compter, { to expect, to rely appercevoir, to perceive.
 { upon. assurer, to assure.

A		before the next infinitive.	before the next noun.
daigner,	{	to deign, to be pleased.	avouer, to own.
ouïr,		to hear.	considérer, to consider, to behold.
il faut,		must.	écouter, to listen to.
oser,		to dare.	épier, to spy.
paraître,		to appear.	nier, to deny.
sembler,		to seem.	observer, to observe.
* il vaut mieux,		it is better.	publier, to publish, to give out.
† venir,		to come.	rapporter, to report.
			regarder, to look at, to behold.
			soutenir, to maintain.

B		Before the next infinitive noun.
* aimer	{	to have rather.	faire, to make, to cause.
mieux,		to choose rather.	s'imaginer, to imagine, to fancy.
confesser,		to confess.	laisser, to let, to leave.
croire,		to think, to believe.	penser, { to think, to be like, or near.
déclarer,		to tell, to declare.
déposer,		to depose, to say, to tell.	prétendre, to pretend.
† désirer,		to desire.	reconnoître, to acknowledge.
entendre,		to hear.	savoir, to know.
devoir,		to owe.	† souhaiter, to wish.
envoyer,		to send.	voir, to see.
C † dire,		to say.	vouloir, to be willing.
† espérer,		to hope.

* Aimer mieux and valoir mieux will have no preposition before the next infinitive; but when that infinitive is followed by que, and another infinitive implying comparison, the second infinitive requires de before it (see p. 226. D.); as,

Il aimeroit mieux mourir,	}	que de faire une
He would rather die,		action honteuse,
Il vaudroit mieux mourir,		than to commit a
It would be better to die,		shameful action.

D † Dire, in the sense of to bid, takes de before the next infinitive: as, Allez lui dire de venir: Go and bid him come.

† Désirer, espérer, souhaiter, used in the infinitive, are always construed with de before the next infinitive; as, Pouvez-vous espérer de réussir sans son secours? Can you expect to succeed without his assistance?

In the other moods, de is generally left out; as,

Je désire le voir; I desire to see him.

J'espère gagner mon procès; I hope I shall carry the cause.

Je souhaiterois pouvoir vous servir; I wish I could serve you

But désirer, followed by an adverb, requires de; as, A
Je désire fort de le voir; I long to see him.

Venir, in the sense of to happen, &c. takes à, especially when it is used impersonally: as,
Quand il vint à ouvrir la bouche; When he came to open his mouth.

S'il vient à pleuvoir: If it happens to rain.

Venez boire, Come to drink. Il vient danser, He comes to dance.

Venir, in the sense of just, takes de; as,
Il vient d'arriver; He is just arrived.

Avec deux mots qu'il daigna dire;
 With two words he was pleased to speak.

Il croyoit pouvoir le faire; He thought he could have done it. B

Il a pensé mourir; He has been like to die.

Il faut mourir tôt ou tard; We must die sooner or later.

9°. The following Adnouns, commonly construed with être, require the preposition à before the next infinitive, as likewise all nouns, and adnouns, signifying Inclination, Aptness, Fitness, and Unfitness; all which will have à (or au and aux) before a noun.

Etre, to be	}	admirable,	admirable,	} à faire quelque chose, to do something.	C
		adroit,	dexterous, skilful,

Etre, to be

B 10°. The following Adnouns, construed also with être, require the preposition de before the next infinitive and noun.

C	}	aise, glad, assuré, avide, capable, content, curieux, digne, ennuyé, en état, fâché honteux, incapable, incertain, indigne, joyeux, las, tired, mécontent, ravi, satisfait, sûr, certain, à la veille, ou sur le point,	bien aise, very glad, assured, greedy, covetous, capable, contented, pleased, curious inquisitive, worthy, weary, in a state, condition, sorry, ashamed, incapable, uncertain, unworthy, joyful, fatigué, fatigued, dissatisfied, overjoyed. satisfied, certain, } upon the brink, } or very near to,	}	de faire quelque chose, to do something.
		Etre, to be

11°. The following Nouns, chiefly construed with avoir, without the article, require the preposition de before the next infinitive.

Avoir, to have	{	affaire, besoin,	{	occasion, or to stand in need of, occasion for, or to be in need of,	}	de faire quelque chose, to do something.
-------------------	---	-----------------------------------	---	---	---	---

Avoir, to have	}	congé,	leave,	} de faire quelque chose, to do something.	A permission,	permission,

		raison, reason, or to be in the right,
		soin,	care, or to take care.
		sujet,	subject, occasion,
tort,	to be in the wrong,

B

As likewise all nouns construed with other verbs, either with or without an article, so that they do not signify or imply Inclination, Reluctancy, Aptness, Fitness, or Unfitness: as, Il m'a donné la peine de le faire; He gave me the trouble of doing it.

J'ai eu beaucoup de peine à le faire; I have had much trouble to do it.

In which last instance the noun peine implies Difficulty, Reluctancy, and therefore governs à.

This list of 'nouns, requiring de before the infinitive, will not be amiss for the young learners.

ambition,	ambition.	chagrin,	grief.	imprudence,	imprudence.	} impotence,	D

	précaution,	precaution.	ruse,	cunning, craft.	témérité,	rashness
	présomp- } tion, } puissance,	presump- } tion. }	sagesse,	wisdom.	vanité,	vanity.
		might.	satisfaction,	satisfaction.	volonté,	will.
			scandale,	sandal.

Moreover observe, that any noun or adnoun, derived from verbs, requires the same preposition before the next infinitive or noun, as the verb which it is derived from. Thus étonné amazed, résolu resolved, &c. govern, the former the second state of nouns, and the latter the third, and both the preposition de before the infinitive, because their verbs étonner or s'étonner to wonder at, to be amazed, and résoudre to resolve, do so. It is the same with force, obligation, and présomption, &c. derived from forcer, obliger, présumer, &c.

B 12°. The impersonals, as il appartient, il convient, il sied bien, il dépend, il plaît, &c. il est, followed by an adnoun, and c'est, by a noun, require the preposition de before the infinitive: as,

Il appartient aux pères de châtier leurs enfans; It belongs to fathers to chastise their children.

Il ne lui convient point de prendre des airs; It does not become him or her to take airs.

Il leur sied bien de se conduire ainsi; It becomes them well to behave thus.

Il dépend de lui de vous donner cet emploi; It depends on him to appoint you to that employment.

C Vous plaît-il de vous arrêter? Do you choose to stop?

Il n'est pas décent à un juge de montrer de la partialité; It does not behove a judge to betray any partiality.

Il est dangereux dans Londres de se retirer de nuit; It is dangerous in London to walk home at night.

Est-il sensé de laisser détruire un ouvrage si utile? Is it prudent to let such a useful work be destroyed?

C'est le propre de la vertu de nous charmer; It is the property of virtue to charm us.

When c'est comes before a noun, followed by an infinitive, it requires que besides de, before the infinitive.—And when c'est comes before an infinitive, followed by a noun, and another infinitive, it will have no preposition before the first infinitive, and que de before the second: as,

C'est sagesse que d'avouer sa faute; It is wisdom to own one's fault.

C'est être fou que de croire ce qui n'est pas concevable;

They, or these, are mad, who believe what is not conceivable.

13°. The impersonal il y a, and c'est à vous, c'est à lui, &c. require the preposition à before the infinitive: as,

Il y a du plaisir à chasser, or à la chasse ;

There is a pleasure in hunting.

C'est à vous à lui en parler ;

It is your business to speak to him, or her, of it.

Ce n'est pas à vous à me commander ; You are not to command me.

¶ Instances occur in good writers of de being used instead of à after c'est à . . . ; as,

C'est à vous de régler nos destins ; It belongs to you to decide our fate.

C'est à la renommée d'exercer son empire sur votre nom ; It belongs to fame to exercise her empire on your name.]

14°. These terms of comparison require que de before the next infinitive.

plus,	more.	mieux,	better.	si peu,	so little.	B
moins,	less.	plutôt,	rather.	tant,	so much.
à moins,	unless.	si,	so.	tel,	such like : as,

Etudiez plutôt que de perdre votre temps ;

Study rather than lose your time.

Rien ne lui plaît tant que d'apprendre le malheur des autres, &c.

Nothing pleases him so much as to hear of others' misfortune.

Avertir to warn, to give notice, and charger to charge with, being attended by two nouns, govern the first relation (or state) of the person, and the second of the thing, and require the infinitive with de ; as,

Avertir quelqu'un de quelque chose, or de faire son devoir ;

To give one notice of something, to forewarn him to do his duty.

Défendre to forbid, permettre to permit, to allow, and refuser, to deny, to refuse, govern the first relation of the thing, and the third of the person ; and require the infinitive with de : as,

Je vous permets ou défends de le faire ; I permit, or forbid you to do it.

Refuser quelque chose à quelqu'un ; To deny somebody something.

Défendre is also construed with que and the subjunctive.

Demander requires the infinitive with à, when it signifies only asking or demanding : but in the sense of desiring, begging, &c. it requires de.—It is also better to use prier, in this sense, instead of demander : as, Il demande à manger, ou à aller se promener ; He asks to eat, or to go a walking. Il m'a demandé ou prié de lui rendre ce service-là ; He desired me, begged of me, to do him that piece of service.

Again, Prier governs the first relation of the person and the second of the thing : as, Prier quelqu'un d'une chose ; To beg a thing of one.

Insulter governs the first relation when it is a person, or a pronoun personal, and the third when it is a thing : as, insulter quelqu'un : to insult, abuse, affront one. Insulter à la misère d'autrui ; to insult another's misfortune.—We likewise elegantly say, insulter aux misérables ; to insult the unfortunate.

Mériter, to deserve, requires either the infinitive with de, or the subjunctive with que.—It is the same with the adverbs digne and indigne : as,

Il mérite d'être préféré, ou qu'on le préfère ; He desires to be preferred.

Il est indigne, or Il ne mérite pas qu'on lui rende service ;

He does not deserve that one shall do him any service.

Prendre garde, to take care, which requires the second state in English, requires the third in French, and the infinitive with de, or the subjunctive with que ; as,

Prenez garde à cela ;

Take care of that.

Prenez garde de tomber ;

Beware of falling, or take care you do not fall, or not to fall.

Prenez garde qu'il ne fasse cela ; Take care lest he should do that.

A But note, that the French use no negative after prendre garde, when the next verb is in the infinitive.

Persuader, to persuade, attended by one noun only, governs it in the first state: as, persuader quelqu'un, to persuade one; persuader quelque chose, to persuade one thing. When it is attended by two nouns, it governs the first state of the thing, and the third of the person; as, persuader une chose à quelqu'un; to persuade one to something. And when it is followed by a verb, it requires it in the infinitive with de: as also does dissuader to dissuade, and détourner to deter; but these two always govern the first state of the person, and the second of the thing: as, dissuader quelqu'un de quelque chose, to dissuade one from a thing; le détourner de la faire, to deter him from doing it.

Instruire to instruct, governs the first state of the person, and the second of the thing: as instruire quelqu'un d'une chose, to instruct one: but enseigner, apprendre, montrer, (to teach, learn, show), govern the third state of the person: as, enseigner la Grammaire à quelqu'un, to teach one Grammar.

B Lastly, Verbs and Adnouns, governing the Genitive, Dative, and Ablative in Latin, commonly govern the second and third state of the noun in French: as, Meminisse alicujus rei, to remember a thing; se souvenir d'une chose. Résister alicui, to resist one; résister à quelqu'un. Vesci pane & aqua, to live upon bread and water, vivre de pain & d'eau.

15°. The prepositions de and à construed with the infinitive, answer to the English preposition to, used also before verbs; and it ought to have been observed, that it is the foregoing verb, or noun, that determines which of the two must be used. But there remains another preposition (pour), likewise answering to to, and of the same use, before verbs, and which denotes the Design or End of, or Reason for, doing something. Therefore,

C Whenever the particle to coming before an infinitive, can as well be rendered by for to, in order to, with a design to, with the infinitive, or to the end that, or only that, with the indicative, or subjunctive, or for with the gerund, it must be rendered into French by pour: as likewise the French for these expressions, for to, in order to, with a design to, to the end that, and for with a gerund, is pour, or afin de with the infinitive, or afin que with the subjunctive; as,

Il l'a fait pour me faire de la peine; He did it to make me uneasy.

Il a été pendu pour avoir volé sur le grand chemin;

He was hanged for robbing upon the highway.

Afin d'obtenir cette grâce; in order to obtain that favour.

D Afin que je lui réponde; that I may answer his letter.

16°. The verb coming after trop, assez, suffisamment, suffisant, and suffire, always requires the preposition pour before it: as, Il est trop sensé pour faire cela; He has too much sense to do that.

Elle n'est pas assez riche pour épouser un Duc;

She is not rich enough to marry a Duke.

Le mérite ne suffit pas pour réussir; Merit is not enough to thrive.

Mind then well the relations which the English particles of, from, with, in, by, for, and to, have to these three French ones, de, à, pour.

The gerund (ing) with the prepositions of, from, with, (or the infinitive A that can be resolved by any of these prepositions and the gerund) is rendered by the infinitive with de.—The English gerund, with the prepositions in and to (or the infinitive that can be resolved after that manner) is rendered by the infinitive with à.—And the preposition for with the gerund (or the infinitive so resolved), by the infinitive with pour. See the examples above.—The English gerund, with the prepositions in and by, is also rendered in French by the gerund, with the preposition en: as, by doing that, or in doing that, en faisant cela.

Moreover observe, 1st, that pour is never used in French with a gerund as in English, but always with the infinitive.

2dly, That English gerunds, construed with for, are rendered in French by the compound of the present of the infinitive, or by a noun: as, Il a été pendu pour avoir volé or pour vol; He has been hanged for robbing: the noun denoting the action itself, and the compound tense the time of the action, which is past.

3dly, That these three prepositions, de, à, pour, are not always put so immediately before verbs, as in English, but some word or words may be put between, as pronouns, and some adverbs, which must come immediately before the verb: as, B

Pour vous donner; To give you.
Pour mieux répondre; To answer better.

4thly, That they are also sometimes used before the infinitive, without any previous noun, or verb, that determine them, to wit, in the beginning of a sentence; as,

De vous dire comment cela est arrivé, c'est ce que je ne puis;
 To tell you how that did happen, that I cannot, or it is what I cannot.

In which construction, de prepares the mind to a greater attention to what one is going to say.

à not only comes in the beginning of a sentence, but is also construed with verbs that require de: but then à falls under some of the relations of disposition and inclination, which (as we shall see in the chapter of prepositions) are denoted by that particle: and à thus used, can be resolved in English by by, or with, and a gerund: or if, and the indicative; as,

A en juger par les apparences; If we may judge by appearances, or probabilities.

A vivre comme il fait, il n'ira pas loin; If he lives at that rate he will not live long.

A l'entendre, on diroit que, or On diroit, à l'entendre, que, &c.
 To hear him speak, or by hearing him speak, one would say that, &c.

As for pour, before an infinitive, in the beginning of a sentence, it always keeps its property of denoting the Design, End, or Cause of doing something; as,

Pour avoir pris tant de peines, il n'en est pas mieux récompensé;
 For taking so much pains, he is not the better rewarded for it;

The infinitive can also begin the sentence without any preposition at all before it, which happens when one speaks sentimentously, or is laying down general maxims: as,

Pouvoir vivre avec soi même, & savoir vivre avec les autres, c'est la grande science de la vie; To be able to live with oneself, and to know how to live with others, is the great science of life.

Lastly, Whenever in a sentence two verbs come together, joined by the enclitic &, great care must be taken (especially if they govern different relations and particles) to give to each of them the respective relation or particle which it requires: as in placing a noun after the first verb, and before the second a pronoun in that state, which it requires; or in repeating the pronoun before each verb. D

¶ Therefore this English sentence,

That pleased and charmed the Prince, is translated thus in French:

Cela plut au Prince & le charma, not Cela plut & charma, &c. because we say, Charmer quelqu'un & plaire à quelqu'un. It is the same with these sentences: I will, and bind myself to fulfil my promise; Je veux accomplir ma promesse, & Je promets de le faire, not Je veux & promets, &c. because vouloir requires no preposition, and promettre requires de.

He made much of his son, and gave him his blessing;

Il fit des caresses à son fils, & lui donna sa bénédiction; not il fit . . . & donna à son fils; because, through the verbs have the same regimen, yet each must be attended by its relation.

A It is the same with two prepositions; each must have its separate regimen expressed or understood; and the understood regimen is always that of the latter preposition: as,

The one sat above, and the other below, me; L'un s'assit au-dessus de moi, & l'autre au-dessous; so regular and nice the French language is in its construction.]

N. B. In a collection of Phrases and Dialogues lately published by Mr. Des Carrieres, the verbs mentioned page 303 to 318 are instanced with their respective regimens.]

17°. The Gerund is always indeclinable; therefore we say in both genders and numbers,

Un homme craignant Dieu; a man fearing God.

Une femme craignant Dieu; a woman fearing God.

Des gens craignant Dieu; people fearing God.

B Except only in some expressions of the Law-style, as la rendante compte (a woman giving an account at law of the money which she was accountable for). Nos gens tenants nos Cours de Parlement (style of Proclamation, to say only Our parliaments).

It is a great Quære among French Grammarians, whether the expressions of these sentences are gerunds, or only verbal adnouns.

Une réquete tendante à ce que, &c.

A petition tending to what, &c.

Une fille majeure usante et jouissante de ses droits;

A young woman of age enjoying her rights.

Ces étoffes ne sont pas approchantes de celles que je vis hier;

These stuffs are not like those I saw yesterday.

Son humeur est tellement répugnante à la mienne, que, &c.

His or her temper is so repugnant to mine, that, &c.

C La campagne est pleine de troupeaux qui paissent errans à leur gré, & bondissant sur l'herbe; The country is full of grazing cattle, wandering up and down, and skipping in the grass.

It is very indifferent what appellation to give to these derivatives (and others from verbs neuter), so they are known, and the learner is informed, that use will have them govern the same relation as the verbs from which they are derived, and besides agree, in gender and number, with the term to which they refer. I will insert a list of them in the Appendix: but the means to know whether they are gerunds or adnouns, is to see if they can be construed with the verb subst. to be: in which case they are adnouns, otherwise they are gerunds.

Likewise there are in French a great many words, which are both nouns and gerunds; as appelant, assiégeant, conquérant, étudiant, savant, ignorant, habitant, négociant, suppliant, &c. but their construction has no difficulty; they are used like nouns, and they govern no state, as they do when used as gerunds.

A great many participles are also used substantively, as allié, blessé, convié, damné, &c. &c. You will find complete lists of them in the Appendix.

D We often express with a conjunction and a tense of the indicative what is expressed with a gerund in other languages, in order to avoid the ambiguity that may arise from the gerund being indeclinable. Thus, instead of saying, Je les ai rencontrés courant la poste, I met them riding post, we say,

Je les ai rencontrés qui couroient la poste, because courant may as well refer to the subject je, as to the object les. Il a été chez elles, & il les a trouvées qui buvoient & mangeoient, instead of buvant & mangeant; He has been to their house, and found them eating and drinking.

The gerund sometimes takes the preposition en before it, as A in English in and by, and can be resolved by the conjunctions when, whilst, and as, with a tense of the indicative: as,

Je l'ai vu en passant; I saw him by the way, or as I passed by.

When the pronoun en meets with a gerund, it is put after it, and not before, as it might, if the gerund was resolved by a tense of the indicative, in order to avoid the equivocation, that may be occasioned by en pronoun, and en preposition: as,

Il le pria d'instruire son fils, voulant en faire un savant; or comme il en vouloit faire, or comme il vouloit en faire un savant; He desired him to instruct his son, as he would make a learned man of him.

The English gerund (ing) so much used with the particles a, an, the, or nothing before it, or with of after, is rendered B into French by a noun, or by a pronoun and a verb, or an infinitive when it comes after a verb with a or an: as,

The impoverishing of the body is the enriching of the soul;

L'appauvrissement du corps est ce qui enrichit l'âme.

He is gone a walking; Il est allé se promener.

A virtuous man does not leave off doing good, but when he gives over living;

L'homme vertueux ne cesse de faire du bien qu'en cessant de vivre.

His perfect knowledge of the French Tongue is the reason of his being chosen for that embassy;

La connoissance parfaite qu'il a de la langue Française, est C la raison pourquoy on l'a choisi pour cette ambassade.

Observe, besides, that the gerund with the verb substantive to be is rendered into French by the verb of the gerund, in the tense of the verb substantive: as,

He is dancing, Il danse; I was reading, Je lisois, &c.

¶ Mr. Holder, in his illustration of Chambaud's Grammar, has taxed him with error, for not having distinguished the Participle present from the Gerund.

Without meaning the least offence to Mr. H. whose merit is readily acknowledged, as his corrections are altogether highly commendable, it may be observed, that he has espoused the wrong side of the question. His principal authority is Restaut, one of those antiquated grammarians, who, fettered with the prejudices of school, dare not soar higher, and are anxious to chalk the syntax of all languages after that of the Latin, without any regard D to the peculiar genius of each.

This vindication of Chambaud, who himself has followed Girard, is grounded upon the opinion of Wailly, who is himself a professional man in Latin, and whose French Grammar has superseded that of Restaut in Paris, near thirty years, after receiving the sanction of the University of Paris; a class of men conversant in Latin, who have adopted the book, though the Participle present is missing in it.

It remains to prove that the opinion of Chambaud and Wailly is justifiable.

The Participle is so called, because it partakes of the nature of both the verb and the adjective; that is, verb-like, it governs; and adjective-like, it is declinable, and may be the predicate of a sentence; but the French Gerund, though possessing the first of the properties, viz. that of governing, does not now enjoy the others, as it did formerly; it therefore cannot be styled a Participle.

The Gerund is so called, because it is the vicegerent of a verb, always subordinate to the principal verb of the sentence, having the same regimen

A with its primitive verb, and standing, as it were, for a subject together with its attribute.

The Gerund serves to express, 1°. The state, chiefly of the subject, sometimes of the object of an action.

2°. The motive or ground of a subject for acting.

3°. The circumstance, manner, or means of an action.

N. B. The subject of an action is always a noun or pronoun governing a verb; as the object is a noun or pronoun governed by a verb. The object to which a Gerund may refer, must be governed without the assistance of any preposition.

In its two first capacities, the Gerund answers to the questions why? how? and may be resolved, either by the relative conjunctive qui, or the conjunctions comme, parce que, &c. prefixed to a verb in the indicative mood.

B In its third capacity, it answers to the questions when? how? and may be resolved by the conjunctions lorsque, pendant que, prefixed to a verb in the indicative mood.

1°. EXAMPLE of Gerunds expressing the state of a subject and object.

Albert Valstein fut naturellement fort sobre; ne dormant presque point, travaillant toujours, supportant patiemment le froid & la faim, &c. “Albert Valstein was naturally very sober; taking almost no sleep, being always at work, patiently enduring cold and hunger, &c.” Here the state of Valstein is described; the gerunds dormant, &c. may be resolved by comme il dormoit, &c. or qui dormoit, &c. the imperfect of their respective verbs, because fut, the principal verb of the sentence, denotes a time past.

Cette Dame est d'un excellent caractère; soignant les malades, faisant des aumones, obligeant toujours quand elle le peut. “This lady is of an excellent temper; attending the sick, giving alms, always obliging when she has it in her power.” Here the disposition of the Lady is described; the gerunds may be resolved by comme elle soigne, &c. the present tense of their respective verbs, because est, the principal verb, denotes the present time.

C Combien voyons-nous de gens, qui connoissant le prix du temps, le perdent mal à propos! “How many people we see, who knowing the value of time, yet waste it to no purpose!” Here connoissant may be resolved quoiqu'ils connoissent; or the second verb perdent may be accompanied with the conjunction cependant.

On les trouve toujours buvant & mangeant; “We always find them eating and drinking.” Je les ai trouvés buvant & mangeant; “I found them eating and drinking.” Here the gerunds buvant and mangeant describe the state of the object, and may be resolved by qui boivent & mangent, or qui buvoient & mangeoient, according to the tense of the principal verb to which they are subordinate.

2°. EXAMPLES of Gerunds expressing the motive or ground for acting.

D In that capacity the Gerund always refers to the subject of the sentence.

Il envoie son fils à Cambridge, voulant en faire un bon mathématicien;
Il a envoyé sent his son to Cambridge, wishing to make a good mathematician of him.” The Gerund (supposing he is still there) } voulant expresses the motive of his sending, &c.; it may be resolved by parce qu'il veut, the present tense, because the principal verb denotes a time present or future.
Il enverra

But in this phrase,
Il a envoyé sent his son to Cambridge, wishing to make,” &c. “He sent or had sent his son to Cambridge, wishing to make,” &c. The Gerund voulant may be resolved by parce qu'il vouloit, the imperfect tense, because the principal verb denotes a time past
Il envoya
Il avoit envoyé

Two or more gerunds employed together, must be joined, with a conjunction before the last: as, Craignant d'un côté d'être abandonné, & de l'autre s'ennuyant d'entretenir tant de troupes à ses dépens, il se sauva dans les montagnes; "Fearing, on one hand, to be deserted, and being tired, on the other, to keep so many men in his pay, he fled to the mountains."

The gerunds past are formed with the assistance of the helping gerunds ayant and étant; as,

La ville ayant été prise & abandonnée au pillage, le soldat y fit un immense butin; "The town having been taken and delivered up to plunder, the soldiers made an immense booty." Here ayant & été does for the two participles prise and abandonnée, because both are used affirmatively; but when one is used affirmatively and the other negatively, or vice versâ, the gerund must be repeated; as, La ville n'ayant pas voulu se rendre, mais ayant été prise d'assaut, &c.

In the two capacities above-mentioned, the French gerund, it is true, performs the same office as the participle present of the Latin: but, for the reasons already stated, it does not follow that it should go by the same name; no more than the French participle has a right to assume the denomination of the Latin supine, though it perform its part, when taken actively. B 3°. EXAMPLES of Gerunds expressing the circumstance, manner, or means of an action.

In that capacity the gerund always refers to the subject of the sentence, performing the same office as the gerund in do of the Latin, and having the import of a substantive, since it is, or may always be, preceded by the preposition en, with which it forms an adverbial phrase. (N. B. The other gerunds of the Latin, viz. in di and dum, have their offices performed by the French infinitive, preceded by de or pour.)

Je l'ai rencontré en allant à la campagne: "I met him in going into the country." Je lirai sa lettre en me promenant: "I shall read his letter when I take a walk." In these phrases the gerund expresses the circumstance of the action: En allant may be resolved by Comme j'allois, or lorsque j'allois: En me promenant may be resolved by quand je me promenerai, or pendant que je me promenerai. C

Vous l'avez fait en courant: "You have done it running." Il vous a dit la vérité, tout en riant: "He spoke the truth to you, though in a pleasant manner." In these phrases the gerund expresses the manner of the action: En courant may be resolved by comme or lorsque vous couriez: Tout en riant may be resolved by quoiqu'il rît.

On l'a guéri d'un vomissement invétéré, en lui faisant prendre tous les jours deux cuillerées de vin d'Espagne: "He has been cured of an inveterate vomiting, by taking two spoonfuls of Spanish wine every day." Here the gerund en faisant expresses the means employed to cure him, and be resolved by parce qu'on lui a fait prendre, &c.

If the principal verb were in the future tense, on le guérira; or in the conditional, on le guériroit, the gerund would be resolved by si on lui fait, or si on lui faisoit prendre, on account of the condition implied.

From the examples above stated, it plainly appears that the gerund, in any capacity, may be resolved nearly in the same manner, viz. by a conjunction and a verb: Now the difference of the conjunction is not a plea to give the gerund different denominations; therefore there is no impropriety in giving it but one name, provided it may equally well answer the purpose. D

Some Grammarians who reckon two sorts of participles in French, the active and the passive, do not seem more successful. They call our gerund the participle active, which, it is true, expresses an action; but, as has just been shown, cannot be denominated a participle. As to their participle passive, they confess that it is mostly used actively; why then should its denomination be confined to one voice only?

It may therefore be fairly inferred, that in French there is but one participle both nominally and really; which serves for the past as well as present time, in both the active and passive voice. This perhaps may be ascribed to a poverty of our language, which, however, does not militate against its clearness and perspicuity. Its deficiency is easily made up with the assistance of some words, and the language is not injured by it, since a multiplicity of beings is saved, which in the end would prove useless, and be deemed merely a luxury of expression.

A 18°. Participles are mere adnouns, sometimes construed with a subject, to make short accidental sentences, Cela dit, il s'en alla; After saying this, he went away; but most times serving to form the compound tenses of verbs. When they meet with nouns, they always agree with them in number and gender: as;

un homme estimé,	{	a man es- teemed.	une femme estimée,	}	a woman esteemed.
des gens estimés,	{	people es- teemed.	des nations estimées,	}	nations esteemed.

B When they are part of a tense compound, they are sometimes declinable, and sometimes indeclinable, according to the following observations:

1st, The participle is declinable, when it comes after the verb être considered only as a verb substantive, or (what is the same) when the participle is a predicate, that is, an adnoun affirmed of the subject; as,

Il est perdu,	Elle est perdue;	He or She, or It is lost.
Ils sont perdus,	Elle sont perdues;	They are lost. [to dance.
Il est ravi,	Elle est ravie de danser;	He, or She is overjoyed
Elle a été ravie de vous voir;		She has been charmed to see you.

C ¶ N.B. The participle été is always indeclinable, as also pu and fallu; voulu is very seldom declined.]

2dly, When the tense compound, either of avoir or être, is preceded by a pronoun relative in the fourth state, governed as an object, such as que, le, la, les, me, te, se, nous, vous, or by a noun with a pronoun interrogative: as,

Les peines que mes amis ont prises;
The trouble which my friends have taken.
Les peines qu'ils se sont données;
The trouble which they gave themselves.
Quelles peines a-t-il prises (or) s'est-il données?
What trouble did he take, or give himself?

D Ses sœurs ont bien du mérite, je les ai toujours estimées;
His sisters are very deserving, I have always esteemed them.
Nous nous sommes trompés; We are mistaken (Men speak).
Elles s'étoient trompées; They were mistaken (said of women).

But the participle is indeclinable, 1st, when the pronoun is governed of a verb coming after the tense compound, and not of the tense compound: as,

Les montres qu'il a fait faire, il ne les a pas voulu payer;
The watches which he ordered to be made, he would not pay for them.

Fait and voulu do not agree with the pronouns que and les, A relating to les montres, because these pronouns are not governed of the compound tenses il a fait, il a voulu, but by the following verbs faire and payer.

2dly, When it is governed in the third state expressing the end of the verb, and not in the fourth, expressing its object.

We say: Elle s'est tuée; She has killed herself; making the participle agree with the pronoun se, governed of the tense compound, as its object. But we say:

Elle s'est donné la mort, not s'est donnée; She put herself to death; because the tense compound does not govern se as its object, but la mort; and se is only the end, in the third state B (sibi).

The pronoun is not governed of the tense compound in these four cases: 1st, When the verb faire, serving to form the compound tense, signifies to cease, to bespeak, to order, as in the aforesaid example.

Les montres qu'il a fait faire; The watches which he ordered to be made.

2dly, With verbs impersonal: as, Les tumultes qu'il a fallu appaiser; the riots which it was necessary to quell; wherein que is governed of appaiser, not of il fallu.

3dly, With the participle pu from pouvoir, du from devoir, voulu from vouloir, and perhaps some others, after which there is an infinitive understood: as,

Il a dit toutes les raisons qu'il a voulu; He has said all the reasons that he would; dire being understood after voulu.

Ménage, Corneille, and l'Abbé Desmarais (the Grammar of the French Academy) make three more exceptions to the general rule; pretending, that C when the subject of the verb comes after it, or when the pronoun cela is the subject, whether it comes before or after the verb, or when the compound tense is followed by either a noun or adnoun, which it governs, together with the pronoun, the participle is indeclinable, and therefore will have writers say, Les peines qu'ont pris mes amis, or que se sont donné mes amis.

Les peines que m'a donné cette affaire, or que cela m'a causé.

Le commerce l'a rendu puissante; Trade made it powerful.

Les Anglois se sont rendu maîtres de la mer; The English have made themselves masters of the sea.

But good writers now keep to the general rule, of making the participle agree with the foregoing pronoun, except only when it is not governed of the compound tense, or is in the third state.

Therefore we should say:—Les peines qu'ont prises.—Les peines que m'a D données.—L'a rendue puissante.—Se sont rendus maîtres de la mer.

CHAP. VI.

Of VERBS Impersonal.

¶ STRICTLY speaking there is no such thing as a Verb Impersonal, except in the infinitive mood; however, according to the trite language of Grammarians, such may be so called, in the indicative and subjunctive (see p. 130); as are not conjugated with the personal pronouns, je, I; tu, thou; il, he, it,

A elle, she, it, &c. but only with this pronoun, il it, impersonal, that is, referring to no antecedent; as in these phrases:

Il tonne, it thunders; il neigeoit, it snowed; il pleuvra, it will rain; (see p. 187.) wherein no antecedent appears, unless you suppose that such words le ciel, the sky; le temps, the weather, may be understood. Therefore a verb is known to be impersonal, when no substantive can be prefixed to it instead of il.

Il is also impersonal in phrases like this: Il s'est passé bien des choses; which has the same import as, Bien des choses se sont passées; Many things have happened. The virtual subject of the verb impersonal s'est passée, is bien des choses; hence may be inferred that the impersonal pronoun il, far from referring to an antecedent, rather refers to a consequent term.

B Even il has been reputed by judicious authors a mere article, belonging to a substantive expressed or understood, and following the verb when it is expressed, as in il est jour (il jour est, or le jour est).

These phrases, il pleut, il tonne, may be resolved in the same manner, viz. il pluie est, or la pluie est; (il pleut, comprehending in itself the subject, with the affirmative and attribute). (Gram. de P. R.)

Verbs Impersonal, in all their tenses, are used in the third person singular; hence they are of the same tribe as those used with the pronoun indeterminate on; the only difference is that they present something more general and indeterminate; as,

Il se trouve des gens, or On trouve des gens; People are found. (See the latter end of this Chapter.)

§ I. Of the Impersonal Il est, il étoit, &c.

C This impersonal, and the demonstrative c'est, are of very extensive use in French, but cannot be used indiscriminately the one for the other; thus, in order to know how to employ them properly, make the following observations:

¶ The English Impersonal, it is, is used in sentences, the signification of which is sometimes absolute and indeterminate, sometimes relative and determinate. In the latter case, c'est must always be used; in the former, il est is more proper, unless you introduce a noun, which then determines the sense, and requires the use of c'est; instances will elucidate the matter.

This English phrase, It is in vain you endeavour to corrupt him, may be rendered into French two ways.

1^o. C'est en vain que vous cherchez à le corrompre, (means something positive, an actual endeavour; and for this reason, the verb cherchez is in the indicative.)

D 2^o. Il est inutile que vous cherchiez à le corrompre, (means something uncertain, an intended endeavour; and for this reason, the verb cherchiez is in the subjunctive.) This latter phrase rather signifies, It is in vain you would endeavour, &c.

From the above examples it appears that il est cannot be used for c'est, without altering the sense of the phrase.

On the contrary, c'est, accompanied with a noun, may perform the office of il est, still preserving its full import.

For instance, this phrase; Il est fâcheux que son projet n'ait pas réussi; It is grievous that his project did not succeed;

May be equally well, and still better rendered by this: C'est une chose fâcheuse que son projet n'ait pas réussi. Both phrases have the same import, since que in either govern the same mood; but the latter, as will be seen hereafter, is more agreeable to the genius of the French, and receives from the Gallicism c'est . . . que a degree of energy.

Therefore in the doubt which way the English Impersonal it is, followed A by an adnoun, must be rendered into French, there can be no impropriety in using c'est, provided you introduce a noun, with which the adnoun will be construed, as in the last instance.]

¶ Il est is construed, 1^o, with nouns denoting time; as, Quelle heure est-il? What o'clock is it? Il est deux heures; It is two o'clock.

Quelle heure croyez-vous qu'il soit? What o'clock do you think it is? Il est minuit; It is twelve (at night). Est-il si tard que cela? Is it so late? Je ne croyois pas qu'il fût si tard; I did not think it was so late.

Quelle heure étoit-il quand vous êtes parti? At what o'clock B did you set off? Il étoit neuf heures; It was nine.

Il est jour; It is day-light.—Il est nuit; It is dark.

Il est heure de diner; It is dinner-time.—Il est heure de se retirer; It is time to go home.

Il est temps de partir; It is time to set out. Il sera tard quand nous arriverons à Douvres; It will be late when we reach Dover.

N. B. In the above application of il est, the noun takes no article; the reason is obvious; il is itself an article, as has been said.]

¶ 2^o. Il est is also construed with an adnoun, unaccompanied with a noun, but followed by either ne or que, and a subsequent sentence explicative of the adnoun; as,

Il est bien fâcheux d'être malade, & de n'avoir point d'argent; It is a very sad thing to be sick, and have no money.

Il est bon de se tenir sur ses gardes; It is prudent to stand upon one's guard

The above phrases present something general and sententious; but when particularized, they must be construed with que instead of de: as,

Il est fâcheux que cela soit arrivé; It is sorrowful that such D a thing has happened.

Il est bon que vous vous teniez sur vos gardes; It is prudent for you to stand upon your guard.

Il est bien fâcheux que vous soyez malade, & que vous n'ayez point d'argent: It is a very sad thing for you to be sick, and have no money. [Sometimes you may say, as in English, Il est bien fâcheux pour vous d'être, &c. See the Impersonals p. 297 and 314.]

A ¶ 3°. Il est, in all its tenses, is also construed with prepositions: For instance,

With à, to express probability; as,

Il est à croire que cela arrivera; It may be thought that this will happen.

Il étoit à présumer que cela seroit ainsi; It was presumable that it would be so.

In this acceptation il est is elegantly used for il y a, (See page 338, A.)

With de, to express duty, obligation; as,

Il est de la générosité de pardonner; It behoves a generous B soul to forgive.

Il est du devoir d'un bon citoyen de défendre sa patrie; A good citizen ought to defend his native country.

With en, to express ability, character; as,

Il n'est pas en moi de chercher à nuire; It is not in my character to be hurtful.

Il n'étoit pas en lui de le faire; He had not it in his power to do so.

S'il est en votre pouvoir; If you have it in your power.

Il est en son pouvoir de vous obliger; He has it in his power to oblige you.]

C ¶ 4°. Il est construed with the particle, or rather the supplying pronoun en, prefixed to the verb, implies sometimes contingency; as,

On lui a intenté un procès, & il n'en a rien été; An action has been brought against him, which had no fatal consequence.

Quand il l'auroit maltraité, or S'il l'avoit maltraité, qu'en seroit-il? il n'en seroit rien; Though, or if he had ill-treated him, what would be the consequence? nothing at all.

Il en sera ce qu'il plaira à Dieu; It will happen as it pleases God.

D Il en sera de cette affaire ce qu'il plaira aux ministres; It will be with this affair as the ministers please.

Sometimes il en est implies comparison, then the preposition de (in English with) must be prefixed both to the noun compared and the noun of similitude; as,

Il en est de la Poésie comme de la Peinture; It is with Poetry as with Painting.

Il en sera du vôtre comme du mien; It will be with yours as with mine.]

Of the pretended Impersonal, or rather the Verb Demonstrative c'est, A c'étoit, &c.

¶ Mr. Holder has censured Chambaud pretty severely, for "having," said he, "very incautiously joined the personal applications of c'est, to its impersonal ones." This gentleman's animadversion seems rather incautious. With a little more attention to the nature of ce, and to the double acceptance of the English impersonal, it is, he might, perhaps, have come nearer to the point, by giving a general verdict against the impersonality of c'est. In this respect he would have agreed with the French Academy and our best grammarians, who do not reckon c'est a verb impersonal.

In effect, there is a material difference between il est and c'est. The former is mostly construed with an adnoun, or with a substantive taken adjectively, and is generally followed by an explicative sentence: the latter is generally construed with a noun, or with a verb in the infinitive, that is, used substantively, and may make a complete sentence. (See the following pages.)

If, therefore, there be already difficulty enough in defending the impersonality of il est, since in most of the examples above stated it has a great similarity to on, being in some measure its vicegerent; there is still no less possibility to attribute impersonality to a verb depending on a true pronoun, and such is the case with c'est. B

What may have caused the mistake, is perhaps the verb être being used in the third person singular; but a pronoun singular cannot govern a verb in another person.

Sometimes, it is true, the third person plural is used with ce (as will be seen hereafter); but the first and second persons plural cannot; because the law of harmony may sometimes authorise to alter the number, but never to change the person.]

¶ It has been said in the above examples, that the English Impersonal it is, presents something indeterminate, and for this reason is rendered into French by il est. But when it is presents something determinate, the French, as has been said, to point it out more precisely, make use of their convenient verb demonstrative c'est, which serves to give their sentences sometimes more elegance, at other times more energy. C

For the same reason, of elegance or energy, c'est is also used in some cases wherein, instead of the English impersonal it, a pronoun personal, or even a noun is construed with the verb to be. Hence, perhaps, Mr. Holder's distinction of c'est impersonal from c'est personal, which may hold good, but with respect to the English only.]

¶ N.B. Ce is sometimes an article, sometimes a pronoun demonstrative; in this latter capacity, it may be called pronoun primitive, being, in effect, the root of celui, celle; ceux, celles; ceci, cela. (See p. 264.)

¶ 1°. C'est, in all its tenses, both of the indicative and subjunctive moods, is idiomatically used in French, to point out more precisely an object determinate; as,

C'est là mon livre; This is my book.

C'est aujourd'hui Dimanche; To-day is Sunday. D

C'étoit hier Samedi; Yesterday was Saturday.

C'est demain Lundi; To-morrow is Monday.

C'est Mardi fête; Tuesday is a holiday.

C'est demain congé; To-morrow is a holiday.

N.B. There is a material difference between these two last phrases: C'est demain congé means a holiday as usual; Ce sera demain congé means an accidental holiday.]

A ¶ 2°. Ce in c'est, c'étoit, &c. stands sometimes for the pronoun cela: as,

C'est juste; It is just. C'est vrai; It is true.

C'est très-bien fait; It is very well done.

C'étoit bon autrefois; It was good formerly.

C'est fâcheux; mais c'est votre faute; It is unfortunate, but it is your fault.

C'est beaucoup pour son âge; that is a great deal for his age.

C'est peu de chose; That is very little.

C'est trop; It is too much. C'en est trop; That is too much.

Ce n'est pas trop; It is not too much.

B C'est trop peu d'un; One is too little.

C'étoit beaucoup trop d'un; One is too many C'est assez; That will do. C'en est assez; That is enough.

C'est assez disputer or disputé; That is disputing enough.

C'étoit assez de cette démarche imprudente pour vous perdre; That imprudent step was sufficient to ruin you.

Ce sera autant de fait; That will be so much done.

C'est ce que je pensois; It is or It was what I thought.

C'est être bien hardi; It is very bold.

A moins que ce ne soit en Angleterre; Unless it be in England.

In which phrases, the impersonal it may, strictly speaking, be changed into that. Therefore, whenever this change may take place, it must be translated by ce or cela, not by il.

N. B. Observe that ce may stand for cela with the verb être only; for with other verbs, as in this phrase, Unless it may displease you, ce would be improper, and you must say, à moins que cela ne vous déplaît.]

¶ 3°. C'est, in all its tenses, may serve to design either a person or a thing already mentioned; as,

C'est un modèle de vertu; He or She is a pattern of virtue.

C'est un Evêque; He is a Bishop.

C'est un malade; It is a patient.

D C'est un peintre; It is a painter.

C'est un marchand; It is a merchant.

C'est du pain; It is bread. C'est mon livre; It is my book.

Avez-vous lu le Voyage d'Anacharsis? C'est un ouvrage excellent; Have you read the Travels of Anacharsis? It is an excellent work.

Si vous voulez vous former à l'éloquence, lisez Démosthène & Cicéron; ce sont les deux plus grands orateurs de l'antiquité; If you wish to form yourself for eloquence, read Demosthenes and Tully; they are the two greatest orators among the ancients.

N. B. Observe that in such phrases, c'est, as has been said, always requires A to be followed by a noun, generally accompanied with an article; and when that noun is plural, the verb demonstrative, for harmony's sake, is used in the third person plural. All this implicitly proves (see p. 259, B.) that in phrases construed with c'est, though ce be the ostensible grammatical nominative to est, yet the following noun is the virtual subject of the sentence.]

But in phrases like this: Lisez Démosthène & Cicéron, ils sont très-éloquens; read Demosthenes and Tully, they are very eloquent: ce cannot be used instead of ils, because the verb être is followed by an adjective unaccompanied with a substantive. B

Again: In this phrase, Ce sont autant de soleils (speaking of fixed stars); They are as many suns; autant is used substantively; but it has no article, because it cannot admit of any; whereas, striking it off, you should say, Ce sont des soleils. And in this, Ce sont de bonnes gens; They are good people; there is a noun expressed (gens), taken in a limited sense (page 214.) the article of which has disappeared on account of bonnes coming first.

¶ Here it may not be amiss to remark that such a phrase,—He is a physician—cannot, as some Grammarians give to understand, be indifferently rendered into French by Il est médecin, or C'est un médecin.

The two phrases are materially different; and, in this respect, the demonstrative verb c'est affords to the French a real advantage over the English language.

The first phrase, Il est médecin, answers to this question: What is he? Qu'est ce qu'il est? The substantive médecin is used adjectively, and qualifies the subject il: as such, it takes no article, and admits of no explicative member. C

The second phrase, C'est un médecin, answers to this question: Who is there? Qui est-là? The substantive médecin retains its true force of a substantive, and is preceded by an article: it is the virtual subject of the sentence, and may sometimes be followed by a relative member explicative. The same phrase may sometimes answer to this question: Who is Mr. _____? but the question must be made in French with c'est, viz. Qu'est-ce que c'est que M. _____? as will be seen hereafter.

The same may be said of this phrase, Elle est femme, or C'est une femme; She is a woman. (See p. 219.)

¶ As the French demonstrative verb c'est requires to be followed by a noun; so when the English impersonal it is is followed by a pronoun personal, that pronoun must be, in French, a disjunctive one, that is, a pronoun which, from its nature, may stand for a substantive. Therefore, in such phrases, D

It is I ,	we say,	C'est moi ; not c'est je .
It is thou ,	—	C'est toi ; not c'est tu .
It is he ,	—	C'est lui ; not c'est il .
It is she ,	—	C'est elle .
It is we ,	—	C'est nous .
It is you ,	—	C'est vous .
It is they ,	—	C'est eux ; not c'est ils .
(masc.)	or	Ce sont eux ; not ce sont ils .
It is they ,	—	C'est elles .
(fem.)	or	Ce sont elles .

A N. B. Observe that elle, nous, vous, elles, being both disjunctive and conjunctive, are in such phrases used in their disjunctive capacity.

Observe, also, that it is only in its simple tenses the verb may be plural; for in its compound we say,

C'avoit été eux or elles; it had been they.]

¶ 4°. C'est is sometimes followed by a relative member, which serves either to describe the very substantive announced by c'est, or to account for a preceding sentence; as,

C'est un médecin qui a fait des cures étonnantes; He is a physician who has done wonderful cures.

C'est un ministre en qui le public a la plus grande confiance; He is a minister in whom the public place an unbounded confidence.

C'est un bonheur que tout le monde envie; It is a happiness which every one envies.

C'est la loi qui l'ordonne; It is the law that prescribes it.

C'est le laquais qui a dit cela; It is the footman who said that.

C'est moi qui le crois; It is I who believe it.

C'est vous, Messieurs, qu'il faut remercier; It is you, Gentlemen, who must be thanked.

C'est eux (or) Ce sont eux qui l'ont fait; It is they who have done it, or It was they that did that.

C C'étoit (or) C'étoient les dragons qui ne vouloient pas obéir, It was the dragoons that would not obey.

Ce fut lui qui le fit; It was he that did it.

Ce furent les François qui assiégèrent la place; It was the French that besieged the place.

Ce seront les grenadiers qui feront l'attaque; The grenadiers are to make the attack.

Ce sont vos ancêtres, qui par leurs vertus & leurs belles actions, vous ont mérité la qualité de nobles; ce sont eux qui vous rendent illustres; imitez-les, si vous ne voulez pas dégénérer; It is

D your ancestors, who, by their virtues and great actions, have obtained for you the quality of noblemen; it is they that render you illustrious; imitate them, if you wish not to degenerate.

But the verb c'est must remain singular, when the next substantive or pronoun is preceded by a preposition and followed by the conjunction que; as will be seen presently.]

N. B. When the verb of the relative member is used in its simple tenses, similar tenses must be used for the verb demonstrative; as,

C'est moi qui le fais; It is I that do it. C'étoit moi qui le faisais; It was I that did it. Ce fut moi qui le fis; It was I that did it. Ce sera moi qui le ferai; I shall do it. Ce seroit moi qui le ferois; I would do it. Que ce soit moi qui le fasse.

We may also say, C'est moi qui l'ai fait.—C'est moi qui le fis.—C'est moi qui le fare.

But with the compound of the imperfect. we must say, C'étoit moi qui A l'avois fait; It was I that had done it.]

¶ 5°. C'est, in all its tenses, may also refer to a person or thing yet to be spoken of, and not previously mentioned; then it is followed by the conductive que (see p. 259 and 265,); as,

C'étoit un grand capitaine que César; Cesar was a great captain.

C'est une vertu bien estimable que la patience; Patience is a very estimable virtue.

C'est beaucoup que de savoir commander; It is a great deal to know how to command.

C'est peu de chose que cet homme-là; That man is of very B little consequence.

C'est peu qu'elle le méprise, elle veut encore le ruiner; It is not enough if she despises him, she wishes to ruin him besides.

C'est de cette chose-là que je parle; It is of that thing I am speaking.

Ce n'est pas un mal que d'avoir des envieux; There is no harm in exciting envy.

C'est une sorte de honte que d'être malheureux; It is a kind of shame to be unfortunate.

N. B. The noun which follows c'est, at present is always attended by an C article; however, in old proverbial phrases the article is still left out; as,

C'est pain bénit que d'escroquer un avare; It is nuts to cheat a covetous man.]

C'est ne pas connoître les courtisans, que de compter sur leurs promesses; He who relies on the promises of courtiers, does not know them.

C'est de la bonne ou de la mauvaise éducation que dépend le bonheur ou le malheur de la vie; It is on a good or bad education the happiness or unhappiness of life depends.

C'est de peur d'être injuste ou ingrat, disoit un juge, que je refuse vos présens; It is, said a judge, for fear of being either unjust or ungrateful, I refuse your presents.

Ce sera donc le mois prochain que nous aurons le plaisir de le voir; At last we shall have the pleasure of seeing him the next month. D

Ce sont de bons marins que les Anglois; The English are very good sailors.

But c'est, as has been said before, cannot be made plural in such phrases construed with a preposition; as,

C'est à eux que je l'ai promis; It is to them I have promised it.

C'étoit d'elles que je parlois; It was of them I was speaking.

A Ce sera pour vos frères que j'en enverrai ; It will be for your brothers I will send some.

C'est à vous qu'il convenoit de faire cette démarche ; It was you it became to take this step.

C'est ainsi qu'il parla ; He spoke thus.

C'est alors que je vis ; Then I saw.

In such conductive phrases, as above, c'est and que, strictly speaking, are redundant ; they form a Gallicism, which serves to give the speech more force and energy. The phrases might be worded thus : Il parla ainsi.—Alors je vis.—Je refuse vos présens, de peur, &c.—César étoit un grand capitaine. They would have the same meaning, but not so much energy.]

¶ 6°. C'est, in all its tenses, followed by à and a personal noun or pronoun, is sometimes construed with a verb in the infinite, and then preceded by the prepositions de or à, instead of que ; as,

C'est à vous à faire ; You are to deal.

C'étoit à vous à parler ; You were to speak.

C'étoit à vous de parler ; You should have spoken.

C Quand ce sera à votre frère à jouer ; When your brother is to play

N. B. C'est, in such cases, can be used but for persons, not for things.]

¶ 7°. To the above ways of using the demonstrative c'est, the following must be added.

C'est, in all its tenses, may be immediately followed by de or que governing a verb, and forming an explicative sentence ; as,

Il y a une chose que j'exigé de vous, c'est de l'aller voir, (or) c'est que vous alliez la voir ; There is a thing I require of you, which is to go and see her.

In such phrases the tense of c'est is regulated by that of the preceding verb ; for instance, we say, Il y a une chose que j'aurois exigée de vous. D D'auroit été de l'aller voir, (or) que vous fussiez allé la voir.]

¶ C'est que sometimes forms an elliptical phrase, in which que stands for parce que, because ; as,

C'est que je ne savois pas qu'il fût arrivé ; It is because I did not know that he was arrived.

In this phrase, c'est is mostly used in the present ; sometimes in the imperfect, c'étoit, it was ; but never in the other tenses.

¶ C'est, in its conditional tenses, is also used with que in the sense of quand, though : as,

Donnez-lui quelque chose; ne seroit-ce que, or ne fût-ce que A cinq schellings; Give him something; were it but five shillings.

Vous auriez du lui donner quelque chose; n'auroit-ce été que, or n'eût-ce été que cinq schellings; You should have given him something; had it been only five shillings.

Which phrases may be resolved by Quand ce ne seroit que, though it would only be; Quand ce n'auroit été que, though it would have only been.]

¶ Nor ought this conjunctive phrase, Si ce n'est, to remain unnoticed, in which the verb is never made plural; as,

Tous les jeux y sont défendus, si ce n'est ceux d'exercice & d'adresse; All games are forbidden there, except those of exercise and address.]

¶ This is also the proper place to mention an old elliptical phrase, now obsolete, or confined to the very familiar style only.

N'étoit sa bonne conduite; Were it not for his good conduct (instead of B si ce n'étoit sa bonne conduite.)

N'étoit que, or n'eût été que je suis de vos amis; Were I not, or Had I not been one of your friends (instead of si ce n'étoit que je suis, &c. or Si je n'étois pas de vos amis.)

¶ C'est pourquoi, another conjunctive phrase, is used with all the tenses of verbs in the indicative, but c'est always remains in the present; as,

C'est pourquoi les Romains immolèrent des victimes; Wherefore the Romans sacrificed victims.]

¶ 8°. C'est, like il est, is used in interrogations, but still preserving its relative and determinate character, as,

Est-ce là votre livre? Is that your book?

Sera-ce demain congé? Shall we have a holiday to-morrow?

Est-ce bon? Is it good? Est-ce vrai? Is it true? C

Est-ce un Evêque qui fera la cérémonie? Is a Bishop to perform the ceremony?

Est-ce un médecin qui vous l'a ordonné? Has a physician prescribed it to you?

Est-ce la loi qui l'ordonne? Is it the law that prescribes it?

Est-ce moi qui l'ai dit? Did I say so?

Est-ce toi qui l'as cru? Did you believe it?

Est-ce lui, (or) Est-ce elle qui l'a fait? Is it he, or Is it she who has done it?

Est-ce nous qui parlons? Is it we who speak? D

Est-ce vous, Messieurs, qu'il faut remercier? Is it you, Gentlemen, we must thank?

Est-ce eux, (or) Est-ce elles qui s'engagent? Is it they who engage themselves?

Est-ce les Dragons qui font l'attaque? Do the Dragoons make the attack?

Etoit-ce les Dragons qui ne vouloient pas obéir? Was it the Dragoons who would not obey?

A Fut-ce les Dragons qui ne voulurent pas obéir? Was it, &c.
Sera-ce les Dragons qui feront cette attaque? Are the Dragoons to make that attack?

Seroit-ce les richesses qui pourroient vous rendre heureux, si vous n'en faisiez pas un digne usage? Could riches render you happy if you did not know how to make a worthy use of them?

¶ Good authors use the demonstrative verb interrogatively in the plural, and say,

Sont-ce là vos ouvrages? Are these your works?

Sont-ce les honneurs qui vous flattent? Is it honours that flatter you?

Etoient-ce là vos affaires? Was this your business?

Etoient-ce les Dragons qui ne vouloient pas obéir? Was it the Dragoons, &c.

B Seroit-ce les Anglois qui pourroient commettre une telle injustice? Would Englishmen commit such an injustice?

But furent-ce is never used; nor are the compound tenses.

Est-ce à eux que vous l'avez promis? Have you promised it to them?

Etoit-ce d'elles que vous parliez? Were you speaking of them?

Sera-ce le mois prochain que le Parlement s'assemblera?

Will the Parliament meet next month?

C Est-ce ainsi qu'il parla? Did he speak thus?

Etoit-ce ainsi qu'il parloit? Was he speaking so?

Est-ce à vous à faire? Are you to deal?

Etoit-ce à votre frère à jouer? Was your brother to play?

(It is needless to say that all the above phrases may be used negatively.)

N. B. As for the manner of interrogating with est-ce que (see p. 239).

Est-ce is sometimes preceded by the relative qui, who; and lequel, which; or by que (in the sense of quoi), what; or by quel and a noun; as,

Qui est-ce? Who is that? Qui étoit-ce? Who was there?

A qui est-ce à jouer? Who is to play? De qui est-ce le tour?

Whose turn is it? Pour qui est-ce? For whom is it?

D We say, in the same manner, A qui étoit-ce? De qui étoit-ce? Pour qui étoit ce? and sometimes, A qui sera-ce? Pour qui seroit-ce? But the other tenses are very seldom, if ever, used.

Lequel or Laquelle est-ce? Which is it? Lequel, or Laquelle étoit-ce? Which was it? Lequel, or Laquelle sera-ce? Which will it be? The plural is never used.

Qu'est-ce? What is that? Qu'étoit-ce? What was that?

Que sera-ce, si Que seroit-ce, si Qu'auroit-ce été, si What will it be, if What would be, if What would have been, if Quel homme est-ce? What man is it? Quel homme étoit-ce? A What man was it? Quel ministre ce seroit, si . . . What a minister he would be, if . . .

Quel livre est-ce? What book is it? Quel livre étoit-ce? What book was it?

But such phrases are more generally followed by the relative qui or the conductive que with another phrase; and, what is worth observing, est-ce remains in the present tense: as,

Qui est-ce qui vient? Who is coming?

Qui est-ce qui venoit? Who was coming?

Qui est-ce qui est venu? Who is come?

Qui est-ce qui viendra? Who is to come?

Qui est-ce qui viendrait? Who would come?

In these phrases ce stands for B cette personne.

The answer may be, Pierre, Peter; or more properly C'est Pierre, because the question is asked with the pronoun ce; and the French politeness does not allow a short, rough, and raw answer, consisting of a single word. This answer, C'est Pierre, may be resolved in this manner: Pierre est cette personne qui vient.

Other instances with substantives preceded by articles. Qui est-ce qui frappe? Who knocks there? C'est le facteur; It is the post, viz. Le facteur est cette personne qui frappe. Again, Vous faites tel remède: qui est-ce qui vous l'a ordonné? You use such a remedy: who prescribed it to you? C'est un médecin; it is a physician, viz. Un médecin est celui qui me l'a ordonné.

Qui est-ce que vous demandez? Whom do you want? (que C is a relative.)

A qui est-ce que vous parlez?

Whom do you speak to?

De qui est-ce que vous parlez?

Whom are you speaking of?

Pour qui est-ce que vous parlez?

Whom are you speaking for?

Qu'est-ce que vous faites?

What are you doing?

Qu'est-ce que vous faisiez?

What were you doing?

Qu'est-ce que vous avez fait?

What have you done?

Qu'est-ce que vous ferez?

What will you do?

Qu'est-ce que vous feriez?

What would you do?

In these phrases que is conductive, (see p. 259.)

In these phrases ce stands for cette D chose; the first que stands for quoi; the second is a relative governed by the next verb.

¶ To such phrases the answer may be, for instance; Mon thème, my exercise; or more politely Je fais mon thème; an answer with c'est would border upon crossness

A To find out a reason for this difference, it may not be improper to observe that this question, Qui est-ce qui vient? respects the subject; whereas this, Qu'est-ce que vous faites? respects the object of an action.]

A quoi est-ce que vous vous appliquez?

What do you apply to?

De quoi est-ce que vous vous servez?

What do you make use of?

Avec quoi est-ce que vous le ferez?

With what will you make it?

} In these phrases que is conduc-tive as above.

¶ There is another manner of using c'est interrogatively, viz. qu'est-ce que c'est que vous demandez (see p. 263.); in which the first que stands for quoi, the second is conductive, and the third is the regimen of demandez. That idiomatical reduplication of c'est is, perhaps, to show eagerness, impatience, &c. It seems tolerated only when speaking of things, and seldom, if ever, allowed when speaking of persons: for such a phrase, Qui est-ce que c'est que vous demandez? would be very barbarous French.]

Quelle heure est-ce qui sonne? What is the clock striking Deux heures, two; or better, C'est deux heures; It strikes two.

Quel livre est-ce que vous lisez? What book do you read?
Gil Blas; or rather, Je lis Gil-Blas; I read Gil-Blas.

§ II. Of the Impersonal Il y a, there is, there are.

C 1°. Most ways of speaking, beginning with some, and the verb to be, are expressed in French by the impersonal il y a: as,
Some friends are false; Il y a de faux amis.

Some pains are wholesome; Il y a des douleurs salutaires.

Sometimes also the adnoun is joined to its noun, with the pronoun qui and the verb être: as,

Il y a des douleurs qui sont salutaires.

Il y a des Chrétiens qui sont indignes de ce nom;

Some Christians are unworthy of that name.

Observe, that il y a comes before a noun even of the plural number.

D 2°. The impersonal il y a is besides used to denote a quantity of Time, Space, and Number.

To denote the quantity of time past since an event, the English begin the sentence with a preterite, simple or compound, followed by the noun of time, attended by a pronoun demonstrative before it, or the preposition ago, after; as,

He has been dead these thirty years, or He died thirty years ago.

The French begin with the impersonal il y a; then comes the noun of time, with no pronoun demonstrative, but followed by que; then a noun, or pronoun, expressing the subject, with its verb in the present, unless the sense requires another tense; as Il y a trente ans qu'il est mort; but in transposing the A impersonal, we leave out que, and we say: Il est mort il y a trente ans.

3°. Neither, in asking such questions, do we begin with comment, or comment long, or comment long-temps, but Combien y a-t-il que, then the noun, or pronoun of the subject, with its verb in the present, thus,

Combien y a-t-il qu'il est mort? How long has he been dead?
Combien y a-t-il que vous demeurez à Londres?

How long have you lived at London? How long is it since you lived at London?

The answer must likewise be made with the impersonal, and the noun of time, thus, B

Il y a dix ans, or simply, dix ans: these ten years.

Il y a dix ans qu'il est mort, ou qu'il demeure à Londres;
He has been dead, or He has lived at London these ten years.

Il y a vingt ans qu'il fait la même chose;

He has done the same thing these twenty years.

Il y a vingt ans qu'il a fait, or qu'il fit la même chose;

He has done, or He did the same thing twenty years ago.

These two last instances, very different in the sense which each of them implies, make me think, that though the English always begin these sorts of sentences with a preterite, yet they denote an action past, in a far remote time, by the preposition C ago after the noun of time, without a pronoun demonstrative (which the French express only by a preterite, simple or compound). Whereas they express the same action, by the pronoun demonstrative before the noun of time, sometimes also preceded by the preposition for, when the same action continues still (which the French express by a present tense): as again, •

Il y a vingt ans qu'il voyage par toute l'Europe;

He has been travelling for these twenty years all over Europe

Il y a vingt ans qu'il a voyagé par toute l'Europe;

He has travelled all over Europe twenty years ago. D

Examples of Number and Space.

Il y a trente millions d'âmes en France, il n'y en a que neuf ou dix millions en Angleterre;

There are thirty millions of souls in France, there are but nine or ten in England. [à Paris;

Il y a cent-vingt lieues, ou trois cent soixante milles de Londres
Paris is 120 leagues, or 360 miles distant from London; or,

There are 120 leagues, or 360 miles from London to Paris.

A The Question of Space is asked thus,
Combien y a-t-il de Londres à Paris? How far is Paris from London? naming first the place where one is, or is supposed to come from, which is quite the reverse in English.

The impersonal il est is elegantly used instead of, and in the same sense as, il y a; as, Il est des amitiés véritables, or Il y a des amitiés véritables; There are true friendships.

Il est à craindre, or Il y a à craindre que; It is to be feared that, &c.

Observe, that a noun coming after il y a, and il est, must have one of these particles un, du, de, des, before it, and be followed by the relative qui, if the sentence is compound.

§ III. Of the Impersonal il fait, it is.

B 1°. The Impersonal il fait is used with adnouns, and some few nouns, denoting the disposition of the air and weather, and is englished by it is: as,

C	Il fait	{ beau, or beau temps, chaud, froid, vilain, crotté, jour, nuit, obscur, sombre, du vent, soleil, clair de lune,	}	It is	}	fair, or fine weather, hot weather, cold, ugly, dirty, day-light, night, dark, windy, or the wind blows, the sun shines, the moon shines.
---	----------------	--	---	-------	---	--

2°. The English impersonal it is, construed with an adnoun and a gerund, or with one of these adnouns, good, bad, better, dangerous, followed by a noun of place, is also rendered into French by il fait, followed by an adnoun, with a verb in the infinitive: as,

It is dear living at London; Il fait cher vivre à Londres.

Sometimes the verb is left out in French:

Il fait bon ici; It is good being here.

D § IV. Of the Impersonal il faut.

1°. The impersonal il faut, always requires after it either the subjunctive with que, or the infinitive without any preposition. It denotes the necessity of doing something, and is englished by must, for the present tenses il faut, and qu'il faille, the imperfect il falloit, and the preterite il fallut; by shall for the future, and should for the conditional: and sometimes by the verb to be, though all its tenses, with one of these words necessary, requisite, needful.

In order, therefore, to put into French any English, expressed by must, shall, or should, or by it is, or it was necessary, requisite, needful, one must begin the sentence with a tense of the impersonal il faut que; then the pronoun or noun coming before must, or should, must become the subject of the French verb that comes after il faut que, and is governed in the subjunctive:

The officers must do their duty;

Il faut que les officiers fassent leur devoir.

They must be courageous; Il faut qu'ils soient courageux.

Children should learn every day something by heart;

Il faudroit que les enfans apprissent tous les jours quelque chose par cœur.

2°. Il faut, before an infinitive, denotes the necessity of doing something in general, without specifying who must: then the subject coming before must may be either I or we, he or she, or any body, according to the sense of the speech: as,
Il faut faire cela; One, or we, or you, he, somebody, must do that.

Il faut y aller; I, or you, or we, or somebody, must go there, or thither.

3°. Sometimes also the verb coming after the impersonal is englished by the passive voice, and (as in sentences expressed with the particle on) the noun that follows the verb in French, comes before the particle must in English; and the French infinitive active is made by the passive: as,

Il faut instruire les enfans; Children must be instructed.

All which sentences may equally well be expressed with the subjunctive: as,

Il faut que les enfans soient instruits, Il faut que cela se fasse; or Il faut qu'il, or qu'elle, or qu'on fasse cela, or que nous fassions cela.

4°. Again, The necessity of having something is also denoted by il faut, before the noun of the thing only, without any verb; and il faut, thus construed, is englished by one must have, or something must be had: as,

Il faut de l'argent pour plaider;

One must have money to go to law.

Pour se pousser dans le monde, il faut des amis;

To push one's fortune in the world, one must have friends:

And il faut, thus construed, as also with a pronoun personal between il and faut, denotes one's present want, that must be supplied, and the pronoun personal becomes the subject of must in English: as,

- A Il me faut de l'argent, I must have, or I want money.
Il me faut un chapeau, I must buy a hat.
Il vous faut des livres, You must have, or buy, or get books
Il lui faut un mari, She wants a husband, she must have one.

5°. The impersonal il faut is used absolutely at the end of a sentence, with the pronoun ce qui, or the conjunction comme before it; in which case it denotes Duty and Decency, and is englished by should, and sometimes should do, and should be: as,
Il ne se conduit pas comme il faut; He don't behave as he should.
Faites cela comme il faut; Do that as it should be.

- B Cela n'est pas comme il faut; That is not as it should be.
Il fait ce qu'il faut; He does what he must, or what is requisite.

There is an impersonal, which may be called Reflected, composed of the double pronoun il se, with the third person of any verb active, followed by a noun, with one of the particles de, du, des, before. This impersonal is englished by there is, before a noun, followed by a participle: as,
Il se boit de bon vin en France; There is good wine drank in France.
Il se mange de bonne viande en Angleterre; There is good meat eat in England.

The impersonal Reflected is also construed with the pronoun demonstrative ceci, cela: as,

Cela ne se fait pas ainsi; That is not done so, or in this manner.

Cela se fait par-tout le monde; That is done all over the world.

- But observe, that these ways of speaking may as well be rendered by the particle on: as, On boit de bon vin en France, On fait cela par-tout le monde, &c.

I have sufficiently spoken of the other impersonals in the second part.

CHAP. VII.

Of the FRENCH NEGATIVES.

- § 1. I HAVE already said something of the negatives ne and pas, in treating of pronouns, but have considered them only with respect to the right placing of them with the pronouns conjunctive. I shall in this place consider their construction, as also that of several other negatives used in the French language.

1°. Ne comes (as has been said) after the subject, and immediately before the verb, and pas or point, after the verb, if the tense is simple: as, Je ne sais pas, I know not; and between the auxiliary and the participle, if the tense is compound: as, Je n'ai point su cela, I did not know that.

2°. When the verb is in the present of the infinitive, the two negatives come together before it, after the preposition: as,

Je vous dis de ne pas vous mêler de cela ;

I bid you not to meddle with that.

Pour ne point répéter ce que nous avons déjà dit ;

Not to repeat what we have already said.

A

3°. No is non, used at the end of a sentence, or absolutely, as in answer to questions, and not is non pas, used also absolutely, in the beginning of a sentence, and followed by que, with the subjunctive : as,

Croyez vous cela ? Non. Do you believe that? No.

Je ne crois point cette nouvelle-là ; non pas que la chose soit impossible, mais parce qu'elle ne me paroît pas vraisemblable ; B
I don't believe that piece of news : not that the thing is impossible, but because it does not appear probable to me.

4°. Although pas or point may be sometimes indifferently used, yet point has a more negative force, it implies not at all. But note,

1st, That point always requires the particle de before nouns : as, Il n'y a point de raison pour cela ; There is no reason for that : Il n'en a point de soin ; He has no care of it : and pas sometimes takes the preposition de without an article ; and sometimes an article before the noun that comes after it : as, C
Il n'en a pas le soin qu'il faut ; He don't take care of it as he should :—and sometimes not : as, Il n'en a pas soin ; He has no care of it :—and never Il n'en a point soin, or point le soin qu'il faut.

¶ Pas implies something actual and accidental : point, something habitual and permanent.

Il ne lit pas ; he does not read, viz. now.

Il ne lit point ; He does not read, viz. ever.

Pas expresses a mere negation ; point inforces it. Pas sometimes denies D partly, and admits of a modification ; point always denies absolutely and without reserve.

Il n'est pas bien riche ; He is not very rich. Il n'est point riche ; He is not at all rich.]

2^{dly}, That pas, for the reasons just given, is to be used before these modifying words, whereas point cannot be used with them :

beaucoup,	much,	moins,	less,	tant,	so much,
peu,	little,	souvent,	often,	autant,	as much,
mieux,	better,	toujours,	always,	trop,	too much,
plus,	more,	si,	so,	fort, très,	very,
extrêmement,	extremely,	infiniment,	infinitely ;	and all adverbs : as,

- A Il n'y a pas beaucoup de monde aujourd'hui au Parc ;
 There is not much company to-day in the Park.
Il n'est pas peu difficile de lui plaire ;
 It is not a little difficult to please him.
Il ne la voit pas souvent ; He does not see her often, &c.

3dly, That when a question is asked, pas intimates that one supposes the thing concerning which the question is asked; whereas point intimates a mere doubt and ignorance of the same thing. For instance, by this question,

- B N'est il point Membre de la Société Royale ?
 Is he not a Fellow of the Royal Society ?
 I want to be informed whether he is a Fellow of the Royal Society or no, being quite ignorant of it; but by this other,
N'est-il pas Membre de la Société Royale ?
 I intimate that I think he is a Fellow of that Society, and wonder that the others do not think so too.

5°. Besides these negatives (to which add ni repeated, neither, and nor) the following words, which are of themselves negative terms, require moreover the particle ne before their verb, which is then alone, without pas or point.

- C

personne,	no body,	nullement,	no means,	mot,	word, and goutte :
pas un,	not one,	guères,	but little,		but these two last re-
aucun,	no, not any,	jamais,	never,		quire a negative only
nul,	none,	rien,	nothing,		with dire and voir :

as, Je ne vois personne ; I see nobody. Vous ne dites rien ;
 You say nothing. Elle n'a aucun amant ; She has no sweetheart. Il ne dit mot ; He does not say a word. On ne voit goutte ; One cannot see at all, &c.

- Observe, that rien signifies also sometimes something or any thing; and in that sense it is construed without a negative, and in sentences of inter-Drogation and doubt only; as,
Avez-vous jamais rien vu de si beau ? Have you ever seen any thing so fine?
Jamais signifies also ever, and is construed without a negative: as,
Si jamais j'y retourne, &c. If ever I go there again, &c.

¶ Rien and jamais are also used without the particle ne, when they are preceded by the preposition sans, which implies exclusion and negation: as,
Sans rien faire ; without doing any thing. Sans jamais se plaindre ;
 without ever complaining.]

2dly, The conjunction à moins que, unless; de peur que, de crainte que, lest, or for fear that (but not de peur de, de crainte de, which govern the infinitive), will have after them ne before the next verb; as likewise these four verbs, empêcher, to hinder;

to prevent; craindre, to fear; appréhender, to apprehend; A avoir peur, to be afraid: when they are not used in the infinitive: as,

A moins que vous ne le vouliez ainsi; Unless you will have it so. J'empêcherai qu'il ne vous nuise; I will hinder him from hurting you, &c.

¶ In such phrases, this word ne is the ne or quon of the Latin, which has been introduced in our language. French Academy.]

But it is to be observed, with respect to the verbs of fearing and apprehending, that it is only when one speaks of an effect that is not wished for, that the second negative pas, or point, is left out after the next verb; for if one wishes that the thing spoken of should happen, then the verb that follows craindre B and appréhender, must be attended with the two negatives: as, Il craint que sa femme ne meure; He fears that or lest his wife should die.

Il craint que sa femme ne meure pas; He fears lest his wife should not die.

The first instance is of an effect not wished for, the last of one wished for, denoted in English by the negative not, whereas the other way of speaking is without negative.

Observe, also, that empêcher takes no negative, when the next verb is in the infinitive: as,

Je l'empêcherai de vous nuire; I will hinder him from hurting C you.

Nier, to deny, requires also elegantly ne before the next verb, in negative sentences: as,

Je ne nie pas que je n'aie dit cela; I don't deny that I have said that.

¶ Here it may not be amiss to observe that there is a material difference between de crainte de and de crainte que.

Conjunctive phrases, formed with de, serve to connect sentences, the verbs of which are depending on, and governed by, the same subject; whereas conjunctive phrases, formed with que, chiefly serve to connect sentences, the verbs of which are governed by different subjects: for instance,

Je ne le ferai pas, de crainte de vous déplaire; I will not do it, lest I should displease you. The two verbs ferai and déplaire depend on the same subject je. D

Je ne le ferai pas, de crainte que vous ne le trouviez mauvais; I will not do it lest you should think it amiss. The two subjects are different; ferai is governed by je, and trouviez by vous.

Conjunctive phrases with que may sometimes be used to connect sentences governed by the same subject; they then serve to give more energy: for instance,

Je ne le ferai pas, de crainte que je ne m'en trouve plus mal (I will not do it, lest I should be the worse for it); implies the same sense as de m'en trouver plus mal, but has more energy.

Conjunctive phrases with de cannot be used when the subjects are different.

This observation may account for not using de or que indifferently after craindre, appréhender, avoir peur; as also after prendre garde, which, in the sense of to beware, belongs to the same tribe; as,

A Prenez garde de tomber ; Beware of falling. (The subject is the same.)
Prenez garde qu'il ne tombe ; Take care lest he should fall. (The subjects are different.)

Prenez garde que vous ne tombiez dans le piège ; take care lest you should fall into the snare (the subject is the same ; but the phrase is more energetic than Prenez garde de tomber dans le piège.]

3dly, We use the negative ne before the verb that comes after these five words, plus, moins, mieux, autre, and autrement ; as, Il est plus sincère qu'il ne faudroit ; He is more sincere than he should.

Elle est moins âgée que je ne croyois ; She is less old than I thought.

B Il, or Elle est tout autre que je ne pensois ; (See p. 226, D.)
 He, or She is quite another than I thought.

Vous avez fait tout autrement que je n'aurois fait ; You have acted quite differently from what I would have done.

¶ A Gentleman of profound knowledge, Mr. SALMON, in his Complete System of the French Language, p. 144, expresses himself thus :—"Grammarians are wrong to say that que always requires ne before the concluding verb of the comparison." He brings in the Genius of the French Language, and countenances his verdict by authorities of the first rate. Having, however, met in his way other authorities equally respectable, but contradictory to his decision, he concludes that it is indifferent, after a negative verb, to suppress or use ne, and yet wishes to enforce his own opinion.

This point is, indeed, one of the nicest to discuss ; as most Grammarians give instances only for the sentence declarative affirmative, and leave the reader in the dark for the other sorts of sentences.

C In my humble opinion, however, notwithstanding the authorities quoted by Mr. S., ne, in any case, cannot be suppressed ; because such sentences imply negation, and the very Genius of the French Language, appealed to by Mr. S., far from rejecting ne in negative sentences, constantly requires it ; as follows :

1st Case, granted by Mr. S. Il écrit mieux qu'il ne parle, He writes better than he speaks, may be resolved by its inverse ; Il ne parle pas aussi bien qu'il écrit.

2d Case, contested by Mr. S. Ecrit-il mieux qu'il ne parle? Does he write better than he speaks? ——— Il ne parle pas bien ; écrit-il mieux?

3d Case, contested by Mr. S. Il n'écrit pas mieux qu'il ne parle, He does not write better than he speaks, ——— Il ne parle pas bien ; il n'écrit pas mieux.

D 4th Case, granted by Mr. S. N'écrit-il pas mieux qu'il ne parle? Does he not write better than, &c. ——— Il ne parle pas bien ; n'écrit-il pas mieux?

This last has two meanings, 1st, Ecrit-il aussi mal qu'il parle? 2d, Vous voyez qu'il écrit mieux qu'il ne parle.

Imperative sentence affirmative } not instanced by Mr. S. Qu'il écrive mieux qu'il ne parle, Let him write better than he speaks, ——— Il ne parle pas bien ; qu'il écrive mieux (s'il veut qu'on le lise.)

Imperative sentence negative } Qu'il n'écrive pas plus mal qu'il ne parle, Let him not write worse than he speaks, ——— Il ne parle pas mal ; qu'il écrive de même (& on le lira avec plaisir).

From the above examples it appears that the Genius of the English Language is diametrically opposite to that of the French ; but though opposite, either must be consistent with itself ; therefore, as the English Genius constantly rejects the negation in concluding a comparison, so it may be inferred that the French constantly requires it; therefore the particle ne granted by A Mr. S. in two cases, cannot be contested in the two other cases; of course, Mr. S.'s distinction seems, at least, nugatory.

With respect to his quotations, though my opinion is of no weight, yet I would rather advise not to imitate them, whatever the merit of their authors may be. If these sentences were put to the test, as above, they could not stand it. So it is that mistakes of the best writers are sometimes given out as rules; and so it was with the la of Madame de Sévigné, (see p. 248.)

¶ To the above words may be added these sentences: peu s'en faut, il s'en faut peu, il s'en faut tant, &c. which always announce a negation: as,

Peu s'en faut que je ne me fasse un scrupule de prêter au denier cinq; I can hardly without a scruple lend at five per cent.

Il s'en est peu fallu qu'il n'ait été tué; He was very near being killed.

Il s'en faut tant que la somme entière n'y soit; There is so much wanting to the whole sum.

Such phrases may be resolved thus: Je ne me fais point de scrupule, &c. mais peu s'en faut. B

4thly, After que and si, signifying before, or unless, or but, in the middle of a compound sentence, the former part whereof is a negative sentence: as,

Je ne la reverrai point, que sa mère ne m'envoie querir:

I will not see her again, before her mother sends for me. [prie;

Je n'y irai pas, or je n'irai pas s'il ne m'en prie, or qu'il ne m'en

I will not go thither if he don't desire, (or) unless he desires me.

Il ne sauroit ouvrir la bouche qu'il ne dise quelque impertinence;

He cannot open his mouth but he says some foolish thing or other.

5thly, Before the verb that precedes ni, repeated in the sentence; which answers to neither and nor: as, C

Je n'aime ni à boire ni à fumer; I love neither drinking nor smoking.

And if no verb comes before neither, the English particle neither is ne only, and nor is ni ne: as,

Je ne bois ni ne fume; I neither drink nor smoke.

When two adnouns meet together in a negative sentence, they are not joined with the particle ni, if they are synonymous, or express both the same thing in different words; but only when they signify two different things, or quite contrary. When they are synonymous only, they are joined by the enclitick et; as,

Je ne me ressouviens point d'hiver plus rude & plus froid que celui de 1740; I do not remember a more severe and colder winter than that of 1740. Rude and froid, being synonymous, are coupled with &: but in this other, the two adnouns express very different things, and therefore are coupled by ni.] D

Jamais on ne vit de saison plus pluvieuse ni plus froide;

One never saw a more rainy or colder season.

¶ For the reason mentioned before, two or more nouns or infinitives governed by the preposition sans, must be joined with the conjunction ni: as,

Une mer sans fond ni rive; A sea without either bottom or shore.

Sans boire ni manger; Without eating or drinking: which is the same as n'ayant ni bu ni mangé; sans having of itself the force both of ne and the first ni.]

§ II. On the other hand, the French use the particle ne only, in some particular cases, when the analogy of speech requires a negative in all languages, and wherein therefore it seems that they should not leave out pas.

A 1st, With these five verbs used negatively ; oser to dare, cesser to cease, pouvoir to be able, savoir to know, and prendre garde, to take care : as,

Il n'ose me contredire ; He dares not contradict me.

Elle ne cesse de babiller ; She does not cease prattling.

Il ne peut, or Il ne sauroit marcher ; He cannot walk.

But note, 1st, that it is an elegance only to use but one negative with pouvoir, it being not improper to say, Il ne peut pas marcher ; and that, when a question is asked, regard must be had to the ear, to express or leave out the second negative, according as it reads, and sounds best, though it is then most commonly expressed : Ne peut-il pas faire cela ? which is better than Ne peut-il faire cela ? Can't he do that ?

B 2dly, When savoir is used for pouvoir, it requires only one negative, and can never be used with two : as, Il ne sauroit marcher ; He cannot walk. Ne sauroit-il faire cela ? Can't he do that ? and never Il ne sauroit pas—Ne sauroit il pas ?

¶ There is this difference between on ne peut and on ne sauroit ; the latter implies inability ; the former impossibility.

Ce qu'on ne sauroit faire est trop difficile ; What one is not able to do, is too difficult :

Ce qu'on ne peut pas faire, est impossible ; What one cannot do, is impossible :

And for that reason, on ne peut, in that sense, is always accompanied with pas ; whereas on ne sauroit never admits of it.]

When savoir is used in its proper signification of knowing, there is another distinction to be made ; for if it implies only an uncertainty of the mind, it requires but one negative ; Il ne sait ce qu'il doit espérer de son procès ; He does not know what he ought to expect of his lawsuit ; that is, He is uncertain of the event of his cause ; he hopes, but knows not how far to hope. But if savoir preserves its full energy, that is, if it implies a full and entire ignorance of the thing, it will have two negatives ; as,

C Il ne sait pas que le Juge, or les Juges l'ont condamné ;

He does not know that the Judge, or Judges, have cast him.

Again, savoir requires but one negative, when it meets with any of these particles où, comment, combien, quand, quel, quoi, si : which, by their nature, modify its energy ; as,

Il est je ne sais où ;

He, or it is I do not know where.

Cela s'est fait je ne sais comment ;

That was done I do not know how.

Là-dessus est entré je ne sais quel homme ; Thereupon entered I do not know what man.

Je ne sais s'il dit vrai ; I do not know whether he tells the truth, &c.

3dly, Prendre garde signifies either to take care, or to take notice, to mind, to consider : and it is in the first signification only it requires but one negative before the next verb ; for in the other signification it requires the two : as,

Prenez garde qu'on ne vous trompe ; Take care lest they cheat you.

Il prit garde qu'on ne le recevoit pas si bien que de coutume ;

He took notice that he was not so cordially received as usual.

D ¶ After prendre garde, in the sense of to take care, que governs the subjunctive ; and, in the other sense, the indicative mood ; the reason for both is obvious.]

As for the first signification, viz. to take care, see above, p. 315, D.]

¶ Pas, or point, may also be elegantly suppressed in such interrogative phrases : Avez-vous un ami qui ne soit des miens ? Have you a friend who is not mine ?]

2dly, The French use the negative ne only, after the impersonal il y a followed by a compound of the present tense : as, Il y a dix ans que je ne l'ai vu ; I have not seen him these ten years.

But if any other tense comes after the impersonal, they use the two negatives :

Il y a un mois que je ne lui parle point ; I have not spoken to him this month.

Il y avoit un an que je ne la voyois point; I had not seen her A for a year.

¶ It does not result from the above rules, that the sentence following the impersonal il y a should always be a negative one; for we say:

Il y a dix ans que je le connois; I have known him these ten years.

Il y a dix ans que j'en ai entendu parler; I heard speak of it ten years ago.]

3dly, When the verb meets with the particle de, denoting a space of time: as,

Je ne lui parlerai de ma vie; I won't speak to him as long as I live.

4thly, When a question is asked with que, signifying pourquoi: as Que ne faites vous cela? Why don't you do that?

5thly, With the adverb plus used absolutely: as,

Je ne veux plus le voir; I will see him no more.

But when plus is used comparatively, that is, before an adnoun, with or without que, the two negatives are requisite before plus: as,

Je ne le veux pas plus grand que l'autre;

I won't have it larger than the other.

¶ 5thly, As also with the adverb non plus, signifying pas davantage, no more:

On n'en parle non plus que s'il n'avoit jamais été; He is no more spoken of than if he had never existed.

Non plus is sometimes used in the sense of pareillement; then it is preceded by the two negatives, ne pas, or by the particle ni only: as,

Vous ne voulez pas le dire, je ne le dirai pas non plus (that is, non plus que vous); You will not tell it, nor will I tell it any more (than you). Ni moi non plus; nor I neither.

Ceux-ci n'en sont pas, ni ceux-là non plus; These are not among the number, nor those neither.

6thly, After si, and que, in the sense of unless, or but (see the 4th paragraph of the First Section, p. 345.); as,

Je ne saurois boire si je ne mange; I cannot drink if I don't eat.

Je n'y irai pas, or je n'irai pas qu'elle ne m'y invite: I will not go thither, unless she invites me.

It is indifferent in some few cases to use the two negatives, or one only, but they must be learnt by practice. Thus, we say,

S'il ne me fait ce plaisir-là, or S'il ne me fait pas ce plaisir-là, je ne me mêlerai plus de ses affaires; If he don't do me that kindness, I will not meddle with his affairs any more.

S'il ne me paye cette semaine, or S'il ne me paye pas cette semaine, je le ferai arrêter; If he don't pay me this week, I will arrest him. The ear must be the judge in those cases, whether it is better to express pas or no.

7thly, Ne, followed in the same sentence by que, but separated by one or more words, expresses seulement, and is Englished by but, or nothing but, also in the middle of the sentence, or by only: as, Je ne ferai que ce qu'il vous plaira; I will only do what you please. Il ne fait que jouer; He does nothing but play. Je ne fais qu'un repas par jour; I eat but one meal a-day.

8thly, But, likewise in the middle of a sentence, is rendered into French by que and ne, or the relative qui and ne, but without pas or point, and the second verb is in the subjunctive (conformable to our former rules): as,

Je ne doute point qu'il ne vienne; I don't doubt but he will come.

Y a-t-il quelqu'un qui ne le sache? Is there any body but knows it?

CHAP. VIII.

§ I. Of the Formation of Adverbs.

1°. GENERALLY speaking, one can make as many adverbs of quality and manner in French, as there are adnouns, by adding the termination ment to the adnoun; but with this previous distinction, that with adnouns ending in é acute, or in i or u, it is to the masculine; and with the other adnouns, it is to the feminine that ment is added. Thus,

from, aisé,	easy,	is formed aisément,	easily.
— assuré,	assured,	— assurément,	assuredly.
— sensé,	sensible,	— sensément,	sensibly.
— poli,	polite,	— poliment,	politely.
— hardi,	bold,	— hardiment,	boldly.
— gentil (lis silent),	genteel,	— gentiment,	genteelly.
— absolu,	absolute,	— absolument,	absolutely.
— éperdu,	desperate,	— éperdument,	desperately.
— ingénu,	ingenuous,	— ingénument,	ingenuously.
— assidu,	assiduous,	— assidument,	assiduously.
— dú,	due,	— dúment,	duly.
— grand, fem. grande,	great,	— grandement,	greatly.
— bon, fem. bonne,	good,	— bonnement,	plainly.
— doux, fem. douce,	sweet,	— doucement,	sweetly.
— seul, fem. seule,	only,	— seulement,	only.
— vif, fem. vive,	quick,	— vivement,	quickly.
— certain, fem. certaine,	certain,	— certainement,	certainly.
— lent, fem. lente,	slow,	— lentement,	slowly.
— présent, fem. présente,	present,	— présentement,	presently.
— sage (masc. and fem.),	wise,	— sagement,	wisely.
— autre, ———	other,	— autrement,	otherwise.
— digne, ———	worthy,	— dignement,	worthily.
— honnête, ———	honest,	— honnêtement,	honestly.

20. Observe that the adnoun masculine retains the sound of its final vowel in the adverb derived from it; and that the adnoun feminine keeps also its final e mute, except in the following adverbs, wherein that e mute is transformed into é, and protracted a little.

aveuglement,	blindly,	from	aveugle,	(m. & f.)	blind.
commodément,	commodiously,	—	commode,	(m. & f.)	commodious.
incommodément,	inconveniently,	—	incommode,	(m. & f.)	inconvenient.
conformément,	conformably,	—	conforme,	(m. & f.)	conform.

énormément,	hugely.	from énorme,	(m. & f.),	huge.
uniformément,	uniformly,	— uniforme,	(m. & f.),	uniform.
expressément,	expressedly,	— exprès,	fem. expresse,	express.
confusément,	confusedly,	— confus	— confuse,	confused.
précisément,	precisely,	— précis,	— précise,	precise.
communément,	commonly,	— commun,	— commune,	common.
importunément,	importunately,	— importun,	— importune,	importunate.
obscurément,	obscurely,	— obscur,	— obscur,	obscure.
profondément,	deeply,	— profond,	— profonde,	deep.
profusément,	profusely,	— profus,	— profuse,	profuse.
impunément,	with impunity,	though derived from impuni,	impunie,	unpunished.

3° From adnouns ending in ant and ent, (lent, and présent excepted,) adverbs are formed, by changing that termination into amment, and emment (pronounced alike). Thus from constant constant, is formed constamment constantly; from évident evident, évidemment evidently, &c.

Six adverbs in ment are excepted; diablement devilishly, from the noun diable devil; comment how, from the conjunction comme; incessamment incessantly, from the verb cesser preceded by in, a negative particle; notamment notably, from noter to note; nuitamment by night, from nuit night; and sciemment wittingly, from savoir (derived from scio) to know.

4°. These following adnouns are also used adverbially with some verbs.

haut,	parler haut,	to speak aloud.
bas,	parler bas,	to speak low.
clair,	voir clair,	to see plain, to be clear-sighted.
double,	voir double,	to see double, (not clear and plain).
trouble,	voir trouble,	to be dim-sighted.
franc, net,	dire franc & net,	to say or speak freely and plainly.
juste,	penser, parler, chanter juste,	to think, sing, &c. right.
fort,	frapper fort,	to strike hard.
dur,	entendre dur,	to be thick, or dull of hearing.
doux,	filer doux,	to give fair words, to be submissive
sec,	répondre sec,	to make a sharp rough answer.
bon,	sentir bon, ou mauvais,	to have a good or bad smell
mauvais,	trouver bon, ou mauvais,	to like or dislike.
ferme,	tenir ferme,	to hold fast.
droit,	marcher droit,	to keep to the behaviour.
frais,	boire frais,	to drink cold.
chaud,	boire chaud,	to drink warm.
gras,	parler gras,	to lisp.
gros,	écrire gros, ou menu,	to write a large or small hand.
menu,
cher,	vendre cher,	to sell dear.
vîte,	aller vîte,	to go fast.

belle, l'échapper belle, to escape narrowly fin, couper fin, to cut small.

As likewise nouveau and nouvelle new, fraîche (the feminine of frais fresh,) and even the nouns goutte & mot: as, un enfant nouveau né, a new-born child,
un nouvel arrivé,
une nouvelle arrivée, } one newly arrived, } for nouvellement.
des herbes toutes fraîches cueillies; herbs fresh, or just gathered.
ne voir, or n'entendre goutte; to see, or hear nothing at all.
ne dire mot; not to say a word.

Moreover, observe, that from the prepositions à, de, en, dans, du, avec, &c. joined with nouns and adnouns, are formed so many adverbs compound, almost, as there are nouns and adnouns in the language. See the list of adverbs in the second part of this work.

§ II. Of the Construction of Adverbs.

1°. When adverbs meet with a verb, they are commonly put after it, if the tense is simple, and between the auxiliary and the participle, if it is compound: as,

Elle parle beaucoup, She speaks much.
Je suis fort porté à le faire, I am very much inclined to do it.
Il n'a pas encore appris sa leçon, He has not learnt his lesson yet

2°. Monosyllables bien, mal, mieux, pis, &c. may indifferently come either before or after an infinitive: as,

Bien chanter, } chanter bien, to sing well.
Se mieux porter, } or se porter mieux, to be better.
Se mal conduire, } se conduire mal, to behave ill.

3°. When the adverbs meet with an adnoun, they must be placed first: as, bien fait well made, extrêmement heureux, mighty happy.

4°. The adverbs jamais, toujours, souvent, meeting with another, are also placed first; as,

Nous sommes souvent ensemble; We are often together.
J'ai toujours mûrement considéré; I've always considered maturely.
Je ne bois jamais trop; I never drink too much.

5°. Adverbs compound always come after the verbs or nouns: as,

Il tomba à la renverse; He fell backwards.
Un homme à la mode; A fashionable man.
Méchant de gaïeté de cœur; Wilfully wicked.

6°. Rien and tout, meeting with a verb, are construed like adverbs, even after all the pronouns conjunctive: as,

J'ai tout vu ;	I have seen all.
Il ne m'a rien dit ;	He has told me nothing.
Je ne veux rien manger ;	I will eat nothing.

7°. These three adverbs of place, céans within, alentour about, deçà, on this side, come after nouns, with the preposition de: as,

Le maître de céans ;	The master of this place.
Les échos d'alentour ;	The neighbouring echoes.
La partie de deçà ;	The part on this side.

8°. These seven become true nouns, being used with the article, and requiring the preposition de (or the particles du, des) before the next nouns :

le dehors , the outside.	} as, Le devant est tout usé ; The fore part is quite worn out. Cela tient au dedans de la boîte ; That sticks to the inside of the box. Les environs d'une place ; The adjacent places of a town.
le dedans , the inside.
le dessus , the upper part.
le dessous , the under part.
le devant , the fore part.
le derrière , the hinder part.
les environs , the adjacent places.

Observe that adverbs derived from verbs or adnouns, govern nouns in the same states as the verb or adnoun, which they are derived from, governs: as différemment de ce que je vous montre, differently from what I show you: indépendamment des lois, without any dependence upon the laws: relativement à l'acte du Parlement, relatively to the act: préféremment à toute autre chose, preferably to, or before any thing, &c.

CHAP. IX.

Of PREPOSITIONS.

PREPOSITIONS are words invented to express the relations which things bear to one another. It was not possible for men to make themselves fully understood, without denoting those relations: therefore such words must needs have been invented in all languages. But (as the author of the Grammaire Raisonnée observes) men in no language have had any regard, concerning prepositions, to what reason would have desired; to wit, that one relation had been denoted by one preposition, and one preposition should have denoted one relation only: whereas, in all languages, one and the same relation is signified by many prepositions, and one and the same preposition denotes several relations, as we shall see in this chapter. It is in that, nevertheless, chiefly consist the different idioms of languages; and it is absolutely impossible ever to attain to the knowledge of any language whatever, without thoroughly understanding the divers relations denoted by the prepositions, with their respective regimens and constructions, or the several states of nouns which they govern: both which relations and states being arbitrary, vary and differ much in all languages. This only instance will evince it. The English say, to think of a thing: the French, to think to a thing; the Germans and Dutch, to think on or upon a thing; the Spaniards to think in a thing, &c. Now it will avail an Englishman but little to know, that of is expressed in French by de, if he don't know which relations of things the prepositions à and de denote in that language: since the French say, to think to a thing, and not of a thing. Therefore we shall minutely consider here all the French prepositions, except only such as are of the same signification, and denote the same relation of things, and require the same construction as in English.

à denotes,—1st, (whether alone or in composition) the end of the action of the verb, what person or thing it tends to (which relation answers to the dative case of the Latins), as likewise the end one aims at, and is englished by to: as, Donner une chose à quelqu'un; To give a thing to somebody: A qui est ce livre? Whose book is this? Il est à moi; It is mine, it belongs to me: Parvenir à son but; To obtain one's end.

2dly, à denotes the place where one is, and that whither one is going (in English at, to, into, on, within, &c.) as, Demeurer à Londres; To live at London: Aller à Paris; To go to Paris: Vivre à la campagne; To live in the country: Aller à la campagne; To go into the country: Il demeure à vingt milles d'ici; He lives twenty miles off: Détournez à droite; Turn on the right hand: C'est à deux doigts de terre; It is within two inches of the ground.

3dly, à denotes time, and succession of time and action, in English at, in, by, &c. as Se lever à six heures, & déjeuner à neuf; To rise at six o'clock, and breakfast at nine: Arriver à temps; To arrive in time: A demain; Against to-morrow: Parler à son tour; To speak in one's turn: Se remettre peu à peu; To recover by degrees: Arracher brin à brin; To pluck out slip by slip.

4thly, à denotes the part of the body that is affected, and is englished by in: as Avoir mal à l'épaule; To have a pain in one's shoulder: Etre blessé au bras; To be wounded in the arm.

5thly, à denotes the way of being or of doing of people, as also their posture, and gesture, or action; in English at, after, with, &c. as, Etre à son aise; To be at one's ease: Vivre à sa fantaisie; To live as one likes: Faire tout à sa tête; To do every thing of one's own head: S'habiller à la Française; To dress after the French way: Aller à pied ou à cheval; To go on foot, or on horseback: Se mettre à genoux; To kneel down on one's knees: Recevoir à bras ouverts; To receive with open arms.

6thly, à denotes the quality, price, weight, and measure of things; in English at, by, with, &c. as, Des bas à trois fils; Stockings with three threads: De l'or à vingt-quatre carats; Gold at four-and-twenty carats: Du drap à dix-huit schellings la verge; Eighteen shillings cloth: Vendre de la viande à la livre; To sell meat by the pound; Mesurer au compas, ou au cordeau; To measure with the compass, or the line.

8thly, à denotes the things which one applies oneself to, and the games one plays at; in English to, at: as, S'appliquer à l'étude, aux Mathématiques; To apply oneself to study, or to the Mathematics; Jouer aux cartes, To play at cards: Jouer au piquet, à la bête, à la paume, au volant, aux échecs, &c. To play at piquet, at loo, at tennis, at shuttlecock, at chess, &c.

9thly, à is used in reckoning games; in English, to, &c. as, Deux à trois, Two to three; Trois à quatre, Three to four; Quatre à quatre, Four all; Cinq à cinq, Five all; Six à point, Six to none; Sept à point, Seven love.

10thly, à signifies sometimes according to, sometimes for, sometimes with, sometimes on, sometimes till or until: as, Cela n'est pas à son goût; That is not according to his taste; Je vous prends à témoin; I take you for witness; Se battre à l'épée & au pistolet; To fight with sword and pistol: Monter à cheval; To ride on horseback: Mettre pied à terre; To alight: A l'honneur, au revoir; Till our next meeting, till we meet again.

11thly, à sometimes is a redundancy: as, Il faut voir à qui l'aura; We must see who shall have it: C'est à qui l'attrapera, It is who shall catch it.

12thly, à between two nouns appellative, denotes the manner, or form, of the thing signified by the first noun; as likewise the use which it is designed for; as, Un Chandelier à bras, A branched caudlestick : Un chapeau à grands bords, A broad brimmed hat ; Un clou à crochet, A tenter-hook ; Une boîte à mouches, A patch-box ; De l'huile à brûler, Lamp-oil ; Une salle à manger, A dining-room ; Un moulin à vent, ou à eau, a wind, or water-mill ; Une arme à feu, A fire-arm.

This relation is commonly expressed in English by two nouns making a compound word, the first of which signifies the Manner, Form, and Use, denoted by the French preposition.

13thly, à, between two nouns of number, signifies between, and sometimes about : as, Un homme de quarante à cinquante ans ; A man between forty and fifty : Il y a quatre à cinq lieues ; It is about four or five leagues distant.

15thly, à coming before an infinitive, signifies sometimes wherewith, and sometimes the verb may be resolved by the indicative with if, or by a gerund : as, Verser à boire ; To fill some drink : Il n'a pas à manger ; He has nothing to eat : A en juger par les apparences ; If we may judge by appearances : A vivre comme il fait, il n'ira pas loin ; If he lives at that rate, he will not live long : On croiroit, à l'entendre, qu'il ne sait rien ; One would think, by hearing him speak, that he knows nothing.

Etre à l'abri ; To be sheltered : Se tenir à couvert ; To keep under cover or shelter : Tenir à honneur ; To reckon it an honour : Réputer à injure ; To deem it an affront : Mettre un Officier aux arrêts ; To put an Officer under an arrest : A votre avis ; In your opinion : A son compte ; As he reckons : A ce qu'il me semble ; As far as I apprehend : A ce qu'elle dit ; As she says : Parler à tort & à travers ; To speak at random : Marcher à tâtons ; To go groping along in the dark : Il est homme à s'en fâcher ; He is one who will take it ill : Je suis ici à l'attendre depuis deux heures, & il est encore à revenir ; I have been waiting for him here these two hours, and he is not yet come back : A cela près, nous sommes d'accord ; Excepting that, we are agreed, &c.

This preposition serves to make up a great many more adverbial ways of speaking, each of which is set down in its proper place in my Dictionary.

de, du, des.

De (whether alone or in composition) denotes, 1st, a relation of union or separation, effect, cause, dependence, &c. and is englished by of, from, by; as, L'amour de Dieu; The love of God: Un membre du corps; A member of the body: Etre retranché de la société; To be cut off from the society: Etre estimé de tout le monde; To be esteemed by every body.

2dly, De denotes the quality of a person or thing, the matter of which that thing is made. which is expressed by the first of the two nouns, whereof this preposition shows the relation, and is englished by of: as, Un homme d'honneur, A man of honour; Un plat d'argent, A silver-dish; Un pont de pierre, A stone-bridge.

Observe that these two nouns, so joined with either de or à, are commonly englished by two likewise, but without a preposition, or rather by a compound word, whose first noun (whether substantive or adjective) expresses the Matter and Quality, Manner, Form, and Use of the other, as a stone-bridge, un pont de pierre; a dancing-master, un maître à danser.

3dly, De denotes the limited sense of nouns, and distinguishes it from the universal and individual sense; which limited sense is expressed in English by some: as, De l'argent, Some money; Donnez-moi du pain, de la viande, des habits, Give me some bread, some meat, clothes, J'ai affaire à des gens fort honnêtes, or à de fort honnêtes gens, I have to do with very honest people.

4thly, De denotes the place from which one comes, and the term from which one begins to act, in English from: as, Sortir de Londres, To go out of London; Revenir de France, de la campagne, du Palais, des Indes, To return from France, from the country, from the Palace, from the Indies; Tomber de haut, To fall from a high place; Mesurer d'un bout à l'autre, To measure from one end to the other.

7thly, De is governed of several other verbs neuter, attended by a noun, in English at, about, for, to, &c. as se moquer de quelqu'un, To laugh at one; Jour d'une chose, To enjoy a thing; Se repentir de sa faute, To repent one's fault, or for one's fault; Mélez-vous de vos affaires, Trouble yourself about your business, Meddle with your own concerns.

9thly, De is used before nouns denoting dimension, and after nouns preceded by a number, and followed by a participle: as, Il croît tous les jours d'un pouce, It grows an inch every day; Il y a trente vaisseaux d'achevés, There are thirty ships finished.

11thly, De is used before an infinitive after adnouns signifying Fulness, Emptiness, Plenty, or Want; as likewise after some verbs, and almost all nouns, so they do not signify or imply Inclination, Reluctance, Aptness, Fitness, or Unfitness, in English to: as, Indigne de vivre, Unworthy to live; Il est capable de faire cela, He is capable of doing that; Je m'abstiendrai d'y aller, I will refrain from going thither; Il l'a détournée de le faire, He has deterred her from doing it; Le désir d'apprendre, The desire of learning; Il a le bonheur de plaire, He has the good fortune to please.

Si j'étois de vous, Si j'étois que de vous; Were I in your place: Son habit est comme de cire; His coat fits well: De grâce, n'en faites rien; Pray, don't do it, I beg you would not do it: Vous êtes fort de son goût; You are very much to her taste: Il vient de sortir; He is just gone out: De vous dire comme cela est arrivé, c'est ce que je ne sais pas; As for telling you how that happened, it is more than I am able to do: Les Magistrats doivent rendre la justice de citoyen à citoyen; chaque peuple la doit rendre lui-même de lui à un autre peuple; the magistrates ought to do justice between citizen and citizen; every nation ought to do the same the one to the other: Qu'est-ce que de nous! What wretched creatures we are!

This preposition serves to make up a great many more adverbial ways of speaking, each of which is set down in its proper place in my Dictionary.

12thly, De, des, an inseparable preposition, giving the words composed of it a signification contrary to that which they have when simple, in English, un, dis: as, Défaire, To undo; Desavantage, disadvantage.

13thly, De par, a form, made in English by from, in the name of: as, De par le Roi, In the King's name.

14thly, De ce que, a conjunction governing the indicative, in English, because, though: as, De ce qu'un homme est plus adroit, ou plus fort qu'un autre, il ne s'ensuit pas qu'il ait de meilleures raisons; Because one man is stronger, or more dexterous than another, it does not follow that he has the better cause.

Avant

1st, Avant shows a relation of time, of which it denotes priority, as also of order and rank, and is always opposite to après, in English, before: as, J'ai vu cela avant vous, I have seen that before you; Il faut mettre ce mot-ci avant l'autre, This word must be placed before the other; Il arriva avant moi, He arrived before me.

2dly, Avant is also an adverb of place and time, commonly used with these adverbial particles, si, bien, trop, plus, assez, fort, and englished by far, deep: as, N'allez pas si avant, Don't go so far; Creuser fort avant, or trop avant dans la terre, To dig very deep, or too deep in the ground; Plus avant, further, deeper; L'épée lui est entrée bien avant dans le corps, The sword went deep into his body; Bien avant dans la nuit, When the night was far gone.

Vous poussez les choses trop avant, You carry things too far; La chose alla si avant que, Matters went so far, that, &c. Jamais Philosophe ne pénétra plus avant dans la connoissance de la nature, Never did any Philosopher make greater progress in the knowledge of nature; Nous étions bien avant en mer, We were gone a great way to sea; Gravez cela bien avant dans votre mémoire, Let that be deeply engraved on your memory.

Avant que before, is a conjunction governing the subjunctive, as, avant qu'il soit un an, Before twelve months are gone.

Avant de before, is another conjunction governing the infinitive: as, Parlez-lui avant de le faire, Speak to him before you do it. [Avant que de, before an infinitive, is now grown obsolete.]

En avant forward, is another adverb of place and time, as, Aller en avant, To go forward; De ce jour-là en avant, From that day forward; Mettre en avant, To advance, to assert; Vous mettez en avant un principe fort dangereux, You advance or assert a very dangerous principle.

Après.

1st, Après denotes posteriority both of time, place, and order, and is used in opposition to avant, with respect to time, and to devant, with respect to place and order, in English, after, next to:

as, Après le déluge, after the deluge ; Sa maison est après la vôtre, His house is after, or next to yours ; Il marchoit après moi, He walked after me.

2dly, Après is construed with the infinitive of the auxiliary verb : as, Il mourut après avoir bien diné, He died after eating (having eat) a hearty dinner ; Après dîner, or après le dîner, after dinner ; Après boire (Hudibrastic style) after drinking.

Il est toujours après moi, He ever hangs about me, He is always at my elbow ; He is always dangling after me ; Etre après quelque chose, To be actually about something ; Je suis après votre montre, I am about your watch ; On est après, It is a doing ; Je vais me mettre après, I will set about it presently ; Il y avoit long-temps, qu'il étoit après cet emploi, qu'il courroit après ce bénéfice, il l'a enfin obtenu ; He has been a long time about that place ; He has solicited a long time for this living, at last he has got it ; Soupirer après quelque chose, To wish a thing eagerly ; Se mettre après quelqu'un, To fall upon one ; On a long-temps attendu après lui, He has made us wait for him a long while ; On n'attend plus qu'après cela pour partir, That's the only thing which hinders us to set out ; N'attendre pas après une chose, To be in a condition to do or to live without a thing ; C'est un homme riche, & qui n'attend pas après cela, He is a rich man, who can do or live without that ; Jeter le manche après la cognée, To throw the handle after the hatchet ; To venture the saddle after the horse ; Après lui il faut tirer l'échelle, He is never to be undone.

3dly, Après signifies excepté, in English except, next to : as, Nous n'avons rien de plus cher après l'honneur, Next to our honour, nothing can be dearer to us ; C'est la plus laide bête après le loup (is said of a very ugly person), He or She is enough to frighten a horse.

4thly, Après signifies contre, in English at : as, Crier après quelqu'un, To scold at one ; Cette femme-là crie toujours après ses servantes, That woman is constantly scolding at her maids ; Tout le monde crie après lui, Every body complains of him.

Après, is also an adverb of time, in English after, after that, afterwards, then : as, Commencez par déjeuner, & vous étudierez après, Begin with breakfasting, and after that you will study.

Après que, is a conjunction signifying lorsque, in English after, when ; as, Après que vous aurez fait, After you have done ; Après que les troupes furent parties, When the troops were gone.

Après quoi, is a form of speech signifying après laquelle chose, in English, after that, then afterwards ; as, On signa la capitulation, après quoi la place se rendit They signed the capitulation, and afterwards the place surrendered.

Après tout, another form of speech of the same signification, as in English, after all.

5thly, D'après is another preposition, in English, from, by, after : as, Ce portrait est fait d'après nature, That picture is drawn after life ; Tableau d'après Raphaël, A picture copied from the original of Raphael.

Ci-après, is an adverb, signifying dans la suite, in English hereafter ; afterwards, in the sequel ; as, Comme on verra ci-après, As will be seen in the sequel.

Of PREPOSITIONS.

Devant.

1st, Devant is used in opposition to derrière, and is construed with de, au, and par; in English before, against, over-against: as, Mettez cela devant le feu, Put that before the fire; Il demeure tout devant l'église, He lives quite over-against the church; Otez-vous de devant mon jour, Get out of my light; Otez-vous de devant moi, Stand out of my sight, Get out of my sight, Avoid my presence; Ils passent par devant chez nous, They pass before our door: Un acte par devant notaire, A deed drawn by a lawyer.

Sens devant derrière; Preposterously, the wrong way, in the wrong situation: Il met sa chemise sens devant derrière; He puts on his shirt the wrong way.

Aller, Venir, Envoyer au devant de quelqu'un; To go, to come, to send to meet one. Aller au devant d'une chose; To obviate a thing, to prevent it.

2dly, Devant is used in opposition to après: as, Il marchoit devant moi, He walked before me; Avoir le pas devant quelqu'un, To have the precedency of one.

3dly, Devant signifies in the presence of, in English before, in the presence of: as, Prêcher devant le Roi, To preach before the King; Quand il fut devant ses Juges, When he was in the presence of his Judges; Il est devant Dieu, Son âme est devant Dieu, He is before God, He is dead and gone.

Devant is also an adverb, and serves to make some phrases: as Passez devant, Go before; Si vous êtes pressé, courez devant (a proverb); If you are in a hurry, set forward, or you may set off when you please; Les premiers vont devant (another proverb), Those that are most diligent get the start of others; Comme nous avons dit ci-devant, As we said before; Il est blessé par devant, He is wounded in the fore part of his body.

Le chapitre de devant, The chapter before; Le train de devant d'un carrosse, The fore-wheels of a coach; Les jambes de devant d'un cheval, The fore-legs of a horse.

Devant is also a noun signifying the fore-part of a thing; as, Un devant de chemise, The fore-flap of a shirt; Un devant d'estomac, A stomacher; Le devant d'une perruque, The fore-top of a perriwig; Le devant d'une cuirasse, The breast of an armour; Un devant d'autel, The antependium of an altar; Prendre le devant, Gagner le devant, To go, or set out before; La cavalerie tenoit le devant, The cavalry marched first; Il sera ici dans un instant, j'ai pris les devants pour vous en avertir, He will be here presently, I came before to give you notice of his coming; Prendre le devant (in a figurative sense): To prevent, to be beforehand with one, to get the start of him. Bâtir sur le devant (another metaphorical phrase), To grow lusty or bulky, to get a big belly.

Derrière.

1st, Derrière denotes place, and is opposite to devant; in English behind: as, Regardez derrière vous, Look behind you.

2dly, Derrière is also an adverb construed with de and par, in English back, behind: as, Qu'importe que cela soit devant ou derrière, What matters it, whether it is before or behind? Par derrière,

Backwards; Porte de derrière, A back-door, (and figuratively) evasion, shift; Mettre une chose sens devant derrière, To put a thing preposterously, to put backward what should be forward.

Derrière is also a noun said of the posterior part of a thing or person; in English, the back side, the hind parts: as, Les jambes de derrière d'un cheval, the hind legs of a horse. Etre logé sur le derrière, To lodge backwards.

Faire rage des pieds de derrière (a proverbial phrase), To work with might and main; Montrer le derrière (another metaphorical phrase), To fail in one's promise.

Chez.

1st, Chez denotes, and is englished by, at, or to somebody's house, and is construed with de and par; as, Il est chez moi, He is at my house or home; Je vais chez vous, I am going to your house; Je viens de chez Madame le Blanc, I come from Mistress White's; J'ai passé par chez lui, I have called at his house; Chacun est maître chez soi, Every body is master of his own house; Avoir un chez soi, To have a house of one's own.

2dly, Chez signifies also among, with: as, Il y avoit une coutume chez les Athéniens, chez les Romains, There was a custom among the Athenians or Romans.

Contre.

1st, Contre denotes opposition, signifying against, contrary to, and is englished by with or at after verbs signifying being angry, incensed, irritated, provoked, and exasperated; as, Aller contre vent & marée, To go, to sail against wind and tide; Se fâcher contre quelqu'un, To be angry with one; Se battre contre quelqu'un, To fight one.

Quand on fit cette proposition, tout le monde s'éleva contre; When this was moved every body expressed his dislike to the motion. Pour moi, je suis contre, For my part, I am against it. Je ne suis ni pour ni contre, I am neither pro nor con, or neither for nor against it.

2dly, Contre denotes also proximity of situation, and signifies near, by: as, J'étois assis contre lui, I sat by him; Sa maison est contre la mienne, His house is by mine; Contre le bois, Near the wood; Tout contre, Hard by.

Contre, is also a noun signifying con (the opposite of pro) and against: as, On parle diversement de cette affaire, il faut savoir le pour & le contre, They talk variously of this affair, one must hear what is said pro and con, or hear both sides. La chose n'est pas sans difficulté, il y a du pour & du contre, The matter is not without difficulty, much may be said on both sides. (See in my Dictionary another signification of le contre.)

Dans and En.

1st, Dans denotes a relation of time and place, and is englished by in, into, to, within: as, Etre dans la boîte, dans la maison, dans la ville; To be in the box, in the house, in the town: Quand il entra dans la chambre; When he got into the room: Dans la même année; In the same year: Dans un mois; Within a month.

2dly, Dans denotes the state and disposition of the body, the mind, manners and fortune: as, Etre dans une posture contrainte; To be in an uneasy posture: Dans la colère où il étoit, In the passion he was in.

3dly, Dans denotes the motive and view of one's acting, which is usually expressed in English by with: as, Il fait sa cour dans le dessein de s'avancer; He makes his court with a design to be preferred.

4thly, Dans signifies also according to: as, Cela est vrai dans les principes d'Aristote; That is true according to Aristotle's principles.

5thly, Dans is used, and never en, before proper names of towns and authors: as, Il est dans Londres; He is in London: Nous lisons dans Cicéron; We read in Cicero: J'ai vu cela dans Ovide; I have read that in Ovid.

6thly, En denotes a place, and the things considered as relating to place: and is never used with the articles le, la, les, and is englished by in: as, Entre en Angleterre; To be in England: Vivre en sa maison; To live in one's own house.

7thly, En denotes the country whither one is going, and is englished by to: as Aller en France; To go to France: Venir or Passer en Angleterre; To come or pass over to England.

8thly, En denotes time, and things considered as relating to time, and is rendered by at and in: as, En tout temps, At all times; En plein jour, In open day-light; En hiver, In winter; Tant en paix qu'en guerre, Both in peace and war.

9thly, En before a noun of time, denotes the space of time that slides away in doing something; and dans the space of time after which something is to be done; as, Le Roi va à Hanovre en trois jours; The King goes to Hanover in three days; that is, he is no longer than three days in going; Le Roi va à Hanovre dans trois jours; The King goes to Hanover in three days hence; that is, after three days are gone, he will set out.

10thly, En denotes the state and disposition of persons and things, and is englished by in and at; as, Etre en vie; To be alive.

Etre en bonne santé ; To be in good health : Un enfant en nourrice ; A child at nurse : Une femme en couche ; A woman lying in : Etre en bonheur ; To be lucky, to have good luck, to play with good luck.

11thly, En denotes what one is employed in, and is englished by at and in : as, Etre en oraison, en prières ; To be at one's devotions, or prayers.

12thly, En denotes the manner of being, of behaving, of acting, and is englished by like and in : as, Etre en robe de chambre, en bonnet de nuit & en pantoufles ; To be in one's morning gown, night-cap and slippers : Vivre en Roi, To live like a King : Se conduire en étourdi ; To behave like a blunderer.

13thly, En denotes the motive and end of acting, and is englished by through, out, of, in ; as, Il fit cela en haine de ce que, &c. He did it through hatred of, &c. En considération de ses services ; In consideration of his services : En dépit de lui ; In spite of him.

14thly, En denotes the passage from one place to another, the progress of things, the change of condition both of persons and things, and is englished by to and into : as, Courir de rue en rue ; To run from street to street : Narcisse fut métamorphosé en fleur ; Narcissus was metamorphosed into a flower : L'affaire va de mal en pis ; The case is worse and worse : De mieux en mieux Better and better.

15thly, Dans and en, must be repeated before each noun governed ; as, Il étoit en robe de chambre, en bonnet de nuit & en pantoufles ; He was in his morning-gown, night-cap, and slippers : On ne voit que des brochures dans sa salle, dans sa chambre, & dans son cabinet ; One sees nothing but pamphlets in his parlour, his room, and study.

Though it is sometimes indifferent to use either of these two prepositions yet that must continue the same before each noun, which was used before the first, when it is the same sense all along the sentence, and the same thread of speech : as, Séville, capitale de l'Andalousie, surpasse toutes les villes d'Espagne en grandeur, en commerce, en richesses & en beauté ; Seville, the capital of Andalusia, exceeds in largeness, trade, riches, and beauty, all the cities in Spain. Il est fidelle dans ses promesses, inépuisable dans ses bienfaits, juste dans ses jugemens ; He is faithful in his promises, inexhaustible in his favours, just in his judgments.

But if it is not the same thread of speech, and the same sense all along the sentence, both prepositions must be used for variety sake ; as, Il passa un jour & une nuit entière en une si profonde méditation, qu'il se tint toujours dans une même posture ; He spent a whole day and night in so deep a meditation, that he always remained in the same posture.

16thly, En, when it is construed with a gerund, denotes either time or manner, and may be resolved by the conjunctions when, whilst, or as, with a tense of the indicative : as, Parler en tremblant ; To speak trembling : Il laissa ordre en partant ; He left order when he went away; Il l'aborda en riant, He came up to her with a smile; En passant, By the way.

En tant que, is a conjunction signifying as, considered as: as, Jésus-Christ en tant qu'homme; Christ as a man. It is also a law expression, signifying as far as, as much as: as, En tant que je puis, As far as lies in my power; En tant que besoin sera, As far as need will require.

We say both en été and dans l'été, in summer; en hiver and dans l'hiver, in winter; en automne and dans l'automne, in autumn; but we do not say en printemps, in the spring; but dans le printemps or au printemps.

Observe, further, that in and into must be rendered into French by entre, and never by dans or en, in these following expressions: To hold a child in one's arms, Tenir un enfant entre ses bras; To deliver a thing into somebody's hands, Remettre quelque chose entre les mains de quelqu'un, or Remettre en main; To get it again from his hands, Le retirer d'entre ses mains.

Etre en butte à tout le monde, To be exposed to all the world; s'en aller, s'en revenir, to go away or come back again; En avant, Forward; En dedans, Within; Etre en train, To begin, to be at it; Mettre en train, To set on, to set a-going; Se mettre en train, To begin doing a thing, &c. &c. &c.

The other significations of en must be looked for in my Dictionary.

Depuis.

1st, Depuis denotes both time, place, and order, or enumeration of things, and is englished by since and from; and is commonly followed in the sentence by jusqu'à (to): then depuis denotes the term from whence, and jusqu'à, that of hitherto, as, Depuis ce temps-là, Since that time; Je ne l'ai pas vu depuis son retour, I have not seen him since his return; Je vous attendrai depuis cinq jusqu'à six, I'll wait for you from five to six; Vous êtes venu depuis moi, You came after me; Elle est arrivée depuis lui, She is arrived since he did; Depuis le commencement jusqu'à la fin, from the beginning to the end; Il m'a suivi depuis la Bourse jusqu'au Palais, He has followed me from the Royal Exchange to the Palace; Je les ai tous vus depuis le premier jusqu'au dernier, I have seen them all from the first to the last.

Observe the difference between depuis and jusqu'à, de and à, and de and en, all which prepositions are englished by from and to.

De and à, before nouns of places, denote simply the distance that is between the two places; as, On compte vingt-deux milles de Windsor à Londres, They reckon twenty-two miles from Windsor to London.

Depuis and jusqu'à, denote, besides, the quality of the distance, its being great or little; as,

Il marcha depuis Windsor jusqu'à Londres, He walked from Windsor to London.

De and en, with the same noun repeated, denote succession of place; as, Il va de cabaret en cabaret, He goes from alehouse to alehouse.

Depuis peu, lately, not long since, or ago; Depuis quand? How long? How long since? Depuis deux ans, These two years; Depuis long-temps, This great while.

2dly, Depuis is also an adverb signifying since, since that time; as, Je n'en ai point ouï parler depuis, I have not heard of it since.

3dly, Depuis que is a conjunction governing the indicative, and is also englished by since: as, Depuis que vous êtes parti, Since you went away.

Jusque, or Jusques.

1st, Jusque (to, even to, as far as, till, until), denotes both place and time, to a degree that cannot be exceeded, and besides requires the preposition à before a noun. It is indifferent to spell it with or without an s at the end, but when it is construed with a word beginning with a vowel, it loses its final s: as, Depuis Paris jusqu'à Londres, From Paris to London; Depuis la St. Jean jusqu'à Noël, From Midsummer to Christmas; Il alla jusqu'au Grand-Caire, He went as far as Grand Cairo; Le vice règne jusques sur le trône, Vice rides triumphant, even to the throne; Jusqu'à présent, Till now, until now; Jusqu'où? To what place? How far? Jusqu'ici, To this place, hither, so far; Jusques-là, To that place, thither, so far; Ils en vinrent jusques-là qu'on crut qu'ils s'alloient battre, They went so far, or to such extremities, that people thought they were going to fight.

Crier jusqu'à s'enrouer, To bawl oneself hoarse; Brûler du vin jusqu'au déchet de deux tiers, To burn two-thirds of wine away. Jusqu'au revoir (a phrase at parting), Till our next meeting, Till we meet again; Ami jusqu'aux autels, A friend as far as conscience permits. Brave jusqu'au dégâter (is said of a bully), Courageous till the question is to draw.

2dly, Jusqu'à, jusqu'aux (even, very), denotes also excess; as, Il aime jusqu'à ses ennemis, He loves even his enemies; Jusqu'aux plus abjects des hommes se donnoient la licence de, &c. (which may also be expressed thus), Il n'y avoit pas jusqu'aux plus abjects des hommes qui ne se donnassent la licence de, &c. The very worst of men took such a liberty as to, &c.

Jusqu'à and jusqu'aux, taken in this sense, are also used in the third state, but with such verbs only as require after them nothing but the third state, or govern both the absolute and respective state together, that is, or are attended with an object and term. Thus we say: Il étendit sa libéralité jusqu'aux valets, He extended his generosity even to the servants, because étendre requires here both the absolute and respective state after it. But we do not say: Il donna jusqu'aux valets, to mean that, He gave to every body, and even to the servants, because as Il donna jusqu'à son carrosse, signifies that he gave every thing he had, and even his very coach (in which sentence, jusqu'à son carrosse expresses the word of the object coming after the verb); so Il donna jusqu'aux valets would signify that he gave every thing he had, and even his servants: which causes an ambiguity, that ought to be carefully avoided in French.

3dly, Jusqu'à ce que is a conjunction which governs the subjunctive, till, until: as, Jusqu'à ce qu'il vienne, Until he comes

And Jusqu'à quand, pronounced in declamation Jusques à quand) governs the indicative, How long.

Hors, Hormis, Excepté, &c.

Hors (out, except, but) denotes exclusion and exception. When it comes before a noun of time and place, it requires the preposition dé before it, as also before the infinitive; or it governs the indicative with que: as, Vous les verrez quand ils seront hors de table, You shall see them when they have left table; Hors du royaume, Out of the kingdom: Hors de saison, Out of season; Il ne pouvoit faire pis hors de se pendre, He could not do worse, except or but to hang himself; Il lui a fait toutes sortes de mauvais traitemens, hors qu'il ne l'a pas battu, He has used him as ill as he possibly could, except that he has not beat him; Hors cela nous sommes d'accord, Except that we agree.

2dly, Hormis and excepté (but, except, save, saving) denote also exception and exclusion, but they govern the noun immediately, without de, though they require this preposition before the infinitive; they also govern the indicative with que: as, Il sortirent tous hormis or excepté deux ou trois, They all went out, except or but two or three; Il lui permet tout excepté d'aller aux assemblées, He indulges her in every thing, but going to assemblies; Je me porte assez bien, excepté que mon bras est toujours enflé, or excepté, or hormis mon bras qui, &c. I am pretty well, but my arm is still swelled.

3dly, à la réserve is used in the same sense, and englished after the same manner, but is attended with de before the next noun and infinitive: as, Il a donné tout son bien à ses enfans, à la réserve de ses rentes viagères, He has given all his substance to his children, except his annuities for life; Il a tout pouvoir, à la réserve de conclure, He has full powers, except of concluding.

Loin.

Loin (far, at a distance, a great way off,) requires the preposition de before the next noun and infinitive, or que before the subjunctive: as, Loin du chemin, de la rue, de chez nous, Far from the road, the street, from home: Loin d'ici, Far from hence: Loin de secourir ses alliés, il se déclare contre eux, Far from assisting his allies, he declares himself against them; Loin qu'il soit disposé à vous faire satisfaction, il est homme à vous quereller, Far from being disposed to offer you satisfaction, it is likely he will pick a quarrel with you : Bien loin que cela soit ; It is so far from being so.

Malgré, En Dépit.

Malgré and en dépit (maugré, in spite of, notwithstanding) govern, malgré, the first state of the noun, and en dépit, the second ; they also form with que a conjunction governing the subjunctive : as, Il l'a fait malgré moi, He did it in spite of me : En dépit de lui & de tout le monde, In spite of him and of all the world ; Il le fera malgré qu'il en ait, He shall do it in spite of his teeth ; Bon gré, malgré je l'aurai, Will he, n'll he, I shall get it.

Par.

1st, Par denotes the cause, motive, means, instrument and manner, and is englished thus, by, through, out of, for, at : as, Par ordre du Roi, by the King's order ; Je lui ai fait dire par un tel, I sent him word by such a one ; Il l'a obtenu par mon moyen, He got it through my means ; Vous n'en parlez que par envie, It is out of envy only you speak of it ; Je l'ai fait par cette raison, I did it for that very reason ; Il entra par la porte, mais i. sortit par la fenêtre, He got in at the door, but he got out at the window ; Je le lui ferai tenir par la première occasion, I will send it to him by the first opportunity ; Je compris par là, By that or thereby I understood.

2dly, Par denotes the place, being englished by in, and is construed with several prepositions and adverbs of place : as, Cela se fait par tout pays, That's done in all countries ; Par-tout, Every where ; Par-tout le Royaume, All over the Kingdom ; Par-tout où, Wherever ; Par où ? Which way ? Par ici, This way ; Par là, That way ; Par deçà, This side, on this side ; Par delà, That side, t'other side, on the other side ; Par dedans, Within ; Par dehors, Without ; Par après, By ; Par devers, By ; Par dessus, Upon, over, above, over and above ; Par dessous, Under, underneath ; Par devant, Before, forwards ; Par derrière, Behind, backwards ; Par à côté, By ; Par le haut, Par en haut, Towards the top, upwards ; Par le bas, Par en bas, Downward ; Par haut & par bas, Upwards and downwards ; Par le passé, Formerly, in time past, heretofore ; Par ci par là, Here and there, now and then, at several times ; Par ainsi (obsolete), Therefore,

3dly, Par denotes motion and going through, being englished by through, about, by, out of : as, Il a passé par Paris, He went through Paris. Se promener par les rues; To walk about the streets: Jeter par la fenêtre; To throw out of the window.

Passer par l'examen; To submit to the examination. Il en faut passer par là, Il faut passer par là ou par la fenêtre (a proverb); One, You, They, &c. must submit to that.

4thly, Par is construed with nouns denoting the accidents of the weather, and is englished by in: as, Où allez-vous par cette pluie-là? Where are you going in such a rain as this? Nous partimes par un beau temps; We set out in fair weather.

6thly, Par, construed with nouns, without the article, denotes distribution and division of people, time, place, or any thing signified by the noun, and is sometimes englished by by, in, into, for per; but that distribution is commonly expressed by a, each, or every, before the noun, but without a preposition (at least expressed, for for is grammatically understood): as, Distribuer par chapitres; To divide into chapters: Aller par bandes; To go in companies: Donner tant par tête; To give so much a head: Cent pièces par an; An hundred pounds a year, or per annum: Une Guinée par soldat; A Guinea a soldier, or every soldier.

Pour.

1st, Pour denotes the same relations as in English, to wit, of the end or final cause, motive and reason of action, and the use which a thing is designed for, and is englished by for, upon the account of: as, Cela est pour vous, & ceci pour moi; That is for you, and this for me: J'ai eu tant pour ma part; I have had so much for my share: Pour l'amour de vous; For your sake: Il fera cela pour vous; He will do that upon your account, or for your sake.

2dly, Pour is commonly englished by considering, or with respect to, when it denotes the suitability or unsuitability of a thing: as, Cet enfant est bien avancé pour son âge, or pour le peu de temps qu'il a appris; That child is very forward for his age, or considering the little time he has learnt.

Pour toujours, pour jamais; For ever. Pour le moins; At least. Pour lors; Then, at that time. Pour cet effet; Therefore, and therefore. Je compte son témoignage pour dix autres; I reckon his testimony as good as ten others. Je le tiens pour mon ami; I take him to be my friend. Je n'en dis pas davantage, & pour cause; I say no more, and good reason why, or because of something. Ne laissons pas pour cela de nous divertir; Let us divert ourselves nevertheless, Let us be merry for all that. Pour ainsi dire; As one may say, If I or We may say so, or if I may use the expression.

3dly, Pour is construed with the infinitive (and never de or à) after trop, assez, suffisant, and suffire; and whenever we express the design, cause, and reason of doing something, it is englished by to, in order to, with a design to; as, Il est trop sensé pour faire cela, He has too much sense to do that; Le mérite ne suffit pas pour réussir, Merit is not enough to thrive; Il l'a fait pour me faire de la peine, He did it to make me uneasy; Il a été pendu pour avoir volé sur le grand chemin, He was hanged for robbing upon the highway.

5thly, Pour, between two nouns without the article, or between two infinitives without a preposition, denotes the choice which one makes between two things alike in their nature, but different in their circumstances. The two nouns or verbs thus construed are rendered into English with a paraphrase; as, Chambre pour chambre, j'aime mieux celle-ci que l'autre, Since I must have one of these two rooms, I like this better than the other; Mourir pour mourir, il vaut mieux mourir en combattant qu'en fuyant, When a man must die, it is better to die in fighting than in running away.

6thly, Pour, followed by que, but coming after assez and trop, makes a conjunction governing the subjunctive, and may be englished by that: as, Je ne suis pas assez heureux pour que cela m'arrive; I am not so lucky as that should happen to me: C'est trop outrageant pour que je ne m'en venge pas; It is too outrageous for me not to resent it.

Pour peu que, is another conjunction governing the subjunctive, and is englished by If ever so little, let ever be so little; as, Pour peu que vous en preniez soin; If you take ever so little care of it. Pour peu qu'ils soient jolis; If they are at all pretty.

Pour, before nouns and pronouns personal, signifies sometimes as for: as, Il a beaucoup d'esprit, mais pour du jugement, il n'en a guères; He has much wit, but as for sense, he has but little. Pour moi, je crois; As for me, or for my part, I believe, &c. Pour ce qui est de moi; As for me.

For, before a noun of time, is made in French by pendant, before that noun of time, or durant after it: as, He has drank the water for six weeks; Il a pris les eaux pendant six semaines, or six semaines durant.

Près.

1st, Près denotes proximity of place, and is always attended by de (or the particles du, des), except in some few instances of common discourse, and is englished by by, near, nigh, close to: as, S'asseoir près de quelqu'un; To sit by or near one: Il demeure près du palais; He lives by the palace.

Près is usually construed with trop, si, assez, plus, bien,—and these adverbs are never construed with auprès.

2dly, Près denotes proximity of time, and is construed with the infinitive: as, Il est bien près de midi; It is very near twelve, or upon twelve: Cela n'est pas près d'être fait; That is not near being done: Elle est près d'accoucher; She is near her time.

3dly, Près signifies also almost: as, Il a été près de trois heures à diner; He was almost three hours at dinner: Son armée est de près de cinquante mille hommes; His army is almost fifty thousand strong.

4thly, Près is also used in the sense of save, excepting, but it always comes after its regimen, and therefore is not attended by de: as, C'est un galant homme, à son humeur près; He is a clever man, save his temper: J'ai été payé à cent guinées près; I have been paid all to an hundred guineas: A cent pistoles près, nous sommes d'accord; There is but one hundred pistoles difference between us: A cela près, A telle chose près, Save that, That being excepted, Nevertheless, For all that: Ne laissez pas de conclure votre marché, à cela près; Strike up the bargain for all that, or nevertheless: Il n'est pas à cent guinées près, Il n'en est pas à cela près; He can afford to lose, to give, or to throw away an hundred guineas.

Près, de près, adverbs, signifying near, hard by, close; Plus près, Nearer; Près à près, Close, close together, quite near each other; Plus près à près, Closer; A peu près, Pretty near, near about, nearly, within compass, within a little matter; Il reconnoît une Divinité, mais à peu près de la trempe des Dieux d'Epicure, He believes a God, but it is one much of the same kind with the Gods of Epicurus. (See in my Dictionary for the phrases made of that preposition.)

Auprès.

1st, Auprès denotes also proximity of place, and is attended by de, and englished likewise by near, nigh, by, but signifies particularly next to : as, Sa maison est auprès de la mienne ; His house is next to mine.

2dly, Auprès denotes a relation of domestic or servile attachment, and is rendered by to, with, by, near : as, Etre auprès d'un Seigneur ; To live with a Nobleman : L'Ambassadeur de sa Majesté Britannique auprès du Roi très-Chrétien ; The Ambassador of his Britannic Majesty to the most Christian King : Il me demanda pour être auprès de son fils unique, qui avoit à peu près mon âge ; He asked me as a companion to his only son, who was pretty much of my age.

Etre bien auprès de quelqu'un ; To be in somebody's favour and benevolence : N'être pas bien auprès de quelqu'un ; To be under somebody's disgrace : Pouvoir beaucoup auprès de quelqu'un, Avoir du pouvoir auprès de lui ; To have a great influence or power over somebody's mind : Elle peut tout auprès de lui ; She can do any thing with him.

3dly, Auprès denotes a relation of comparison, and signifies to, in comparison : as, La terre n'est qu'un point auprès du reste de l'univers ; The earth is but one point of the universe.

Auprès is also an adverb of place, of the same signification as the preposition : as, Je ne puis voir cela, si je ne suis auprès, tout auprès ; I cannot see that, except I am near it, hard by. Par auprès ; By, near, a little aside.

Proche.

Proche, near by, hard by, is also attended by de, and is likewise an adverb : as, Proche de la ville, du Palais ; Near the town, or the Palace : Il demeure ici proche ; He lives hard by.

De proche en proche, another adverb, signifying contiguous to one another : as, Couper les bois de proche en proche ; To cut the woods gradually, one after another : Faire des conquêtes de proche en proche ; To make one's conquests contiguous to one another.

Vis-à-vis, à l'opposite.

Vis-à-vis, à l'opposite, over-against, opposite, are also attended by de, and are likewise adverbs : but when they are adverbs, they are not attended by the preposition de : as, Je me plaçai vis-à-vis de lui ; I sat over-against him : Il est vis-à-vis ; He is over the way : A l'opposite de sa maison est une colline ; Over-against his house is a hill.

The preposition de is sometimes left out, in common conversation, after près, proche, and vis-à-vis : as, Près l'Eglise St. Paul ; Near St. Paul's Church ; Proche le pont de Londres ; Near London-bridge : Vis-à-vis la Bourse ; opposite the Royal Exchange.

Vis-à-vis is said of both persons and things, and signifies properly two persons or things facing one another: but à l'opposite, though of the same signification, is said of places and things only, not of persons.

À côté de (by) denotes also proximity of place: as, S'asseoir à côté de quelqu'un; To sit by one: Passer à côté du village; To pass by the village.

sans.

Sans without, denoting exclusion, is construed with the infinitive (which is rendered into English by the gerund); and is besides, with que, a conjunction governing the subjunctive: as, Sans argent, Without money; Sans amis, Friendless; Un homme sans morale, An immoral man; Sans parler, Without speaking; Sans y penser, Unaware, Unwittingly; Vous ferez bien cela, sans que j'y aille, You'll do that well enough, without my going thither; Sans faire semblant de rien, As though he did not.

selon, suivant.

Selon and suivant, according to, agreeably, conformably, or pursuant to, govern the noun immediately, never taking à before it as in English to, and form also an adverb; and along with que, a conjunction governing the indicative: selon is said of an opinion, and suivant of practice: as, On l'a traité selon son mérite; He was treated according to his deserts: Il sera payé selon qu'il travaillera; He shall be paid according to his work: Selon moi; In my judgment or opinion: C'est selon; It is as it happens, May be yes, may be not, That's according: Je me conduirai en tout suivant vos avis; I will conduct myself, or behave, in every thing according or conformably to your advice.

sur.

1st, Sur, denoting place and matter, is upon, on, over, both in the proper and figurative sense: as, Sur la table, Upon the table; Sur la rivière, Upon the river; Sur un vaisseau, On board a ship; Se reposer sur quelqu'un, To rely or depend upon one.

2dly, Sur, denoting time, is about, against, towards, by: as, Je partirai sur les trois heures; I shall set out about or by three: Sur le soir; Towards the evening: Sur la brune; In the dusk of the evening: Il est sur son départ; He is upon his departure.

3dly, Sur, denoting the superiority of power or excellence, is rendered by over: as, Un Prince qui règne sur plusieurs peuples; A Prince that reigns over many nations: Les François ont de grands avantages sur les autres nations; The French have great advantages over the other nations.

Sur signifies also against, by, on account of: as, Sur la fin de la semaine, Against the end of the week: Je me réglerai sur son exemple, I shall regulate myself by his example: Il s'excusa sur son âge, He excused himself on account of his age.

Sur coming before ce que, makes a conjunction governing the indicative, and is Englished by as with the indicative, or on or upon with the gerund: as, Sur ce qu'il apprit que, As he learnt that, or On or Upon hearing that.

The English particle on coming after a verb, of whose action it denotes the continuation, is rendered into French by the verb continuer, or the adverb toujours: as, Play on, Continuez de jouer, or Jouez toujours: Read on, Lisez toujours or Continuez de lire.

Sur is used besides in a great many figurative phrases, which must be learned in my Dictionary.

au-dessus, au-dessous.

1st, Au-dessus (above, over, beyond), au-dessous (below, under), compound prepositions, denoting superiority and inferiority of age, place, rank, and other physical and moral subjects, require besides the other preposition de before their regimen: as, Loger au-dessus or au-dessous de quelqu'un; To lodge above or below one: On enrôle tous les gens au-dessus de quatorze ans, & au-dessous de cinquante; They enlist every body above fourteen, and under fifty: Il fait un peu trop le familier avec ceux qui sont au-dessus de lui; He makes himself too familiar with his betters: Il est au-dessus de ses affaires; He is beforehand with the world: Etre au-dessous d'un autre en mérite, en bien, &c. To be inferior to one in merit, wealth, &c.

2dly, Au-dessus and au-dessous are also adverbs: as, Il occupe le premier étage, & je loge au-dessus; He occupies the first floor, and I lodge above: Hérode fit tuer tous les enfans de l'âge de deux ans & au-dessous; Herod put to death all the children of two years old and under.—Par dessus and par dessous are also both adverbs and prepositions, but without requiring de before their regimen.

Sur, sous, dans, and hors, are prepositions always requiring a regimen: but dessus, dessous, dedans, and dehors, which are adverbs, signifying as much as the prepositions with a noun, become also prepositions, used instead of, and in the same sense as, sur, sous, sans, hors, of which they are composed, whenever they are preceded by the prepositions par and de, or when they both serve for one and the same noun; especially if the two prepositions are the two contraries, or opposite the one to the other. In which case dehors governs its noun immediately, though hors always requires de before it: as,

Cherchez dessus & dessous la table; Look upon and under the table, not sur & sous.

Il n'est ni dedans ni dessous le coffre; It is neither in nor under the chest, not dans & sous.

La balle lui passa par dessus la tête; The ball went over his head, and not par sur.

Il passa par dedans la ville; He went through the city, and not par dans.

On le tira de dessous le lit; He was got from under the bed, and not de sous.

Those cases excepted, sur, sous, dans, hors, must always be prepositions; and dessus, dessous, dedans, and dehors, adverbs.

vers, envers.

1st, Vers (towards, to) denotes a certain side or situation: as, Vers l'Orient, Towards, or to the East, or Eastwards.

2dly, Vers (to) denotes sometimes the residence of a Minister: as, Envoyé vers les Princes d'Allemagne; Envoy to the Princes of Germany.

3dly, Vers (about, towards) denotes time: as, Vers les quatre heures; About four o'clock.

4thly, Envers (towards, to) is only said of persons: as, Sa tendresse envers eux (or à leur égard); His tenderness towards or to them; Ingrat envers son bienfaiteur, Ungrateful to one's benefactor; Je vous défendrai envers & contre tous, I will defend you against all manner of persons.

à l'égard.

à l'égard (as to or for, with respect to, in comparison with) requires de before its regimen: as, A l'égard du prix, nous en conviendrons, As to the price, we shall agree; A l'égard de ce que vous me devez, As to what you owe me; La terre est petite à l'égard du soleil, The earth is small in comparison with the sun, or, if compared to the sun; A mon égard, For my sake, upon my account; On doit être honnête à son égard, & à l'égard des autres, One ought to be honest to oneself, and to others.

au lieu.

1st, Au lieu requires also the other preposition de before the next noun or infinitive, being englished by in the place of, instead of, in lieu of: as, Au lieu de celui que j'attendois, il est venu un homme de sa part, Instead of the person I expected, there came a man from him; Au lieu de secourir son ami, il l'a trahi, Instead of succouring his friend, he has betrayed him.

2dly, Au lieu que is a conjunction governing the indicative, and is englished by whereas, while, when on the contrary: as, Il ne songe qu'à son plaisir, au lieu qu'il devoit veiller à ses affaires, He minds nothing but his pleasure, when, on the contrary, he should look after his own concerns.

à rebours, au rebours.

à rebours (against the hair or grain, the wrong way, preposterously, cross, quite contrary), which is an adverb, is also made a preposition with de: as, Vergeter du drap à rebours, To brush cloth against the grain; Il fait tout à rebours, au rebours de ce qu'on lui dit, He does every thing the wrong way, quite the reverse of what he is bid.

à travers, au travers.

A travers (through, cross), comes immediately before its regimen, and au travers requires de: as, A travers le corps, or Au travers du corps, Through the body; Il se fit jour au travers des ennemis, or à travers les ennemis, He made his way through the enemies; à travers champs, Cross the fields; Regarder au travers d'une jalousie, To look through a lattice-window; Parler à tort & à travers, To talk at random.

In some occasions two prepositions come together before a noun, as in this instance, Il peint d'après nature; He draws by the life.

These six prepositions have the right of governing others before the noun: de, pour, excepté, hors, jusque, par.

De governs these eight: entre, après, chez, avec, par, en, dessus, dessous: as, Plusieurs d'entre eux y allèrent, Many of them went thither; Je viens de chez vous, I come from your house; Je sors d'avec lui, I have just left him; La partie d'en haut, The upper part; De par le Roi (style of proclamation, &c.)

Pour governs these five, à, après, dans, devant, derrière.

Ce sera pour après le diner; It will be for after dinner.

C'est pour dans quinze jours; It is for a fortnight hence.

Ce morceau-ci est destiné pour devant la porte, celui-là pour à côté, & l'autre pour derrière le lit; This piece is designed for before the door, that for the side, and this other for behind the bed.

Jusque governs these six, à (or au or aux), par, en, dans, sur, sous: as, Jusqu'au plancher, as high, or as far as the ceiling; Jusques dans le lit, Even in bed; Jusques par delà la rivière, Even beyond the river, &c.

Par governs these eight; chez, à côté, dessus, dessous, devant, derrière, deçà, delà; as, Passez par chez nous, Call at our house; Par dessus la tête, Above one's head; Par delà la mer, Beyond the sea, &c.

Excepté and hors govern these nineteen: chez, dans, sous, sur, devant, derrière, parmi, vers, avant, après, entre, depuis, avec, par, durant, pendant, à, de, and en. Examples may be found every where.

Prepositions always come before the noun which they govern, never after, as they do sometimes in English: as, Avec qui, or à qui voulez-vous que je parle? Whom will you have me speak with, or to? Except these three, après, durant, près: as,

Quelque temps après or après quelque temps; Some time after. Sa vie durant, or durant sa vie, During, or for his life.

A son humeur près. Save his humour.

Thus it is not necessary for après and durant to come after the noun, but only for près.

From a great many nouns prepositions are formed, by putting before them some particle, especially à, au, aux, en: which compound prepositions are always attended by de, du, des, before the noun: as,

Au milieu de la compagnie; In the middle of the company.

En présence de ses amis; In the presence of his friends.

A l'insçu de son père; Unknown to his father.

A raison de vingt pour cent; At the rate of twenty per cent.

These prepositions, de, contre, sur, sous, sans, which are seldom, if ever, repeated in English, must always be repeated in French before each noun governed: as,

Beaucoup d'amour pour le plaisir, & de haine pour le travail;
Much love for pleasure, and aversion for work.

Je suis sans amis, sans protection, sans secours, & je meurs de faim;

I am friendless, without protection, without help, and starving

These others must be also repeated when the following noun, or nouns, are not synonymous, or pretty near of the same signification, à, par, pour, avec: as,

Il est venu à bout de ses desseins par les ruses & par les armes de mes ennemis;

He has compassed his ends by the devices and arms of my enemies.

Devices and arms, not signifying the same thing, par is repeated: but if there were par l'assistance & les armes, as assistance and arms signify pretty near the same, par should not be repeated.

Il n'y a rien qui porte tant les hommes à aimer ou à haïr leurs semblables, que, &c.

Nothing induces men so much to love or hate their equals, as, &c.

To love and hate are the two contraries, and therefore à is repeated.

Il n'y a rien qui porte tant les hommes à louer & à imiter leurs semblables, que, &c.

Nothing induces men so much to commend and imitate their equals, as, &c.

To commend and to imitate are not contraries indeed, but they are different, therefore à is repeated.

Il n'y a rien qui porte tant les hommes à aimer & estimer leurs semblables, que, &c.

Nothing induces men so much to love and esteem their equals, as, &c.

To love and esteem are nearly of the same signification, therefore à is not repeated.

On les envoya pour avitailler les vaisseaux, & pour sonder le port;
They were sent to victual the ships, and sound the haven.

To victual and sound are very different, therefore pour is repeated.

On les envoya au port pour radouber les vaisseaux, & en construire de nouveaux;

They were sent to harbour to refit the ships, and build new ones

To refit and build are pretty near alike, therefore pour is not repeated.

Further Observations upon some English Prepositions.

These particles, again, back, away, up, down, in, out of, over, forth, &c. oftentimes make part of the signification of the verbs which they attend, and are not particularly expressed in French: as, to keep back, retenir; to take away, emporter; to come up, monter; to take up arms, prendre les armes; to lay them down, les quitter, les mettre bas; to pull off, arracher; to go, or set forth, partir, &c.

Aboard a ship, is à bord d'un vaisseau; but to embark on board a ship, is s'embarquer sur un vaisseau, monter sur un vaisseau.

About answers to these different French prepositions.

sur,) about the year's end; sur la fin de l'année. [affaire. touchant,) I come to you about that business; Je viens vous voir touchant cette vers,) about the latter end of the book; vers la fin du livre.
dans,) What do they cry about the streets? Qu'est-ce qu'on crie dans les rues? par,) He took him about the middle; Il le prit par le milieu du corps.

Against, which signifies contre in its general sense, denotes also Time, and is rendered sometimes by sur: as, Against the end of the week; Sur la fin de la semaine: Sometimes without any preposition at all: as, Your shoes will be made against after to-morrow; Vos souliers seront faits après demain.—Against is also a conjunction, several ways expressed in French: as, Against he comes; En attendant qu'il vienne: Let all things be ready against we come; Que tout soit prêt à notre retour.

Away, another particle, so variously and elegantly used, cannot be rendered in French without a verb, which is also performed several ways, conformably to the genius of the language: as, Away with this; Otez tout ceci: Away with him to the University; Qu'on l'envoie à l'Université: I cannot away with it; Je ne saurois souffrir, or digérer cela: Away with these fopperies; Défaites-vous de ces sottises. To eat a bit and away; Manger un morceau à la hâte, avant de partir: To scold one away; Obliger quelqu'un de s'en aller, à force de le gronder: He shall not go away with it so; Il n'en sera pas quitte à si bon marché.

Both, before two nouns copulated with and, is rendered in French, either by et before each noun, or by tant before the first noun, and que before the second, or is not expressed at all: as, Both young and rich; Et jeune & riche, Tant jeune que riche: Both by sea and land; Par mer & par terre, Tant par mer que par terre: Both at home and abroad; Au dedans & au dehors, & au dedans & au dehors, Tant au dedans qu'au dehors.

CHAP. X.

Of CONJUNCTIONS.

OF Conjunctions, some govern, that is, will have the next verb in the indicative mood, some in the subjunctive, and some in the infinitive.

1°. These following conjunctions govern the indicative:

ainsi que,	as.	de même que,	even as.
tout ainsi que,	just as.	si,	if

si bien que,	}	so that.	après que,	}	after that, when.
de sorte que,			depuis que,		since
de manière que,	}	in such a manner that.	puisque,	}	seeing, being that.
de façon que,			vu que,		considering that.
tellement que,	}	so that.	attendu que,	}	whereas
comme,			au lieu que,		in proportion as
en tant que,	}	as.	à mesure que,	}	as long as
à ce que,			tant que,		as much as
comme si,	}	as if, as though.	autant que,	}	besides that.
lorsque,			outré que,		add to that.
quand,	}	when.	joint que,	}	as, according to.
pendant que,			selon que,		perhaps.
tandis que,	}	whilst.	suivant que,	}	whereas, forasmuch
à cause que,			peut-être que,		as.
parce que,	}	because,	d'autant que,	}	now is it that ?
c'est que,			que,		as long as.
à-peine,	}	scarcely, hardly*.	or est-il que?	}	with a proviso
aussitôt que,			aussi long-temps que,		that.
si tôt que	}	as soon as.	bien entendu que,	}	and the others not included in the next list.
dès que,			que,
pourquoi,	}	why.		}
d'où vient que?			que?

2°. These Conjunctions govern the Subjunctive:

afin que,	}	that, to the end	au cas que,	}	in case that,
pour que,		that.	en cas que,		or if.
avant que,	}	before.	non que,	}	not that.
sans que,		without that.	non pas que,		not but.
bien que,	}	though.	ce n'est pas que,	}	it is not but that.
quoique,		although.	pourvu que,		so if, provided
encore que,	}	whether and or.	moyennant que,	}	that.
soit que,		suppose that.	à moins que,		unless
supposez que,	}	let us suppose that	si ce n'est que,	}	if ever so little.
supposons que,		put the case that.	pour peu que,		upon condition
posez le cas que,	}	I grant	à condition que †,	}	that.
à la bonne heure que,		that, &c.

* à peine is followed by que in the second part of the sentence, and that que is Englished by than, or but.

† à condition que, is also construed with the future and conditional.

excepté que,	except that.	tant s'en faut	} we, he, they
hormis que,	} save that.	que,
hors que,		but that.	bien loin que,
sinon que,	for fear that.	malgré que,	for all that
de peur que,	lest.	non obstant	} notwithstanding
de crainte que,	far.	que,	} ing that.
loin que*,	very far from.	Dieu veuille que,	God grant.
bien loin que*,	till, until.	Plaise, or Plût	} would to
jusqu'à ce que,	it is so far	à Dieu que,	} God.
tant s'en faut que,	from.	A Dieu ne	} God forbid.
il s'en faut bien que*,		plaise que,

* These three are used in compound sentences, and require que before the second part of the sentence; but Il s'en faut bien que is used in simple sentences.

3°. These govern the infinitive :

à and de,	to.	au lieu de,	instead of,
par,	by.	loin de,	far from.
pour,	to, in order to.	bien loin de,	very far from.
après,	after.	excepté de,	except to.
sans,	without.	avant de,	} before.
jusqu'à,	to that degree, till.	avant que de,
sauf à,	save.	à moins de,	} unless.
faute de,	for want of.	à moins que de,
afin de,	in order to.	plûtôt que	} rather than to; and de peur de,	} for fear of.	de,
de crainte de,

for de crainte que and de crainte de, see page 343, C.

4°. The French use the conjunction que in the second part of a compound sentence, instead of repeating the following conjunctions, expressed in the first :

si,	if.	pourquoi,	why.	parce que,	because.
quand,	} when.	comme,	as.	quoique,	although.
lorsque,		peut-être,	perhaps.	afin que,	that; and others composed of que; which particle always governs the subjunctive, when it stands for si, quoique, and afin que; and therefore causes the verb, governed in the indicative in the first part of the sentence, to be changed into the subjunctive in the second part; but the verb continues in the indicative, when que stands for quand, lorsque, comme, &c., as,

Si vous m'aimez, & que vous vouliez me le persuader, for & si vous voulez me le persuader; If you love me, and want to persuade me of it.

Afin que vous en soyez sûr, & que vous ne croyiez pas qu'on vous trompe; That you may be sure of it, and don't think that one cheats you.

La raison pourquoi il ne pouvoit venir alors, & que les autres ne se soucioient guères de l'attendre, &c. The reason why he could not come at that time, and the others did not care to wait for him.

Peut être l'aime t-il, mais qu'il ne veut pas l'avouer, de peur, &c.
Perhaps he loves her, but is unwilling to own it, lest, &c.

Afin may be attended in the same sentence, both by que and de, governing each its respective mood, viz. que the subjunctive and de the infinitive; but que must come the last: as,

Afin de vous convaincre, & que vous n'en doutiez plus;

In order to convince you, and that you doubt no more of it.

5°. When is both lorsque and quand, indifferently used for one another, except that quand denotes time in a more positive and determinate manner, and lorsque denotes occasion: as,

Ne manquez pas de venir, quand je vous appellerai;

Be sure to come, when I shall call for you.

On ne fait jamais tant de folies, que quand on aime; we never commit so many extravagancies, as when we are in love.

On se fait aimer lorsqu'on aime; It is by loving we make ourselves beloved.

Les chanoines vont à l'office, quand la cloche sonne; Canons go to divine service, when the bell rings.

Et lorsqu'ils assistent à l'office, ils font leur devoir; And when they assist, or, by assisting in the service, they do their duty.

When a question is asked, we always do it with quand, and never lorsque: as, Quand viendrez-vous? When will you come?

Quand being construed with the conditional, has the signification of though or although; and même, or bien même, is sometimes added to quand, to give more weight to what one says: as,

Quand il y consentiroit, or Quand même, Quand bien même il y consentiroit, cela ne pourroit pas se faire; Although he would consent to it, that could not be done.

Sometimes, also, though may be left out in French, that is, the French conjunctions quand, or quand même may be suppressed in the sentence; then the pronoun expressing the subject of the verb comes after the verb, and the verb is made by the subjunctive; as,

Fût-elle riche à millions, je n'en voudrois point;

Though she were worth several millions, I would not have her: which answers to this English locution: Were she worth, &c

6°. Si is never construed with the conditional as in English. Therefore that tense with if is made by the imperfect in French: as, If he should come, S'il venoit.

Si, after et, signifies yet, or although: as,
Il travaille toujours, & si il meurt de faim;
 He is always at work, and yet is starving.
 But that is of the low style.

7°. D'où vient que (conjunction interrogative) requires immediately after it the pronoun, or noun, that expresses the subject of the verb of the question: whereas, with the other conjunctions interrogative, it comes after the verb: as,

D'où vient que vous ne voulez pas faire cela? or,
Pourquoi ne voulez-vous pas faire cela? Why won't you do that?

8°. Pourtant, cependant, and toutefois (yet, however); toutefois begins to be obsolete.—Pourtant always comes after the verb, or between the auxiliary and the participle, if the tense is compound, and assures more positively than cependant.—Cependant may indifferently begin the sentence, or come after the verb; and they both make a contrast with these two other conjunctions quoique and bien que: as,

Quoiqu'il ait tant étudié, il ne sait pourtant pas cela (or) cependant il ne sait pas cela: Although he has learnt so much, yet he don't know that.

9°. Donc, c'est pourquoi (therefore, then); c'est pourquoi always begins the sentence, and donc never does, but always comes the second or third word; except, however, when the case is to draw a consequence of premises: as,

C'est pourquoi vous m'obligerez de faire cela, or Vous m'obligerez donc de faire cela;

Therefore you will oblige (that is compel) me to do that.

Il rougit ; donc il est coupable ;

He blushes ; therefore he is guilty.

Encore, being an adverb, signifies again, yet, still: being a conjunctive copulative, it signifies even, also ; and else and besides in such expressions as these. Qui encore? Who else? Quoi encore? What else, what besides? But encore is besides a conjunction adversative, especially when & si comes before it, which signifies, and is Englished by besides and nevertheless: as,

Il est extrêmement riche, encore n'est il pas content, (or) & si encore il se plaint ;

He is extremely rich, yet he is not contented, or nevertheless he complains.

Encore has a sense of restriction, in some ways of speaking rendered into English thus :

Encore s'il ne faisoit pas l'entendu, on lui passeroit son ignorance ;

Should he not pretend to great matters, one would not mind his ignorance

Encore s'il savoit quelque chose, mais il ne sait rien du tout ;

If he knew something, well and good : but he knows nothing at all.

Au moins, du moins, and pour le moins, are three conjunctions of restriction, signifying at least, but which must not be confounded : au moins being used to say something to one by way of advice, as also to clear oneself of something, and englished thus :

Si vous ne voulez pas prendre son parti, du moins ne vous déclarez pas contre lui ;

If you won't take his part, at least do not declare against him.

Prenez garde au moins à vous retirer de bonne heure ;

Take care to come home betimes, I must desire you, or, Be sure to keep good hours, I beg of you.

Au moins ce n'est pas moi qui en suis cause ;

I am not the cause of it, however, or, I can tell you.

Sometimes also tout is put before these conjunctions, and tout au moins, tout du moins, to denote still a greater restriction of what one says.

This particle conjunctive tout is likewise sometimes put before these comparative terms, comme, de même que, aussi bien que, as well as ; autant que, as much as ; and aussi peu que, as little as : which may be properly englished by just or full : as,

Vous fuites tout comme il vous plaît : You do just as you please.

Je vis tout aussi bien en Angleterre qu'en France ;

I live full as well in England as in France.

From the abuse sometimes made of the conjunction transitive à propos, very much used in conversation, is come this proverbial phrase, A propos de bottes, comment se porte Mr. votre père ? (word for word) Now we are speaking of boots, how does your father do ? The meaning of which is, Now we don't speak or think of your father. How does he do ?

10°. These conjunctions, either and or, used in the same sentence before nouns and verbs, are rendered into French, either by soit, before the first noun, or verb, and or by ou, before the other or others : or by soit, before each noun or verb ; which last way is more emphatical : as, [him ;

Either through gratitude, or clemency, or policy, he pardoned
Soit par reconnaissance, ou par clémence, ou par politique, il lui pardonna, (or) Soit par reconnaissance, soit par clémence, soit par politique, il lui pardonna.

¶ Sometimes the preposition is left out after soit ; and we may say likewise Soit reconnaissance, soit clémence, soit politique, il lui pardonna.]

When the same conjunctions disjunctive serve to distinguish two things, or two parts of a sentence, they are also rendered into French by soit repeated, by ou, likewise repeated : or by soit before the first noun, and ou before the second : as,

An exercise either of the body, or the mind,

Un exercice soit du corps, soit de l'esprit, or

Un exercice soit du corps ou de l'esprit.

Either he is a wise man or a fool ; Ou il est sage, ou il est fou.

11°. The conjunctions whether and or, are rendered into French either by soit que repeated, or by soit que before the first part of the sentence, and ou que before the other : as,

Whether you have done that or no ;

Soit que vous ayez fait cela, soit que vous ne l'ayez pas fait : or,
Soit que vous ayez fait cela, ou que vous ne l'ayez pas fait : or only Soit que vous ayez fait cela, ou non ; but soit que repeated, is much better.

12°. Or else is rendered into French by ou bien, or ou only, or sinon: as,

The case is so ; or else I should have been deceived ;

La chose est ainsi, ou bien, or ou l'on m'auroit trompé.

Moreover, observe, that some words answer to divers parts of speech together, according to the grammatical use which they are put to : as, après, which is an adverb in the first following example, a preposition in the second, and a conjunction in the third :

Il parla après,

He spoke afterwards.

Il parla après moi,

He spoke after me.

Après qu'il eut parlé,

After he had spoken.

SECTION I.

THE ANALOGY OF SPEECH;

OR, THE GROUNDS AND PRINCIPLES OF THE ART OF SPEAKING CONTINUED.

WE have seen, in the Introduction to this work, that the words of which speech is composed, and the letters which compose those words, are signs, invented by men, to represent their thoughts. Now these signs have been found out in a quite natural manner. For, as the mouth is the organ that forms them, it has been observed, that some sounds are formed with a larger some with a less degree of opening the mouth, others through the throat, and others through the nose. And likewise according to the differences observed in the forming of the articulation, that is, as the breath emitted from the lungs is, in its way through the throat and mouth, more or less forcibly compressed by the palate, the lips, or the teeth, or any where intercepted, the consonants have been distinguished into Labial, Hissing, Palatal, Guttural, Liquid, and Aspirative.

Our acute sounds were called by the Ancients narrow or close vowels; and they called broad and open vowels our grave sounds; they had neither guttural nor nasal vowels. They called mute our weak consonants: but our distinction of them into weak and strong has a better foundation in nature.

And indeed B, and P, have so great an affinity the one to the other, that some nations often pronounce one for the other. The Germans pronounce ponum finum for bonum vinum. The Latins as Quintilian reports, pronounced the b in obtinere exactly like p. The French do it too in obtenir, and perhaps the English in to obtain.

There are many English and Dutch words that differ only in one of these two letters F and V. Father, for example, being pronounced Vather; and the German Swisses pronounce French V's like F's, and B's like P's, and D's like T's, saying Foulez-vous foir, une pelle tame, instead of Voulez-vous voir une belle dame? Will you see a fine lady? Foulez-vous poire tu fin? or in English, I will you trink some fwine? instead of Voulez-vous boire du vin?

The relation there is between C, Q, and K, is so obvious, that there is perhaps no language but these three letters have the same power and articulation before a, o, u.

It is the same with G and J before some vowels, as in George, that might as well be spelt Jorje. Moreover G is only a lessening or decreasing of C, as D is of T: nay d final is articulated in French with all the power and force of t, when the next word begins with a vowel, as gran tami for grand ami, great friend.

The Ancients called L, M, N, R liquid, or flowing, as consonants of a very agreeable and easy articulation; though strictly speaking, L alone deserves that appellation. The Romans found the articulation of M so swelling in the ear, and so disagreeable, that, most times, they did not pronounce it even in prose, saying die' hanc for diem; restitutu' iri, for restitutum (in their law): which made Quintilian call it mugientem litteram. For the same reason the Greeks never used it in the end of words. The same, after the Chaldeans, often changed r into λ, saying πλευμων for πνευμων, from whence pulmo is derived: and Μαλλιος for Manlius, &c.—As to R, we daily see many people who cannot pronounce it.

Again. L and R, Z and J, or G, are so near a kin to one another, that those who cannot pronounce R, on account of its roaring articulation, naturally fall into the pronunciation of L; as likewise those who cannot pronounce J, or G, before a vowel, express of course the articulation of Z, saying King Zorze and the Loyal Family, for King George and the Royal Family.

S had no other articulation in Latin but its hissing one; but in our modern languages it takes the articulation of z, when it comes between two vowels; as in the French word misère, from the Latins, which they pronounce misseria.

H serves only to denote aspiration. The Oriental languages had three or four guttural letters, serving to that purpose only. The Romans have only preserved that letter, with which they supplied in their language, what the Greeks used to denote by their esprits rudes, and aspirate consonants. It keeps still something of that use in many English words spelt with th, which answers the θ of the Greeks. Besides, it does not always denote aspiration, in our modern languages, but most times serves only to show the Etymology of words.

The Ancients called X and Z double, because they were, the first as much as cs and gz, and the other as ds. The Greeks had, besides, their φ , which was as much as ps.

X keeps still the same power and articulation with us. Z has another more simple and less harsh. But the English have some other double consonants, especially G and J, which are as much as dg or dj, and e before h, followed by a vowel, which is as much as tch, as in the word chin, which is pronounced tshin

It is still a great difficulty to resolve, among Grammarians, whether the Latins had our J and V, and therefore whether or not they had Triphthongs in their language (that is, the meeting of three vowels in one syllable, each expressed by its peculiar and usual sound). One may see what learned Grammarians have written thereupon. It is to be observed here, that although the English gave the name of vowels to the five or six first figures, yet when they pronounce I, U, and Y, by themselves, they express the natural and peculiar sound of Diphthongs, expressing in the sound of U by itself, the very same that is heard in pronouncing the pronoun you; and in the sound of Y, the very same that is heard in why.

However it be, as to the invention of these sounds and articulations, and of the figures that represent them, as also the different distinctions Grammarians have made of them, it is certain that in every language reason has been left unregarded, which prescribed, in the first place, to make as many vowels as the mouth can naturally form simple sounds, and mark them with so many simple figures or letters. Thus, although five vowels only are usually reckoned, yet the Greeks have seven or eight, marked with so many simple figures: and since they thought the difference in pronouncing one and the same sound, as e and o, sufficient to make two several and distinct sounds of each of these two vowels, according as it is formed with a larger or less degree of opening the mouth, and have likewise marked them with very different figures $\epsilon, \eta, \omicron, \omega$; had they done the same thing with respect to the other vowels, and considered the difference that may be found in each of them, according to the various opening of the mouth, and as the breath which forms them is affected in its passage by the several parts of that organ, they should have discovered at least sixteen or seventeen, all which are found in the French language; a, â, é or ai, è or ait, é or ais, e or eu, i, o, ô, or aux, u, an, en, in, on, un, eux, ou: all sounds as simple as a, e, i, o, u, and which could have been represented by simple figures thus:

a, â, e, é, è, ê, i, o, ω, u, ā, ē, ī, ō, ū, ε, ou.

Again: it is certain that it would have been more natural, and more convenient for the mutual correspondence of nations, to have marked with simple figures the articulations which we mark with two figures, though we only intend to express and represent a consonant. Such are the articulations of gn and ill before vowels, which could have been marked, the first called n liquid, with ν ; and the second called l liquid with λ . Such is also the articulation of ch, or the English sh, marked in Hebrew with the simple letter ψ (schim). So that the French language should have had about forty figures or letters, instead of its five-and-twenty, to mark its sounds and articulations in the most natural manner, as appears by the tables prefixed to the Treatise of the Pronunciation: without taking notice here of other figures, that might have been invented for the perfection of writing, as the Greeks did their ξ , or ξ , ψ , τ , and $\sigma\chi$, which are only abbreviations for cs, ps, st, and sk of which we have preserved only X.

Another thing, that reason prescribed in the invention of figures or letters, is, that one and the same sound should not be marked with more figures than one, or with different figures; as the sound of ea in read, which is marked with ee in feed; or ea in bread denoted by e in bred, bed, &c. nor that the same figures should have marked different sounds, as ea, that denotes in earth the sound of French a; in bread that of French e, in meat that of French i, &c.

For the like reason, one and the same articulation should not have been marked with these three different figures, C, K, Q: nor should C have taken the power of s before e and i; nor g before the same vowels, have been pronounced otherwise than before a, o, u, nor t have been articulated like s before i, followed by another vowel.

Lastly. Reason required that every figure should mark some sound or articulation; that is, that no letter should be set down in any word but what is pronounced. For although the superfluous letters in words often denote their Etymology, modern languages being all derived from the ancient ones; as p in the French word champs denotes its being derived from the Latin campus, and t in chants from cantus; yet it seems that the inconvenience would have been less to pronounce these words champs and chants conformable to the whole import and force of the letters, even without excepting the characteristic letter of the plural number, than to mark with these so many different figures (amps and ants) the simple sound of a (nasal), or an.

Upon the whole, there are abuses common to all languages, and there is no possibility of remedying them, since the Emperor Claudius could not get one new letter only introduced into the Roman language. (It was the Diganima of the Æolians, very likely to serve as V.) But there is no nation that has less reason to complain that the French write otherwise than they pronounce, than the English; there being perhaps no language in the world, wherein the sounds are marked with more different letters, and the same letters mark more various sounds, than in the English tongue; which, besides, wants the foundation essential to all languages, I mean a Grammar, to promote the learning of it, and make it easy to foreigners.

¶ This was written in 1750.]

From these observations upon letters it follows,

1st, That in all languages there are more simple sounds or vowels, than are used to be marked with simple figures or letters.

2dly, That of these three compound sounds, C, K, Q, two of them are useless, they all three expressing but one and the same articulation: as likewise the power and use of G, before e and i, in some languages, which marks no other articulation but that of J, and therefore might have kept before these two vowels, the same power and use that it has in all languages before a, o, u.

3dly, That these three consonants might, nay should, have been supplied by three or more others, essential in some languages, to mark the liquid articulations denoted by gn and ill, as also the articulations of ch, sh, &c.

4thly, That the Hebrews and Greeks, from whom the Latins took their letters, always began with a consonant to name the letters of that appellation, calling, the Greeks their B Beta, and the Hebrews, their ב Beth, &c. But that the Latins, from whom our modern languages have taken their consonants, with their appellations, most arbitrarily, and injudiciously too, changed that natural order, calling el, em, en, &c. the λ Lambda, μ Mu, ν Nu, of the Greeks, and the \beth Lamed, \mem Mem, νm Nun of the Hebrews. They had indeed some reason to shorten the appellation of consonants, calling only bee and ell what the others called beta, lambda, &c. But it was contrary to all reason they began the appellation of some of them with the vowel e: although they, at the same time, abstained, either through caprice or reason, to put e before some others, and rather chose to say, bee, cee, dee, than eb, ec, ed, as they said el, em, en, &c.

5thly, That double letters, though ever so useful for the perfection of writing, yet are not necessary in the language; they expressing and denoting no peculiar articulation, but what may be, and is, in effect, denoted by other letters; and therefore we could as well be without x, as without ψ , τ , and $\sigma\chi$, instead of which we use the two letters ps, st, sc. (So that even omitting K, Q, and G, which we have seen to be useless in speech, having no other power than C and J; and reducing therefore the letters to the number of twenty-one, or even twenty (for H is no letter, and denotes only aspiration); these twenty letters not only serve as much as the forty, which I have said the French language should have had, if regard had been had to reason in the invention of sounds and figures: but also they are sufficient for all languages that ever were, or ever can be, to distinguish every modification of the voice, and by their various combinations to form that infinite number of words which represent our thoughts.

“ There are, indeed, but twenty-six in our tongue (says the author of an English Grammar), and yet they may be so variously disposed as to make more than five hundred and seventy-six several words of two letters; and twenty-six times as many words may be formed of three letters; that is to say, fifteen thousand and six; and twenty-six times as many more may be made of four several letters, that is, nine hundred thousand and thirty-six; and so on in proportion. From this manifold generation of words, from the various combinations of letters, we may judge of their vast variety, as being indeed not much less than infinite.”—Eng. Gram. N. 2. p. 61.

These characters, or letters, were called in Greek γραμματα, from whence the word Grammar is derived: not that Grammar treats of sounds and letters only, but because they are the foundation and basis of speech. And the set of letters used in any language, is called Alphabet, from the two first Greek letters Αλφα, Βητα.

A syllable, which we have said to be part of words, either spoken or written, is derived from the Greek word συλλαβη, which is, Comprehension, to wit, of letters in one sound, though a single vowel can make a syllable. Thus much for sounds and letters.

The several species of words of which speech is composed, is also a natural consequence of what passes in our mind : and the order in which they have been invented for representing our thoughts, has necessarily its ground in the nature of things.

The first thing men did, was to give names to the various beings of the universe, in the middle of which they lived, and of which they wanted to speak. Considering therefore every being as a thing subsisting, as well as themselves, in nature, they called Nouns or Substantives the words of this species.

As they found it disagreeable to repeat the same name, when they wanted to speak of its subject several times together ; in order to remedy that inconveniencè they invented a species of words, whose part is to denote what other words are to name. They have been well named Pronouns, as if one said, which is used instead of nouns. And this proves evidently that these words commonly ranged among pronouns, mon, ma, mes, my ; ton, ta, tes, thy ; son, sa ses, his ; notre, nos, our ; votre, vos, your le mien, mine, &c. quelque some, quel what, chaque every, &c. do not belong to this species of words, being only adnouns qualifying and restraining, instead of articles, the sense of the nouns before which they come.

As men cannot speak of things but in saying what they are, or do, or what happens to them, that is, in giving them qualities, or showing their actions by events, it was necessary to establish words for these two ends. Those used to denote the Qualities are called Adnouns, or Adjectives, because they are added and joined to the nouns or substantives, to qualify the things named by them. Such is the third species of words.

The words designed to denote the actions and events, caused by the perpetual motion of all the parts of the universe, make the fourth species, called Verbs ; which signifies speech in an eminent sense, because there can be no speech without verbs.

In considering the Qualifications and Actions, it appeared that they were susceptible of different modifications. From thence arose the Adverbs ; which are only modifications of actions and qualifications, and signify what is added to the verbs.

The number of the same objects, or the repeating of the same actions caused of course the invention of another species of words proper to denote Calculation or Reckoning : and these are the Numerals, or nouns of number, which cannot be ranged in any other class, being as different from the other words by their accidents, as by the origin and cause of their institution.

Afterwards men saw that they wanted words proper to denote the relations that are put between things, in order to fix the idea of the one by that of the other. For which purpose they invented the Prepositions, which (as their signification is,) being put before a noun, denote the relation which it has with the noun or verb that comes before.

They likewise perceived that, things being often connected together, it was necessary to express those connections, in order to make a coherent and well-connected speech; which occasioned the species of words called Conjunctions, whose name shows plain enough the part which they act in speech.

Lastly, After providing for the words fit to express the name, denotation, qualification, action, modification, calculation, as likewise the relations and connections of things, they wanted moreover to express the passions and emotions of their mind; and to that end they invented Particles, which are more or less in number, according to the genius of languages.

Thus the Art of Speech turns upon nine species of words, vulgarly called by Grammarians Parts of Speech. Some add to them the Article; but I think it is only an accident in the noun, its power being to extend or restrain the signification of it: nouns being as often used without the article as with it; and therefore I have ranged the Article among the Particles. Others make a particular species of words of the Participle, which is nothing but a mode of the verb, and will not allow the adjectives to be one, but confound them with the substantives, though essentially different; so that Grammarians are not agreed as yet concerning the number of the parts of speech, nor what they are.

I have kept in my Grammar to the number and divisions of the parts of speech which seem to be more natural; though, upon the whole, it is very indifferent how many I admit, and how I divide them, so I thoroughly explain the proper use and construction of the words of the French language: which I think I have done in the most accurate and intelligible manner, in the third part of this Grammar. The narrow compass of this work does not permit me to enlarge more upon the relations that the parts of speech have to each other, and to the nature of things; nor to treat of the subdistinctions of the same parts of speech, and the reasons of them. (One may consult thereupon the learned Authors of la Grammaire raisonnée, Port-Royal's Latin Grammar, and the notes upon the English Grammar, which contains an abridgment of the said works.) I shall only set down here the chief divisions, with the significations of such Grammatical Terms as most occur, and of which one must not be quite ignorant.

Words are considered both with respect to their Figure or Frame, and with respect to their Species or Origin.

Words, considered with respect to their figure, are either Simple, as, juste, just, dire to say; or Compound, that is, made up of one or more words, or that take some syllabical adjection; as injuste unjuste, redire to say again.

Words, considered with respect to their species, are either Primitive, which come from no other word, as mort death, babil prattling; or Derivative, which come from another word, as, mortel mortal, babiller to prattle.

Nouns are divided into Substantive and Adjective by most Grammarians. Nouns substantive are again divided into Proper and Appellative, or Common; and this last into Abstract, Patrial, Equivocal, Synonyma's, Verbal, Augmentative, and Diminutive.

A Proper noun is the particular name of any singular person, or thing, or place: as, George, Londres, London, la Tamise, the Thames.

An Appellative, or Common noun, is that which is applicable to all things of the same kind; as, Animal, homme a man, Roi a king, ville a city, rivière a river.

Men have besides joined two accessory Ideas to that of the noun. The one is a respect to the sex, called Gender: the other a respect to unity, or plurality, which is called Number; and both together are called Accidence.

An Abstract noun is a substantive derived from an adjective, expressing the quality of that adjective in general, without regard to the thing in which the quality is: as, bonté goodness, from bon good; douceur sweetness, from doux sweet.

A Patrial or Gentile noun is derived from a Substantive Proper, signifying one's country: as, François a Frenchman, Parisien of Paris, Bourguignon, Gascon, &c, of Burgundy, Gascogne, &c.

An Equivocal noun is that which has a double meaning; as, un livre a book, une livre a pound.

Synonyma's are words of the same import, or which express the same thing several ways; as, chemin way, route road, &c.

Verbal nouns are substantives or adjectives derived from a verb; as, amour love, aimable lovely, from aimer to love; parleur talker, from parler to talk, &c.

Augmentative and Diminutive nouns are substantives importing an increase, or lessening of the signification of their primitive: as, lourdaut a loggerhead, from lourd heavy; fillette a little girl, from fille a girl; arbrisseau a shrub, from arbre a tree; lapereau a young rabbit, from lapin a rabbit, &c.—Some diminutives have no resemblance at all to the substantives of which they lessen the signification: as, bidet a pony, being the diminutive of cheval a horse; marcassin, a young wild boar, of sanglier a wild boar.

§ I. Observations on the Construction, Use, and Signification of certain Words, which most frequently occur in Speech, wherein chiefly consists the IDIOM of FRENCH.

Grammar should, if it were possible, treat of all the words of a language, and take notice of the signification of each singly; for it is not the art of making oneself understood and how, but of exhibiting one's thoughts with propriety and perspicuity; which cannot be done without a thorough knowledge of all the various significations and constructions of the words of which it is composed. The Genius of a language consists in the latter, the other relates to its idiom. Grammar hardly treats of the significations of words. It suffices for it to consider such constructions wherein the Genius of the language consists, and leaves it to Dictionaries to treat of the words and Idioms. I shall nevertheless consider here orderly the common Idiom of the French with respect to English; and have reserved for a particular book such Idioms as cannot be treated methodically.

I. Amitié (friendship) is often used in the singular for favour, kindness: as,

Faites-moi cette amitié; Do me that kindness, or favour.

Amitiés (in the plural) is said of caresses, and making much of: as,

Il m'a fait mille amitiés; He made very much of me.

II. Amours (in the plural) is feminine, except when it signifies Cupids: as, Il n'est point de laides amours; Never seemed a mistress foul. Il y a autour d'elle mille petits amours; A thousand Cupids stand around her.

III. An, Année (a year) are not used promiscuously; an is used,

1°. After nouns of the cardinal number: as, J'ai trente ans, I am thirty years old; C'est une fille de quinze ans, She is a girl of fifteen; Il y a vingt-cinq ans passée, It was five and twenty years ago.

2°. Before nouns of the ordinal number: as, L'an quinzième de l'Empire, the fifteenth year of the Empire; L'an mil sept cent quarante-neuf, the year one thousand seven hundred and forty-nine (wherein the cardinal number is used for the ordinal). We say, le jour de l'an, New Year's day; le premier jour de l'an, the first day of the year.

Année is used, 1°, After nouns of the ordinal number: as, Elle est dans sa vingtième année, or Elle a vingt ans; She is in her twentieth year, or she is twenty.

2°. After the article: as, l'année passée or dernière, last year; l'année qui vient or l'année prochaine, next year; although we say l'an de grâce, the year of grace; l'an du monde, or de notre Seigneur, the year of the world, or of our Lord.

3°. With an epithet, or adnoun, signifying any thing but measure of time; as, Une bonne & heureuse année, a happy new year; Nos belles années passent bien vite, Our prime goes away very quick.

4°. We almost always use année before and after nouns: as, Un grand nombre d'années, a great number of years; Il reste encore trois mois de l'année, We have three months yet to come of this year.

IV. Accoutumer (to use), and s'Accoutumer (to use or accustom oneself), Etre accoutumé (to be used), require the preposition à before the next infinitive: Avoir coutume, Avoir accoutumé (this last begins to be obsolete) require de: as,

Il l'accoutume à le suivre; He uses him to follow him.

Il s'accoutume à lire; He uses himself to read.

Je suis accoutumé à souffrir; I am used to bear.

J'ai coutume de perdre; I use to lose.

V. Agir (to act), preceded by the particle en, and followed by an adverb, signifies to do by, to deal with, or use one: as, En agir bien avec, or envers quelqu'un, or à son égard, To do well by one, to deal well with him. Il en agit mal envers elle or à son égard, He uses her ill.

And when agir is used impersonally with the reflected pronoun (il s'agit, il s'agissoit), it is englished as follows:

De quoi s'agit-il? What is the matter? Il s'agit de faire cela. This is the business in question; Il ne s'agissoit pas de cela, That was not the business in hand ; Il ne s'agit pas de peu de choses, It is not a trifling concern.

VI. Aider (to help) governs both the first and third state, as Aidez-le à faire cela, Help him to do that ; Aidez-lui à porter sa charge, Help him to carry his burthen. It governs the third state, when it signifies to share and divide the trouble with one ; and the first state, when it signifies to help one with money, counsel, &c.

VII. Aimer is to love : but Aimer mieux denotes commonly the choice which one makes of one thing before another, and is expressed by to have rather, to choose rather, &c. as J'aime mieux celui-ci que l'autre, I like this better than the other ; J'aime mieux rester au logis que d'aller me promener, I rather choose to stay at home than go a walking.

VIII. The Present and Imperfect of Aller (to go), coming before an infinitive without a preposition, denote a thing which one is, or was about to do, or which is, or was about to fall out, and is rendered with to be going, to be ready, to be about, or upon the point, and sometimes with a future only : as,

Je vais étudier, I am going to study ; Elle alloit chanter, She was going to sing ; Je vais, or Je m'en vais partir tout à l'heure, I'll set out presently. Nay, these two tenses are even construed with the verb aller in that sense : as,

Je vais m'en aller, I am going away ; Il alloit y aller, He was going thither ; Nous allions aller chez vous, We were upon the point of going to your house.

IX. The Present and Imperfect of Venir (to come), coming before an infinitive with the preposition de, denotes a thing just now done, which is most times too expressed with these two particles : as, Je viens de diner, I have just dined ; Elle venoit de lui écrire quand, &c. She had just written to him when — Le Roi vient de le nommer à cet Evêché, The King has lately named him to that bishoprick.

Venir, before the infinitive with à, denotes, and is englished by, setting, or going about something, or to begin : as, Quand il vint à danser, When he began to dance. — Se mettre à, is another verb of the same signification : as, Pour peu que vous lui parliez, elle se met à pleurer, If you speak to her ever so little, she falls a crying.

Again : Aller, as well as venir, sometimes seems only to denote the possibility there is for the action of the verb following to happen, and is englished sometimes by to happen, to chance, and some times by a Conditional tense only; as, Il seroit perdu si sa femme venoit à savoir cela, He would be undone if his wife should happen to know that: Voyez où j'en serois, si elle alloit croire cela, Mind what case I should be in, if she should chance to believe that.

Aller is also said, as well as faire, of things that fit, or do not fit one well: as, Cet habit vous va bien, This coat fits you well; Cette grande perruque ne lui va, or ne lui fait pas bien du tout, That great wig does not fit him at all.

Aller, venir, and revenir, are said of ships bound from one place to another: as, Ce vaisseau vient de la Havanne, & va à Cadiz, That ship is bound from the Havannah to Cadiz; Nous allions à la Chine, We were sailing to China; Un vaisseau qui revient de l'Amérique, A ship homeward bound from the West-Indies.

Aller, used impersonally with the particle y before, and a noun in the second state after it, is englished thus, Il y va de l'honneur, Honour is at stake; Il y alloit de la vie, Life was concerned in it, or life was at stake.

X. Apparoître and Paroître (to appear). The first is said only of spirits and ghosts: as, Un ange lui apparut, An angel appeared to him; Les spectres n'apparoissent que dans la nuit, Ghosts or spirits appear only in the night-time. The other is said of whatever falls under the eyes: as, Le soleil paroît, The sun appears, or shows itself; Il paroît une Comète, A Comet appears.

XI. Avoir (to have) is used instead of être, when we speak of being old, hungry, thirsty, cold, and hot (relating to the weather, as it affects men); as, Il a six ans, He is six years old; J'ai faim, I am hungry; Je n'ai pas soif, I am not thirsty; Elle a chaud, She is warm.

Observe that chaud and froid are indeclinable in these sentences; these words being then used adverbially; Therefore let not a woman say, J'ai chaude, and still less Je suis chaude.

But with respect to being hot and cold, the English Pronouns possessive, construed with the nouns of the parts said to be hot or cold, are made moreover by the pronoun personal, expressing the subject before avoir, in French, and the noun of the part is put in the 3d state; as, J'ai froid aux pieds, My feet are cold; Il a chaud aux mains, His hands are warm.

It is the same when we speak of any pain, wound, or sore, which we have got in any part of the body. We use avoir without a pronoun possessive before the noun of the sick or wounded part, which is always put in the third state, and the words pain and sore are rendered by mal: as, J'ai mal à la tête, I have a pain in my head; Il a mal aux yeux, He has sore eyes.

Avoir beau, used to denote that one does a thing in vain, is englished several ways, as follows:

J'ai beau l'attendre, il ne viendra pas, I may stay long enough for him, he will not come; Il a beau faire, il n'en viendra jamais à bout, Let him do what he will, or what he can, or for all that he may do, he will never bring it about; Vous avez beau lui donner des avis, elle ne veut suivre que sa tête, It signifies nothing to advise her ever so much, or ever so well, she will follow her own head nevertheless; Vous avez beau faire & beau dire, il n'en sera ni plus ni moins, You may do and say what you please, or whatsoever you may do and say, or for all you may do and say, it will be so nevertheless; Il aura beau dire & beau faire, je n'en rabattrai rien, He may do and say whatever he pleases, I will not abate an inch on it; Le pauvre homme eut beau appeler du secours, It was to little purpose the poor man called for assistance.

XII. N'avoir garde, signifies to have not the inclination or power to do a thing, and is englished thus: Il n'a garde de tromper, il est trop honnête homme, He is too honest a man to think of cheating; Il n'a garde de s'enfuir, il a la jambe cassée; How can he run away, since his leg is broken?

XIII. To do nothing but, is Ne faire que, with an infinitive without a preposition: as, Il ne fait que boire & manger, He does nothing but eat and drink.

XIV. To want none of, To have no occasion for, or no need of, is N'avoir que faire de: as Avoir affaire de is to want, to have occasion for: as,

Je n'ai que faire de votre argent, I want none of your money.

Elle n'a que faire de parler, She has no occasion to speak, she needs not speak. (See page 400.)

XV. Au reste, Du reste (as for the rest, besides), must not be confounded. Au reste is used, when, to what comes before, something is added of the same kind, and is the sequel of it: as, Cette poursuite ne se peut faire qu'à grands frais. Au reste elle a peu de bien, huit enfans, & elle est endettée; This prosecution cannot be but very expensive; As for the rest, or besides, her fortune is but small, she has eight children, and is in debt.

Du reste is used, when what follows is not of the same kind as that which comes before, or is not essentially related to it, as, Il étoit colère, bizarre, prodigue; du reste, homme d'honneur & bon ami; He was passionate, whimsical, and extravagant; but in other respects, a man of honour and a good friend.

Au reste outdoes most commonly what has been said; Du reste always implies opposition, and signifies almost the same thing, as, for all that, that being excepted.

Au reste sometimes elegantly comes after the first word or words of the sentence; Du reste always comes the first.

XVI. Aïeux (plur. numb. of aïeul, Grandfather) is generally used to signify ancestors and forefathers: as, Ses aïeux ont possédé de grandes charges, His ancestors have enjoyed great places; ancestors signifying no more Grandfathers than Great-grandfathers, or Great-great-grandfathers, &c. But aïeux may be (though seldom) restrained to its first signification of the plural of aïeul: as,

Ses deux aïeux ont été honorés des plus belles charges du Royaume, Both his grandfathers have been honoured with the handsomest places in the kingdom.

XVII. To know, is both Savoir and Connoître, with the difference, that the former is said of Sciences and things that are properly the object of the intellectual faculties, and have been studied or got by heart: as, Savez-vous votre leçon? Can you say your lesson? Il sait le Latin, He understands Latin; Je sais ce que vous dites, I know what you say; Il sait mieux qu'il ne dit, He knows better than he says.

The latter is said of things that are the object of our senses, and import properly being acquainted with: as, Je connois cet homme-là, I know that man; Il connoît ce pays-là, He knows that country.

Again: Whenever to know can be resolved by to understand, it is savoir, otherwise it is connoître.

Savoir bon gré à quelqu'un d'une chose, To take it well or kindly of him.

Lui en savoir mauvais gré, To take it amiss, or unkindly of him.

Faire savoir une chose à quelqu'un, To let one know a thing, to acquaint him with it.

XVIII. Devoir (to owe, to be bound), when it comes before an infinitive without a preposition, denotes only futurity in the action of the following verb, and is made by the future of the second verb in English, or by the verb to be, before an infinitive ; as,

Il doit venir, He is to come ; Elle doit partir demain, She will set out to-morrow ; Je dois parler sur cette affaire, I am to speak about that affair.

Sometimes devoir signifies must needs : as, Il est tout nu, il doit avoir bien froid, He is all naked, he must needs be very cold.

XIX. Ecouter sometimes signifies to hearken and to listen to. as, Ecoutez, Hark'ye ; Il écoute ce que nous disons, He listens to what we say ; and sometimes to mind, to attend : as, Ecoutez ce qu'on dit, Mind what is said.

Entendre signifies to hear and to overhear : as, Il nous a entendus tout le temps, He has overheard us all the while.

XX. Emplir (to fill up) is said of liquids only : as, Emplir un tonneau, une bouteille, &c. to fill a cask. a bottle, &c.

Remplir is said of any thing but liquids, besides its signification of reduplication : as, Remplir ses coffres d'or & d'argent, To fill up one's trunk with gold and silver ; Remplissez le verre, Fill up the glass again.

XXI. Enfermer is said of what is locked or shut up in a box, trunk, chamber, &c. and Renfermer, of what nature produces, and is contained, or included in the earth or sea ; as, Je l'ai enfermé dans mon bureau, I have locked it up in my bureau : Que de trésors la Nature ne renferme-t-elle pas dans son sein ! What treasure does not Nature inclose in her bosom !

XXII. Enfer, with the Christians, is not used in the plural, except in the article of the Creed : as, Il est descendu aux Enfers, He descended into Hell.

But we say les peines de l'enfer, the torments of hell.

With the Heathens it is not used in the singular : as, Mercuré conduisoit les âmes aux enfers, Mercury carried the souls to hell.

XXIII. Entendre is both to hear and to understand, according as the thing is the object of the sense of hearing, or that of the understanding : as, Je vous entends, I hear you, I understand you.

Il entend cela mieux que vous, He understands that better than you.

Faire entendre, is to intimate.

To understand, signifies also savoir, when the thing spoken of is a science or an art : as, Elle sait le Latin, She understands Latin.

And when the thing meant, or the object of the verb is any quality of things, to understand is made in French by se connoître en, or à: as, Il se connoît en toile, He understands linen-cloth.

Vous y connoissez-vous? Do you understand these things?

XXIV. Espérer (to hope) is never said in French of what is present or past: because hope is the expectation of things to come, though not certain or sure. Therefore do not say, J'espère que vous vous portez bien, I hope that you are well; J'espère qu'il s'est bien porté à la campagne, I hope that he has been well in the country; But say, Il paroît, il me semble, or Je présume que vous vous portez bien; Je me flatte, or J'ai lieu de croire, or Je m'imagine qu'il s'est bien porté à la campagne: or else take another turn, as an interrogation; saying simply, Vous portez-vous bien? Comment s'est-il porté à la campagne?

XXV. Eveiller and Réveiller (to awake, to call up): éveiller is said of a regular time, and intimates something natural and usual: as, On m'éveille tous les matins à cinq heures, I am awaked every morning at five; Ne m'éveillez demain qu'à sept heures, Do not awake me to-morrow till seven.

Réveiller implies something irregular and sudden, and is said, with respect to an extraordinary, unusual time: as,

Un grand bruit m'a réveillé, A great noise has awaked me.
Le ministre veut qu'on le réveille toutes les fois qu'il arrive un courier,
 The Minister will be awaked whenever an express or messenger comes.

XXVI. Faire, in its most general signification, is to do, or to make: but it has a great many more particular significations much in use.

1°. Faire, before an infinitive, without any preposition, signifies generally to get, to bid; to cause, to order, with the noun expressing the object after the verb in the infinitive, and not before, as in English: and when it signifies to cause, or order, the French infinitive is turned from its active state into the passive: as,

Faites lire cet enfant; Make that child read.

Faites venir cet homme; Bid that man come.

Il le fit mettre à mort; He ordered him to be put to death.

Elle fit assassiner son amant; She caused her lover to be murdered.

2°. Before the infinitive of faire, it signifies to bespeak, to get made: as,

Il a fait faire une montre d'or à répétition;

He has bespoke a gold repeating watch.

3°. It signifies to see, to do in such a manner that : as,
Faites qu'il soit content, or, } See that he is contented.
Faites en sorte qu'il soit content, }

4°. To counterfeit : as,
Ceux qui font les fous à propos ne le sont guères.
 Those who counterfeit themselves mad seasonably, are hardly so.

5°. To pretend, set up, personate, or act : as,
Il fait le Philosophe; He sets up for a Philosopher.
Elle fait la belle, She pretends to be handsome.
Vous ferez l'avare, You will act or personate the Miser.

6°. To dress, clean, or make up : as,
Faire la chambre, To clean the room.
Faire le lit, To make the bed.

7°. Se faire, is to use oneself to : as,
Se faire à la fatigue, To use, or inure oneself to hardships

8°. Faire, used impersonally with an adnoun, expresses the qualities of the weather : as,

Il fait beau, or beau temps, It is fine weather :
Il fait froid, It is cold.

9°. Avoir, with the word affaire, signifies to want ; and with faire, but preceded by ne and que, it signifies not to want, to need not, to have no occasion for : as, J'ai affaire de cela, & vous n'en avez que faire, I want that, and you do not, or you have no occasion for it. (See p. 396.)

10°. Faire is used, as in English, instead of repeating a verb that has just been expressed in the sentence, especially after a comparative ; but it is not so frequently used in this sense as it is in English : as,

Il apprend mieux qu'il ne faisoit, He learns better than he did.

XXVII. Faire grâce signifies to forgive, or excuse : as, Je vous fais grâce de la moitié } I forgive you half of the des dépens; } charges.

Le Roi lui a fait grâce, { The King has forgiven him, or granted him his pardon. And Faire une grâce, is to do a favour : as,

Faites-moi une grâce, Do me a favour. We also say,
Il lui fait grâce, He favours him, he befriends him.
Dieu lui en fasse la grâce, God grant he may.

XXVIII. Fleurir, signifies, in its proper sense, to blossom, and in its figurative to flourish, to be in repute ; the French having but one expression for these two English words. But in order to distinguish more particularly between the proper sense and the figurative, an irregularity has been introduced in some of the inflexions of this verb. The regular gerund of fleurir is fleurissant: as, les arbres fleurissant, the trees being in blossom: but in their figurative sense we say florissant; as un état, un empire florissant, a flourishing state, or empire.

The same irregularity takes place in the imperfect: we say, in the proper sense, Cet arbre fleurissoit tous les ans deux fois, That tree was in blossom twice every year: and in the figurative sense, Un tel florissoit sous son règne, Such a one flourished, or was in repute under his reign; Les Arts & les Sciences florissoient alors, Arts and Sciences flourished at that time, or were in high esteem.

We also say figuratively un style fleuri, a florid style; un teint fleuri, a blooming complexion.

XXIX. Se Fier (to trust) has a threefold construction. Se fier à son mérite, se fier en son mérite, se fier sur son mérite, to trust to one's merit.

XXX. Fournir (to afford, to supply with) is construed with both the first and third state: as,

La rivière le fournit de sel, La rivière lui fournit du sel,
The river affords him salt, or supplies him with salt.

The former way signifies, properly, that the river supplies him with as much salt as he can consume in his family. The latter may signify besides, that the river affords him so great a quantity of salt as to sell and trade therewith.

XXXI. Gens (people). There is not one word in the French language liable to more several and odd constructions than this.

Gens is a plural noun, which is never said of a determinate number of people, unless it is attended by an adnoun. Therefore we do not say trois ou quatre gens, six gens, &c. as the English do, three or four people, six people, &c. but we say trois honnêtes gens, three honest people (meaning gentlemen); dix jeunes gens, ten young people, and trois ou quatre personnes.

Gens is masculine when it comes before its adnoun, and feminine when the adnoun comes first: as,

Ce sont des gens résolus, They are resolute people.

Ce sont de bonnes gens, They are good people.

But though the adnoun coming before gens is feminine, yet if there follows another adnoun, or a participle, this last must be masculine: as,

Il y a de certaines gens qui sont bien sots, and not scettes,
Some people are very foolish.

Ce sont les meilleures gens que j'aie jamais vus, and not vues ;
They are the best sort of people I have ever seen.

The word tout coming before gens, is put in the masculine when it is attended by no other adnouns, or the adnoun coming before it is of the common gender : as,

Tous les gens que, &c. All people that, &c.

Tous les honnêtes gens font cela ; All gentlefolks do that.

Tous les jeunes gens sont volages ; All young people are fickle.

But when the adnoun attending gens is feminine, the word tout agrees with it too : as,

Toutes les vieilles gens ; All old people.

Toutes les bonnes gens ; All good people.

Gens signifies also domestics, and is used with a determinate number : as, Il arriva avec quatre de ses gens ;

He arrived with four of his men, or servants.

XXXII. Bonne grâce, in the singular, signifies gentleness, agreeableness : as, Elle a bonne grâce ; She is genteel.

Il salue de bonne grâce ; He bows in a genteel manner.

In the plural, bonnes grâces signifies favour and benevolence : as,

Il est dans ses bonnes grâces ; He is in his or her favour.

Conservez-moi l'honneur de vos bonnes grâces ;

Do me the honour to keep me a place in your favour.

XXXIII. Jouer (to play) is both neuter and active in French ; though it is but in very few cases active in English : as,

Jouer quelque chose ; To play for something.

Jouons un écu ; Let us play for a crown.

The particle at, used after the word playing, before the names of Games and Exercises, is expressed in French by the particles à, au, à la, aux : and the particle upon, before the names of Instruments, by du, de la, des : as,

Jouer aux cartes ; To play at cards.

Jouons au Piquet, à la Bête, aux Echecs, à la Paume, aux Barres, &c. Let us play at Piquet, at Loo, at Chess, at Tennis, at Running-Bars, &c.

Jouer des instrumens ; du violon, de la flûte, &c.

To play upon the instruments ; upon the violin, the flute, &c.

Jouer une pièce de Théâtre ; To act a play.

Jouer gros jeu ; To play high, or deep.

Jouer quelqu'un ; To make a fool of one, to play upon him.

Jouer au plus fin avec quelqu'un ; To vie in cunning with one.

Jouer de la prunelle ; To ogle, or leer.

Jouer à quitte ou double ; To run all hazards.

Jouer une pièce, or un tour à quelqu'un, or lui en jouer d'une ;
To serve one a trick, or put a trick upon one.

Jouer before an infinitive, with à, signifies to hazard, to venture: as, Vous jouez à vous faire tuer ; You venture your life.

Il joue à perdre sa place ; He runs the hazard of losing his place.
Se jouer is to sport, and se jouer de quelqu'un, to make a fool of one.—Jouer is besides used in some phrases like these :

Ne vous jouez pas à lui ; Do not meddle or make with him.

Ne vous y jouez pas ; Do not fool with it; do not be such a fool as to do it.

XXXIV. Jour and Journée (a day). Journée is usually understood and said of what is done during one day: as,

Payer la journée aux ouvriers ; To pay the workmen for their day's labour.

Marcher à grandes journées ; To make great marches.

Il y a huit journées de chemin ; It is eight days' journey.

We say, likewise, in that sense, la journée d'Actium, la journée de Fontenoy, the day or battle of Actium, or Fontenoy, &c.

We use jour when we speak of time only, and absolutely: as,
Les jours sont courts ; The days are short.

Il y a plus de huit jours que cela est passée ; It is above a week ago.

We say, indifferently, Voilà un beau jour, or une belle journée ;
This is a fine day: J'ai travaillé tout le jour, or toute la journée ;
I have been at work, or have studied all the day.

Vivre au jour la journée, To live from hand to mouth.

There is the same difference with matin and matinée (morning), and soir and soirée (evening).

XXXV. Laisser to leave, to let, and sometimes to forget: as,

Laissez ici votre manteau ; Leave your cloak here.

Il ne veut pas me laisser parler ; He will not let me speak.

J'ai laissé ma bourse sur la table, { I have left, or forgot my purse upon the table.

Laisser, being construed with ne and pas, attended by de, denotes only affirmation in the next verb, which is rendered in English several ways, importing generally still, nevertheless, for all that, &c. as,

Cela ne laisse pas d'être vrai, quoique vous en doutiez ;

Although you doubt of it, it is true nevertheless, or for all that.

Malgré tout ce que je lui ai dit, elle ne laisse pas de le faire ;

For all that I told her, she still does it, or does not forbear doing it.

Vous ne savez que faire de ces } You do not know what to do bagatelles, elles ne laissent } with these trifles, yet they pas d'avoir leur usage ; } are not without their use.

XXXVI. Livres and Francs (Livres.) These two words signifying the same thing, are liable to several various and odd constructions.—We say, Il a quatre mille livres de pension, dix mille livres de pension, vingt mille livres de rente, cent mille livres de rente, &c. and never quatre mille francs de pension, cent mille francs de rente, &c. He has a pension of four, or ten thousand livres, twenty thousand, or an hundred thousand livres per annum.

We on the contrary say: Sa maison lui a couté vingt mille francs; His house has cost him twenty thousand livres: Sa charge vaut cent mille francs; His place is worth an hundred thousand livres, &c. and never vingt mille livres, cent mille livres.

When cent meets with mille, but coming after it, we always use the word livres; as likewise with the addition of these words de rente, de pension (when the words a pension, a year, or per annum, meet with livres); as, Une somme de deux mille trois cent livres; A sum of two thousand three hundred livres: Six mille neuf cent livres; Six thousand nine hundred livres.

We never say un franc, neither absolutely, nor with another number: as, vingt & un francs, trente & un francs, &c. we say, vingt & une livres, trente & une livres, &c. one-and-twenty, or thirty livres.

Neither do we say deux francs, trois francs, cinq francs (two, three, five livres), tho' we say quatre francs, six francs, sept francs, huit francs, up to vingt francs. We say neither trente francs nor trente livres, nor soixante francs, nor soixante livres, but dix écus, vingt écus (ten or twenty half-crowns). We say quarante francs, cinquante francs, quatre-vingts francs, and cent francs.

Neither do we say une livre, deux livres, trois livres, &c. though we write it in Bank-notes, Letters of Exchange, Bills and Accounts. We say vingt sous for one livre, quarante sous for two, un écu for three. Instead of cinq livres, we say cent sous. But when pence (des sous) make part of the sum, we then always use the word livre: as, quatre livres dix sous, four livres and ten-pence; six livres huit sous, six livres and eight-pence; not quatre francs dix sous, six francs huit sous.

When the sum exceeds an hundred, we, speaking of a debt, use indifferently livres or francs: as, Il me doit deux cent francs, or deux cent livres; He owes me two hundred livres: Je dois quinze ou seize cent livres or francs; I owe fifteen or sixteen hundred livres.

However, we say, un sac de mille francs, and not un sac de mille livres; a bag of a thousand livres.

When people distinguish, as in foreign countries, between Tournois and Sterling (the pound Sterling and the pound Tournois), they must always use the word livre: as, Il a apporté de France dix mille livres Tournois, c'est-à-dire, près de cinq cens livres sterling; He has brought over from France ten thousand livres, or pounds Tournois; that is, near five hundred pounds Sterling.—A livre, or livre Tournois, is twenty-pence (Tournois). A pound Sterling is two-and-twenty livres, or pounds Tournois.

XXXVII. Un coup de main, signifies a bold action, and Un homme de main, a man fit for a bold and hazardous enterprise; Des coups de main, handy blows; main forte, assistance; A pleines mains, largely, plentifully; Sous main, underhand, secretly.

Donner, or Prêter la main à quelqu'un; To help one.

Donner les mains à quelque chose; To consent to a thing.

Etre en main, or à main pour faire une chose; [hand easily.

To be in a convenient posture, or situation for one to use his En venir aux mains; To come to blows, to engage.

Prêter main forte à quelqu'un; { To succour one, to come to his assistance with main strength.

Donner de main en main; To hand about.

Cela est fait à la main; That is done with concert.

Lever la main; { To take one's oath before a judge, to swear, to lay one's hand upon the Bible.

To have a good hand at doing something, } is { S'entendre à faire quelque chose.

XXXVIII. To walk (a verb neuter) is both Marcher and se Promener, with this difference, that marcher is said of going out for business, and imports going from one place to another; and se promener is said of taking a walk, walking for pleasure-sake: as,

J'ai beaucoup marché aujourd'hui; I have walked much to-day

Je me suis promené aujourd'hui une heure dans le jardin;

I have walked an hour to-day in the garden.

We say, Se promener à cheval, ou en carrosse;

To take a ride, or airing on horseback, or in a coach.

Se promener sur l'eau, sur la rivière, sur la Tamise;

To go upon the water, upon the river, &c.

Marcher sur quelqu'un, ou sur quelque chose;

To tread upon one, or upon a thing.

Marcher sur les traces de quelqu'un; to follow one's steps

Promener is also used actively: as,

Promener quelqu'un; To lead one, to make him walk. [ferent objects.

Promener sa vue sur plusieurs objets: To carry one's sight to many dif-

Envoyer quelqu'un se promener; To send one packing to the devil.

Marcher droit; To keep to one's behaviour.

Je le ferai marcher droit; I will keep him to his behaviour.

XXXIX. Marier, Epouser, Se marier (to marry). The two first are active, and the last a reflected verb; but marier is said only of the Parson or Priest who performs the ceremony; and épouser of the person who is married: as,

Monsieur A. doit épouser Mademoiselle B. & c'est Monsieur le Curé qui les mariera,

Mr. A. is to marry Miss B. and it is the Rector of the Parish, or the Parson who will marry them.

Elle ne veut point se marier; She will not marry.

XL. Mener and Porter (to carry), Amener and Apporter (to bring), must be very accurately distinguished, and fitted to the speech.

Mener is said of such creatures, either rational or irrational, that have by nature the capacity of walking, and are not disabled, either through accident or illness: and Porter is said of things that cannot walk by their nature, and of persons and dumb creatures that are disabled from walking, on account of lameness or illness, and other infirmities: as,

Menez Monsieur chez cette Dame, and not Portez Monsieur, &c Carry the Gentleman to that Lady's house.

Portez-y vos chansons nouvelles, and not Menez-y;

Carry there your new songs.

Menez le cheval à l'écurie, or chez le Maréchal;

Carry the horse to the stable, or to the farrier's, and not Portez, because horses, dogs, &c. have legs to walk.

Portez cette étoffe chez le tailleur, Carry that stuff to the taylor's.

Cet enfant est las, portez-le à la maison;

That child is tired, carry him home (because he cannot walk).

Again: Mener and amener, porter and apporter, import a relation of place, answering to the question, where, whither: amener and apporter, are used with reference to the local adverbs here, hither: and mener and porter to there, thither: as,

Amenez-moi votre ami; Bring your friend to me.

Apportez-moi votre ouvrage; Bring your work to me.

Il les a amenés, or apportés ici; He has brought them here, or hither.

All which instances are said with respect to the place where one is: but these following are said with reference to a place at any distance from that where one is.

Il les y a amenés, or portés; He carried them there, or thither.
Portez votre ouvrage à votre sœur; Carry your work to your sister.
Menez-le chez le Commissaire; Carry him or take him to the Justice's.
 Observe that expression to take one to a place, rendered in French by Mener quelqu'un à un endroit.

XLII. Mourir (to die), Se mourir (to be dying). We say,

Mourir {	de faim,	to starve with hunger.
	de soif,	to be choaked with thirst.
	de froid,	to starve with cold.
	de chaud,	to be extremely hot.
	de peur,	to be affrighted to death.
	d'envie,	} to long mightily for a thing.
	d'impatience,
	de chagrin	to grieve oneself to death.
	de déplaisir,	to be vexed to death.
de douleur,	to have one's heart broken.

XLIII. Neuf and Nouveau (new). The construction of these two words is worth observing. Neuf must always come after the noun, and nouveau may come either before or after. But there is this difference between neuf and nouveau, that neuf is used only when one speaks of material things that are the object of Mechanic Arts; and nouveau of things that are the object of Liberal Arts, and relate to the mind, or else are produced by nature: as, un habit neuf, a new suit of clothes; un nouvel ouvrage, or un ouvrage nouveau, a new performance.

Of these two expressions in use, un livre neuf, and un livre nouveau, the former is said of its first coming out of the bookseller's shop, and having not been used or worn. The latter is said of, and imports, its not being extant before, and considers it only as being the work of the mind.

Neuf is also said with respect to what is newly done, and nouveau, to what surprises one, and was unexpected. Thus une maison neuve signifies a house newly built: and une maison nouvelle, one that we had not seen before, and is therefore the object of our surprise, and which may be an old one.

XLIV. Parents, is said of all those that belong to us, or we belong to, by the ties of blood, or of those of the same consanguinity; as, Nos parents ne sont pas toujours nos meilleurs amis, Our kindred and relations are not always our best friends.

Therefore kindred, kin, kinsman, relation, signify the French Pa- rens. His or her parent, is son père ou sa mère, and his parents son père & sa mère.

XLIV. Personne has been considered in the Syntax with respect to its being a pronoun: but it is besides a noun feminine of a very extensive use, answering in its singular, sometimes to this word person, but most commonly to these, man and woman, gentleman and gentlewoman; as, Je vis hier la personne dont vous parlez; I saw yesterday the person, or the man, or woman, you speak of, (L'homme and la femme seldom being used, but out of scorn and contempt; and le Monsieur, or la Dame, in a banter, and through derision, or speaking of people of a station eminently superior to one's own).

In the Plural, it answers to the word people: as,

Des personnes honnêtes & civiles; Honest and civil people.

Although the noun personne, when used in the plural, requires an adnoun feminine, yet if two adnouns, or some pronoun referring to it, meet in the same sentence, the pronouns and the second adnoun must be masculine; regard being then had to the thing signified by the word, viz. men in general, and not to the grammatical gender of the word: as,

Les personnes consommées dans la vertu, ont en toutes choses une droiture d'esprit & une attention judicieuse, qui les empêche d'être médisans.	Such persons as are perfect in virtue have in every thing an uprightness of mind and a judicious attention, which hinders them from being slanderers.
--	---

Wherein the adnoun médisans referring to personnes is masculine, though the first adnoun consommées is feminine.—Whereupon it is to be observed, that in order to make an adnoun masculine that has a reference to personnes: 1°. There must be, between the noun and the adnoun, a sufficient number of words, to make one forget that the adnoun masculine refers to the noun feminine, personnes: so that the hearer, or reader, minds no longer the word, but only what is signified by it, as in the aforesaid instance.

2°. That the adnoun must not be governed by the verb that has personnes for its subject: otherwise it must be feminine, whatever number of words there may be between personnes and the adnouns. Thus we say:

Les personnes, qui ont le cœur bon, & les sentimens de l'âme élevés, sont ordinairement généreuses;	Good-natured people, who have elevated sentiments, are commonly generous;
and not généreux , because it is governed of sont , before which comes the subject personnes . For the same reason, we do not use the relative masculine ils, though ever so far from personnes, when it is near the adnoun feminine, referring also to personnes: as,

Les personnes qui ont l'esprit pénétrant, & une expérience de beaucoup d'années, sont presque toujours si judicieuses qu'elles se trompent rarement. People of a sagacious mind, that have the experience of many years, are almost always so judicious, that they are seldom mistaken.

We do not say qu'ils se trompent, on account of ils being too near the adnoun feminine, which determines it likewise to agree with the noun feminine.—Again, we say,

Les personnes qui ont l'âme belle sont si ravies quand elles trouvent l'occasion de reconnoître un bienfait, qu'elles ne la laissent jamais échapper (not qu'ils). People of a noble soul are so delighted when they find an opportunity of being grateful for a good turn, that they never let it slip.

The first relative feminine, elles, determining the second in the same gender, though there is a pretty good number of words between the Antecedent and the Relative. But we say,

Il y a à Paris une société de personnes très-savantes, auxquelles l'Europe est redevable d'un nombre infini de connoissances. Ils n'ont en vue que la perfection des Arts & des Sciences: & c'est dans ce motif qu'ils font tous les jours d'utiles découvertes. There is at Paris a society of very learned men, to whom Europe is beholden for a vast deal of knowledge. They have nothing in view but the improvement of Arts and Sciences: and it is with that motive only they every day make useful discoveries.

In which instance the pronoun ils refers to the thing signified by the word personnes, that is, men, and therefore agrees with the masculine; and the adnoun savantes agrees with the feminine, because it is next to the noun feminine personnes: as does likewise the relative auxquelles, which is next to the adnoun.

Here follows another instance with respect to number, wherein less regard is had to the noun than to the thing signified by it.

De deux mille hommes qu'ils étoient, six cens demeurèrent sur la place, & le reste se sauva par la connoissance qu'ils avoient du pays. Out of two thousand men that were there, six hundred fell upon the spot, and the rest escaped, by their being acquainted with the country.

One should say, to speak conformably to the grammar, par la connoissance qu'il avoit du pays, since the pronoun il refers to le reste, which governs sauva in the singular.

XLV. Pâque, and more commonly Pâques, is masculine, when it signifies Easter-day: as, Pâque est bien reculé & bien chaud cette année ; Easter is very late and very hot this year : quand Pâques sera venu ; when Easter is come.

But Pâques is feminine, and spelt without s, when it signifies the Jewish Passover ; as, Manger la Pâque ; To eat the Passover. Préparer la Pâque ; To make ready the Passover.

Pâques, signifying the christian devotion at that season, is feminine, and in the plural number : as, Mes Pâques sont faites ; I have received the Sacrament this Easter.

We say ironically of immoral people who receive the Sacrament at that time, Faire de belles Pâques.

XLVI. Se Passer de quelque chose (to do or to go without a thing). Si vous ne voulez pas me donner cela, il faudra bien que je m'en passe ; If you will not give me that, I must needs go without it.

XLVII. To think, is both Penser and Songer, with the preposition à before its regimen : as, Penser à quelque chose ; To think of a thing, to consider it. Vous ne songez pas à ce que vous faites, better than Vous ne pensez pas, &c. You do not think of what you are doing. But when to think is used as a verb active, and not neuter, it is penser, and not songer. Therefore do not say, On songe de vous, but On pense de vous cent choses désavantageuses. People think an hundred things to your disadvantage.

Penser à mal ; To have some ill design.

Il ne pense pas à mal ; He means no harm.

Penser, in the preterite, either simple or compound, before an infinitive without a preposition, signifies any thing that was like or near to have been done, but has not been done : and is englished by to be like, to be near, or ready : as, Il pensa se noyer ; He was like to be drowned.

J'ai pensé mourir ; I had like to die, or to have died.

Nous pensames nous couper la gorge ;

We were very near cutting one another's throat.

XLVIII. More, is Plus, Davantage, Encore. Plus is never used at the end of an affirmative sentence. Therefore say, Donnez-m'en davantage ; Give me some more, or more on it.

En voulez-vous davantage, or En voulez-vous encore ? Will you have any more ? Encore un peu, A little more ; and never Donnez-m'en plus. En voulez-vous plus ; Un peu encore.

Davantage can likewise be used at the end of negative sentences, but with the two negative particles, whereas plus requires but ne : as,

Je n'en veux plus, or Je n'en veux pas davantage ; I will have no more, or I do not choose any more of it.

Neither does davantage govern a noun after it, as plus. Therefore don't say, Mangez davantage de pain avec votre viande, but Mangez avec votre viande plus de pain que vous ne faites; Eat more bread with your meat than you do.

Encore, at the end of negative sentences, does not signify more, but, as yet, or again: as, Je n'en veux pas encore; I will not have any yet.

XLIX. Plaire (to please) must be attended with the preposition à; as, plaire à quelqu'un, To please one. But the construction of this verb, used impersonally in these, and other like sentences, is very remarkable, with respect to the English.

S'il vous plaît; If you please. S'il plaît Dieu; If God pleases. Cela lui plaît à dire; He is pleased to say so. Il a plu au Roi d'ordonner; The King has been pleased to order. Il me plaît de faire cela; I am pleased to do so.

Se plaire à quelque chose: to take a pleasure, or delight in a thing.

L. Picture is in French Peinture, Portrait, and Tableau; but these three words do not signify the same thing, when they are taken in the proper sense.

Peinture signifies, 1°. the art of painting or drawing: as, Il excelle dans la peinture; He excels in painting or drawing.

2°. The colour in general: as, La peinture de ce tableau n'est pas encore sèche; The colour of that picture is not yet dry.

3°. What is painted upon a wall or wainscot: as, On ne peut rien distinguer aux peintures du dôme de St. Paul. Les peintures du dôme des Invalides sont des chefs-d'œuvre de l'art; One can distinguish nothing in the paintings of the Cupola of St. Paul's. The paintings of the Cupola of the Invalids are master-pieces of art.

Portrait signifies a picture representing any body drawn after life: Voilà mon portrait; That is my picture. Le portrait du Roi ne lui ressemble pas; The King's picture is not like him.

Tableau signifies, and is said of any picture upon cloth, wood, or brass, representing an history, a landscape, building, in short, any thing that can be thought of. Even what is drawn out of fancy, or after a statue, bust, or even after a picture drawn after life, is not called portrait, but tableau.

Therefore Tableau is equally said of Portraits or Tableaux; and Portrait is said only of the representation of one drawn after life.

But these three words signify the same thing, when they are used in the figurative sense:

Il a fait $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{une agréable peinture} \\ \text{un agréable portrait} \\ \text{un agréable tableau} \end{array} \right\}$ de toutes les personnes de la Cour;

He has drawn a charming character of every one at Court.

LI. Prendre (to take, seize, lay hold of) is besides used in several other senses, as in these instances :

La feu a pris à sa maison, A fire broke out in his house.

Prendre les devans, To get the start of one, to be beforehand with him.

Se bien prendre à faire une chose, s'y prendre de la bonne manière, To go the right way to work, to take a right method, or course.

Il s'y prend mal, He goes the wrong way to work.

De la manière dont il s'y prend, As he goes to work, as he manages matters.

S'en prendre à quelqu'un, or à quelque chose, To tax one, To lay the fault, or lay it upon one, or upon a thing.

Se prendre à quelque chose, To take hold of something.

Les gens qui se noient se prennent à tout ce qu'ils trouvent,

People who are drowning take hold of any thing they meet with Si l'affaire ne réussit pas, je m'en prendrai à vous, If the affair does not succeed, I will come upon you, I will lay the blame upon you.

S'il y a du mal, prenez-vous-en à vous-même,

If any thing be amiss, you may thank yourself for it.

Prendre parti, To enlist oneself.

Prenez votre parti, Take your resolution.

LII. Prendre garde, Se donner de garde (to take heed, or care).
Prendre garde à quelque chose, to take care of a thing, to mind a thing, to take notice of it.

Se donner de garde de quelqu'un, To beware of one.

N'avoir garde de, To be far from, to take care not to, is besides used in some particular phrases, englished as follows :

Il n'a garde de courir, il a une jambe cassée ?

How can he, or how could he run, when one of his legs is broken ?

Je n'a garde d'y aller, I am not such a fool as to go thither, or I will be sure not to go thither.

Se bien garder de faire une chose, To be sure not to do a thing.

Prenez garde de tomber, See p. 315, D. and 346, B.

LIII. Rompre, Briser, Casser (to break). Rompre, is said of a thing broken asunder ; and when it is broken in pieces, we use briser : as,

Un des pieds de la table est rompu, One of the legs of the table is broken.

Le table est brisée, The table is broken to pieces.

Rompre, is said of metals, stones, and wood ; and Casser, of frail things, as glass, earthen-ware, &c. as, La colonne est rompue or brisée, the post, or pillar is broken asunder, or broken in pieces.

Le pot en casse, The pot is broken. Les verres sont cassés, The glasses are broken. But we never say rompre un pot, rompre un verre, de la porcelaine, &c.

To bruise, is bossuer, faire une bosse; and to split, fendre.

In a figurative sense we say, Casser un testament, un contrat, une sentence, des vœux, and never briser, or rompre un contrat, &c. to reverse, or annul a will, to make void a contract, a sentence, vows, &c.

Casser un Parlément,

To dissolve a Parliament.

Casser un Officier,

To cashier an Officer.

Casser des troupes,

To disband troops.

Casser quelqu'un,

To turn one out of his place.

Rompre la glace, To break the ice, signifies, figuratively, to take the first steps in an affair, and overcome the first difficulties.

LIV. Seulement, signifies sometimes, so much as: as, J'ai salué une personne, qui n'a pas seulement daigné me regarder; I have bowed to one who has not so much as vouchsafed to look at me.

LV. Suppléer (to supply, to make up) is sometimes indifferently used either with the 1st or the 3d state; as, Je suppléerai la reste, or Je suppléerai au reste; I shall make up the rest. But suppleer, without the preposition, signifies, properly, to make up what is deficient; and with à, to be sufficient for repairing, or making amends for the defects of a thing: as, La valeur supplée au nombre; Valour supplies the deficiency of the number.

LVI. Traiter mal (to abuse) implies only outrageous words, Maltraiter (to use ill) implies ill usage with blows.

LVII. Valoir, is to be good, or as good as, when there is comparison: as,

Vous ne les valez pas, You are not so good as they are.

Il valoit mieux qu'elle, He was better than she.

It signifies to be worth, when one speaks of things bought and sold.

Cela ne vaut pas dix schellings, That is not worth ten shillings.

But to be worth, speaking of people's fortune and circumstances, is expressed in French by avoir du bien; and sometimes avoir vaillant: as,

Il a dix mille pièces de bien; He is worth ten thousand pounds.

Il n'a pas mille livres sterling vaillant; He is not worth a thousand pounds.

Il a du bien, He is worth money. Il n'a rien, He is worth nothing.

LVIII. Voilà (a word worth observing). It serves to show, and points at, somebody, or something, and has the force of a verb, making a complete sentence with a noun after it, or a pronoun before; which is usually englished by there is, that is, there be, there are, those are, &c. as, Voilà l'homme, That is the man, Behold the man; Le voilà, la voilà, there he is, there she is, there it is.

Voici is construed after the same manner, but it denotes, and points at, a very near object.—Sometimes le voici, and le voilà, are followed by a relative and a verb: as, Le voici qui vient, Here he is a coming; La voilà qui gronde, There she scolds, Now she is scolding.

But Voilà, followed by an adnoun, and preceded by a pronoun personal, denotes, and stands for, the verb être, in the present tense: as,

Voyez comme les voilà mouillés, See how wet they are.

Comme la voilà triste, How sorrowful she is.

Nous voilà quittes, We are quit, or even; Les voilà fâchés, They are angry, or vexed; Voilà qu'on m'appelle, Somebody calls me.

Ne nous voilà pas mal; We are in a fine pickle.

Voilà bien du préambule; What a deal of preamble.

Les sottises raisons que voilà; Very foolish reasons those.

LIX. To be just, to have just, followed by a participle, is expressed in French by Ne faire que de, or Venir de, and the English participle is made by the present of the infinitive: as, To be just arrived, Ne faire que d'arriver.

A child that is just born, Un enfant qui vient de naître, or qui ne fait que de naître, We have just finished. Nous ne faisons que d'achever, or Nous venons d'achever. The first way is more expressive.

LX The impersonal Il y a is construed with a negative, and que, in phrases worth observing: as, Vous vous imaginez qu'il n'y a qu'à demander, You fancy that you have nothing to do but ask.

Elle croit qu'il n'y a qu'à dire, She thinks that speaking will do

LXI. The names of some parts of some animals are not the same in French as in English.

We say ped (foot) of such animals only as are hoofed; and patte of all others. Thus we say, le pied d'un cheval, d'un bœuf, d'un cerf, &c. the foot of a horse, ox, stag, &c. la patte d'un chien, d'un chat, d'une souris, d'un lion, d'un oiseau, &c. the paw of a dog, cat, mouse, lion, bird, &c.

We say les griffes d'un lion, d'un chat, &c. a lion's, a cat's claws, &c. les serres d'un aigle, & d'un épervier, the talons of an eagle, of a hawk; les bras d'une écrevisse, & d'un cancre, the claws of a lobster, crawfish, and crab : les gardes d'un sanglier, the hinder claws of a wild boar.

La bouche d'un cheval, a horse's mouth : we also say les naseaux d'un cheval, not les narines, the nostrils of a horse ; la gueule d'un lion, d'un chien, d'un chat, d'un loup, d'un serpent, d'un dragon, &c. the mouth of a lion, a dog, a cat, a wolf, a serpent, a dragon, &c.

Le groin d'un pourceau, the snout of a hog ; le muffle d'un cerf, d'un lion, d'un tigre, d'un taureau, the muzzle of a stag, lion, tiger, bull ; le museau d'un chien, d'un renard, d'un poisson, the muzzle, or snout of a dog, a fox, a fish ; le bec d'un oiseau, the beak, or bill of a bird.

Les défenses d'un sanglier, the tusks of a wild boar ; les soies d'un sanglier, & d'un cochon, the bristle of a wild boar, and a hog ; le poil d'un chien, d'un chat, d'un cheval & des autres animaux, the hair of a dog, a cat, a horse, and other creatures ; la crinière d'un cheval, & d'un lion, the mane of a horse and a lion ; du crin, horse hair (or the tail) : The hair of the human body, is le poil, but of the head, is les cheveux.

We also say la hure d'un sanglier, d'un saumon & d'un brochet, the head of a wild boar, and of a large pike, and the jowl of a salmon.

Speaking of Deer, we call bois what the English call horns, or head ; and we say, un bois de cerf, de daim, de chevreuil, the horns or head of a stag, deer, roe-buck ; but we call corne the same when it is wrought and manufactured : as, le manche de mon couteau est de corne de cerf, the handle of my knife is of a deer's horn.

LXII. The sounds of birds and of beasts :

Les oiseaux chantent & gazouillent,	*Birds sing and chirp.
Le perroquet parle,	The parrot talks.

Le chien aboie & hurle,	The dog barks and howls.

* And the singing, chirping, or warbling of birds, is called by the French ramage.

† Et coche la poule ; and treads the hen.

Les petits chiens jappent,	The puppies yelp.
Le chat miaule, & file,	The cat mews, and purrs.
Le loup hurle,	The wolf howls.
Le renard glapit,	The fox yelps.
Le lièvre crie,	The hare squeaks.
La brebis béle,	The sheep bleats, or bays.
Le serpent siffle,	The snake hisses.
Le pourceau grogne,	The hog grunts.
Le cheval hennit,	The horse neighs.
L'âne braît,	The ass brays.
Le bœuf & la vache beuglent } & meuglent, }	The ox and cow bellow.
Le taureau mugit,	The bull roars.
Le lion rugit,	The lion roars.

§ IV. Observations upon VERBS, considered with respect to the Idiom of the English Tongue.

WE have seen how verbs are conjugated in English by means of these signs, do, did; shall, will; can, may; might, could, should, would; and let; which, being put before the verb, distinguish its moods and tenses, except the preterite, which is distinguished by a particular termination. But the same particles are also verbs, having particular significations of themselves, which must be carefully distinguished from their nature of signs. In order to which make the following observations:

1°. Do and did are construed with any verb, to express its present or past action more fully, distinctly, and emphatically; as, I do love, for I love (J'aime); I did love, for I loved (J'aimois, or J'aimai). But

Do and did signify only action of themselves, and are expressed in French by faire, being conjugated like other verbs with their signs, except in the present and imperfect tenses:

Pres.	I do,	Je fais,
Imp.	} I did,	Je faisois.
Pret.		Je fis.
Fut.	I shall or will do,	Je ferai.
Cond.	I should, would, &c. do,	Je ferois. [Conjugation.
Comp.	I have done, &c.	J'ai fait, &c. as in the sixth

2°. Will and would, or wou'd, which denote the time to come when they are placed before verbs, are also used in the sense of willing; to wit, when they imply order, command, will, and earnestness of desire; as,

I will have you do so;	Je veux que vous fassiez cela.
He will not have him study;	Il ne veut pas qu'il étudie.
You would have us do it;	Vous vouliez que nous le fissions
You would have us had done it;	Vous vouliez ou vous voudriez que nous l'eussions fait.

Pres and Fut. I will, Je veux. Je voudrai, for I am or shall be willing.

Imp.	} I would	{	Je voulois,	} for	I was	} willing.
Pret.			Je voulus,		I was
Cond.			Je voudrois,		I would, &c. be
Comp.			J'ai, J'avois voulu, &c.		I have, I had been

3°. Should or shou'd, is the sign of the conditional, but generally denotes the necessity and duty of doing a thing. It implies and stands for must or ought, and is made in French by the conditional tenses of devoir: as,

We should do that; Nous devrions faire cela.

They should not lose their time; Ils ne devoient pas perdre leur temps.

You should have learnt your lesson; Vous auriez du apprendre votre leçon.

4°. Can and could, may and might, import power and possibility, and are almost always taken in the sense of being able, and made in French by pouvoir, though might and could are oftener used as signs, than can and may: as,

They could not do it; Ils ne pouvoient pas le faire.

You could or might work; Vous pourriez travailler.

He could or might have done that; Il auroit pu faire cela.

I could or might have gone thither; J'aurois pu y aller.

I can or may do it; Je puis le foire.

That we may see; Afin que nous voyions, or puissions voir.

That I might read; Afin que je lusse, or que je pusse lire.

N. B. Though there is a difference between could and might, and they cannot be used in English promiscuously the one for the other, yet I have coupled them together in the aforesaid examples, because there is but one way to render them in French, to wit, the conditional tense of pouvoir.

5°. I might, } Je pourrais, } before an in-
 I could, } } finitive, being { pouvoir, to be able;
 I*would, } Je voudrais, } made in French { vouloir, to be willing;
 I should, } } by the condi-
 I*ought, } Je devrois, } tional simple { devoir, ought or must;
 of

when the same come before a Compound tense of the infinitive, they must be made in the French by the Compound of the Conditional of the aforesaid verbs, and the Compound of the English infinitive, without any preposition before: as,

I might have } done that, J'aurois pu faire cela.
 I could have }

I would have done that, J'aurois voulu, or souhaité faire cela.

I should have } done that, J'aurois du faire cela.
 I ought to have }

* I could, is also Je pouvois, Je pus, and J'ai pu; I would, Je voulois, Je voulais J'ai voulu; and I ought, Je devois, J'ai du.

In all other cases do, did, shall, will, should, &c. are only signs which (with the verb to which they are joined) are expressed in French by one word only, to wit, the person of any tense simple or compound. Therefore do not say,

Je fais aimer,	} but {	J'aime,	I do love.
Je faisois, or fis travailler,		Je travaillai,	I did work
Nous voulons, or voudrions aller,		Nous irons,	we shall or will go.
Vous vouliez, or voudriez avoir,		Vous auriez,	you would have.
Je voudrois faire cela,		Je ferois cela,	I would do that.

Though it is sometimes indifferent to say with the signs could, may, might.

Je ferois cela, or Je pourrois faire cela ; I could do that.

Afin que je le fasse, or que je puisse le faire ; That I may do it.

Afin qu'il apprit, or qu'il pût apprendre ; That he might learn.

Again: Do not say

Je veux avoir vous faire cela, or Je veux vous avoir faire cela ; but Je veux que vous fassiez cela ; I will have you do that.

Nous ne voulions pas avoir eux venir, or les avoir venir ; but Nous ne voulions pas qu'ils vissent ; We would not have them come.

Je devois avoir fait cela ; but Je devois, or J'aurois du faire cela ; I should have done that, or ought to have done that.

Vous pouviez, or pourriez l'avoir fait ; but Vous auriez pu le faire ; You might have done that, or You could have done it.

Il vouloit avoir nous avoir fait cela, or Il nous auroit eu fait cela ; but Il vouloit que nous fissions cela, or Il voudroit que nous l'eussions fait : He would have had us done that, &c.

6°. Will and shall are sometimes left out in English after the conjunction when, denoting a future action; but the verb must always be expressed in the future in French: as,

When we have done that, for When we shall have done that,
Quand nous aurons fait cela.

When he is come, or when he comes, for When he shall or will have come; Quand il sera venu.

It is to be noted here also, that we use the present tense, and never the future, after the conjunction si, if, in a great many cases, when it is understood in English with the future: as,

If he shall come, s'il vient ; though we say,

Je ne sais s'il viendra, I do not know whether he will come.

7°. The English use the signs shall, will, &c. without any verb expressed in the second part of the sentence, or in answer to a question; but we always repeat in French the future or conditional of the verb, expressed in the first part of the sentence, or the future of faire; as,

Will you do that? I will. Voulez-vous faire cela, or ferez vous cela? Je le ferai, and not Je veux.

He will have me do that: but I shall not. Il veut que je fasse cela; mais je ne le ferai pas, or mais je n'en ferai rien.

Learn that this afternoon; I will. Apprenez cela tantôt: Je l'apprendrai.

It is the same with the word do, have, or did, standing for a present or preterite, expressed in the question to which we answer: which tense must be repeated in French in the answer: as,

Do you know him? Yes, I do.

Le connoissez-vous? Oui, je le connois; and not oui je fais.

Have you done that? Yes, I have.

Avez-vous fait cela? Oui, je l'ai fait; and not, oui, J'ai.

Did you go to Court yesterday? Yes, I did.

Allates-vous hier, à la Cour? Oui, j'y allai, or J'y fus.

Observe, that in such cases the verb repeated is also attended by its relation.

Moreover, observe, that the verb vouloir governs, as an active verb, a noun in the first state, for its direct Regimen; and will not take after it any such verb as have, get, or take, before its uoun, as in English: as,

Voulez-vous un livre, and not Voulez-vous avoir un livre?

Will you have a book?

En voulez-vous un écu? Will you take a crown for it? :

Voulez-vous du tabac dans votre tabatière? and not Voulez-vous avoir du, &c. Will you have any snuff in your box?

It is the same with avoir: as,

J'ai un beau tableau à vendre; I have got a fine picture to sell.

8°. To express the continuance of an action or thing, in English, the verb is varied in all its tenses, by the gerund, with the verb substantive to be: as,

Pres.	I am writing,	} Instead of {	I write.
Imp.	} I was writing,		I wrote.
Pret.			I did write.
Con.	I have been writing,		I have written.
	I had been writing.		I had written.
Fut.	I shall be writing.	I shall write.

That continuance of action is likewise expressed in French by the several tenses of être, but with the present tense simple in the infinitive, preceded by the preposition à instead of the gerund.

I am writing ; Je suis à écrire.
 I was writing ; J'étois à écrire.
 What were you doing ? Qu'est-ce que vous étiez à faire ?
 When I shall be finishing my work ; Pendant que je serai à finir mon ouvrage.

Sometimes a is put before the English gerund.

Sometimes also that continuance of an action is expressed in French by turning the verb to be, and the gerund, into a reciprocal verb : as,

It is a doing ; Cela se fait, or On est à le faire.

The work was then forwarding ; L'ouvrage s'avançoit alors.

Observe, that those ways of speaking are sometimes necessarily expressed by on : as, The house is building ; On est à bâtir la maison, or only On bâtit la maison.

While the house was building, Pendant qu'on étoit à bâtir la maison, or Pendant qu'on bâtissoit la maison, which is better than Pendant que la maison se bâtit or se bâtissoit.

§ V. Of the Construction of certain English Particles, with respect to French.

THE English use their adverbs of place, here, there, where, compounded with those particles, of, by, upon, about, in, with, instead of the pronouns, this, that, which, and what, with the same particles : as, hereof, for	of this,	de ceci , or d'en.

thereof,	of that,	de cela , or d'en. whereof,	of what, of which,	de quoi, duquel, desquels, dont hereby,	by this,	par ceci. thereby,	by that,	par là, par cela. whereby,	by what, by which,	par qui, par lequel, par où.
hereupon,	upon this,	sur ceci.
thereupon,	upon that,	sur cela, là-dessus. whereupon,	upon what, or which,	sur quoi. hereabouts,	about this place,	autour d'ici, ici autour. thereabouts,	about that place,	autour de là, là autour. whereabouts,	about what place,	en quel endroit, où, vers où.
herein,	in this,	en ceci.
therein,	in that,	en cela.
wherein,	in what, in which,	en quoi. herewith,	with this,	avec ceci. therewith,	with that,	avec cela.
wherewith,	with what, or which,	avec quoi, avec lequel.

Whose and its (dont) are also used instead of, of whom, of which, of it (duquel, desquels, de laquelle, desquelles).

§ VI. Of the various Significations and Constructions of the Particle que.

It ought to have been observed, all along this treatise on the French language, that there are many particles, which, though the same with respect to their form, yet are very different with respect to their nature, or considered grammatically. Thus le, la, les, articles, must be carefully distinguished from le, la, les, pronouns: à preposition from a verb: leur pronoun personal from leur pronoun possessive; si conjunction conditional from si conjunction dubitative, and si comparative: as likewise several other words which are sometimes adverbs, sometimes prepositions, and sometimes conjunctions, according to the relation in which they stand to the parts of speech. But of all these particles there is none more variously used, and that gives more perplexity to the learner, in the construing of French Authors, than the particle que. Therefore it will not be amiss to make a particular section of this particle, and collect together all its several constructions.

Que is the fourth state of the pronoun relative qui, for both genders and numbers, and is said of all sorts of objects, rational, irrational, animate, and inanimate: as, L'homme, la femme que vous voyez; The man or woman whom you see: Les malheurs que vous appréhendez; The misfortunes which, or that you fear.

Que is the fourth state, and even the first (though seldom) of the pronoun interrogative quoi (what): as, Que dites-vous. Qu'est-ce que vous dites? What do you say? Qu'est-ce que de nous? What wretched creatures are we?

Que is the second and third state of the pronoun relative and interrogative que and quoi, standing for de qui, de quoi, dont, à qui, à quoi, for both genders and numbers: as, C'est de vous qu'on parle; It is you they are speaking of. C'est à vous qu'on s'adresse; To you they make application. (See p. 259, B.)

Que is a particle of which most conjunctions are composed: as, Afin que, That; De sorte que, So that; Puisque, Since, Quoique, Although, &c.

Que is a conjunction, used in the second part of a period, joined to the first by the enclitic &, instead of repeating the conjunction si, expressed at the head of the first sentence; and this que governs the subjunctive: as, S'il le souhaite, & que vous le routiez; if he desires it, and you will have it so.

Que is used in the middle of a sentence in lieu of the conjunctions Comme, lorsque (as, when), though they were not expressed before: as, Ils arrivèrent, que j'allois partir: They arrived as or when I was about to depart. Nous partimes, qu'il pleuvoit à verse, We set out at a time when it did rain as fast as it could pour.

Where peut-être occurs in the first member of a phrase, Que is its vicegerent in the second: as, Peut-être l'aime-t-il, mais qu'il ne veut pas l'épouser; Perhaps he loves her, but perhaps he is unwilling to marry her.

Que is used instead of à moins que, avant que, sans que (unless, before, without); and, like these conjunctions, governs the subjunctive, and requires the negative ne before the next verb: as, Je ne serai point content que je ne le sache; I shall never be contented unless I know it: Je n'irai point qu'elle ne soit venue; I will not go thither before she come.

Que is used for jusqu'à ce que (till, until) and, like this conjunction, governs the subjunctive: as, attendez qu'il vienne, stay till or until he come.

Que is used for pendant (yet, as yet): Il me verroit périr, qu'il n'en seroit pas touché; He would see me die, yet he would not be concerned at it: Il auroit tout l'or du monde, qu'il en voudroit encore davantage; Though he should enjoy all the gold in the world, yet he would wish for more.

Que is used instead of afin que (that, to the end that), and, like this conjunction, governs the subjunctive: as, Approchez, que je vous baise, Draw near, that I may kiss you: Je vous prie de venir ici, que je vous dise quelque chose; Pray, come hither, that I may speak to you.

Que is used in lieu of de peur que (lest, or for fear of), and, like this conjunction, governs the subjunctive, and requires the particle ne before the verb: as, N'approchez pas de ce chien, qu'il ne vous morde; Do not go near that dog, lest he should bite you. Dépêchons-nous, que quelqu'un ne vienne; Let us make haste, for fear somebody should happen to come.

Que is used in the place of si or dès que (if, as soon as) in the beginning of a sentence, and governs the subjunctive: as, Qu'il boive de la bière, il est malade à la mort; If or When, or As soon as he drinks beer, he is sick to death.

Que is used in the middle of a sentence for depuis que (since); as, Il n'y a qu'une heure, qu'il est parti; It is but an hour since he went away.

Que is used for de sorte que (so that): as, Si vous n'êtes pas sage, je vous étrillerai, que rien n'y manquera; If you are not good, I will flog you soundly.

Que is used before the second verb of a sentence beginning with the conjunction à peine, which it serves to compose (scarce, hardly than): as, A peine eut-il achevé de parler, qu'il expira: He had hardly done speaking, but he expired, or he had no sooner done speaking, than he expired.

Que (than), is used before the noun or adnoun following an adverb comparative: as, Le mari est plus raisonnable que la femme; The husband is more reasonable than the wife. Plutôt que de le faire; Rather than do it.

Que, coming after an adnoun, signifies comme; and quoique, if the adnoun is preceded by tout: as, malade qu'il est, il ne sauroit vaquer à ses affaires; Being ill, he cannot attend business. Tout savant qu'il est, il a bien peu de jugement; As learned as he is, he has but very little judgment.

Que, after a noun of time, signifies quand (when); as, Le jour qu'il partit; The day when he set out.

Que, after a noun of place, signifies où (where): as, C'est à la cour, qu'on apprend les manières polies; It is at court one learns or where one learns politeness, or polite ways of behaving.

Que, (let) denotes the third person of the imperative: as, Qu'il parle; Let him speak. Qu'ils rient; Let them laugh.

Que is left out in these following imperative phrases of the sing. numb. Vendra qui voudra; Come who will. Sauve qui peut; Save himself who can, or let every one make the best of his way, or take to his heels. Qui m'aime me suive; Let him that loves me follow me.

Que (that) is used in the beginning of a sentence with the indicative; but such sentences as these are mostly titles to a chapter or section: as, Qu'on ne peut prouver l'immortalité de l'âme, avant d'en connoître la nature, & que sa nature est incompréhensible; That the immortality of the soul cannot be proved before its nature is known, and that the nature of the soul is incomprehensible.

Que is used between two verbs, to determine and specify the sense of the first, and governs sometimes the indicative, and sometimes the subjunctive, according to the nature and signification of the first verb. This determinate conjunction is sometimes englished by that, but most times left out and understood: as, Je vous assure que cela est ainsi; I assure you that it is so. Je doute que cela soit ainsi; I doubt whether it be so or no.

Que, in the middle of a sentence beginning with the demonstrative c'est, is conductive, and has the force of namely: as, C'est une passion dangereuse que le jeu; Gaming is a dangerous passion. C'est une sorte de honte que d'être malheureux; It is a kind of shame to be miserable.

Que, being immediately preceded by c'est, signifies parceque: as, C'est que je ne savois pas que—It is, or It was, because

I did not know that :—And when a word comes between c'est and que, c'est que is a redundancy : as, C'est alors que je vis ; It was then I saw, or only then I saw.

Que, after the impersonal il y a, with a noun denoting time, is only an expletive : as, Il y a dix ans que je l'aime ; I have loved her these ten years.

Que, being followed by si in the beginning of a sentence, is only an expletive ; as, Que si vous dites ; If you say, And if you say.

Que, after tel, or an adnoun preceded by the adverb si, is englished by as : as, Soyez tel que vous voulez être estimé ; Be such as you would be taken for : Je ne suis pas si fou que de le croire ; I am not such a fool as to believe it.

Que, after autre and autrement, signifies than ; as, Il est tout autre que vous ne disiez ; He is quite another man than you said.

Que, being used in the beginning of a sentence with the subjunctive, denotes wishing or imprecation : as, Que Dieu vous bénisse ; God bless you : Que je meure si j'en sais quelque chose, Let me die if I know any thing of it.

Sometimes also que is left out in this kind of sentences : as, Dieu vous bénisse, God bless you ; Grand bien vous fasse, Much good may it do you.

Que is also used in the beginning of a sentence with the subjunctive, to denote, by an exclamation, one's surprise, aversion, and reluctance of something ; in which case there is a verb grammatically understood before que ; as, Qu'il se soit oublié jusqu'à ce point ! I wonder, or is it possible for him to have forgot himself so far ? Que j'agisse contre ma conscience ! Must I do a thing, or How can I do a thing against my conscience !

Que is used adverbially in the beginning of a sentence of exclamation with the indicative, and is rendered into English several ways, according to the nature of the sentence ; for if the verb coming after que is followed by another verb, que is englished by how much : as, Que vous aimez à parler ! How much you like to talk !—If the verb coming after que is followed by an adnoun only, que is englished by how, only, before the adnoun : as, Qu'il fait crotté ! How dirty it is ! Qu'elle est aimable ! How lovely she is !—Sometimes the exclamation, or admiration, is expressed without any verb : as, Que de plaisir & de peine tout à la fois ! How much pleasure and trouble at once !—Sometimes also que comes after the noun, especially if indignation meets with admiration ; as, Le malheureux qu'il est ! What a wretch he is ! L'indigne action que la sienne ! O the unworthy action of his ! Les beaux livres que vous avez ! What fine books you have !

Que, in the beginning of an interrogative sentence, signifies comment (how) : as, Que savez-vous si l'âme de votre père n'étoit pas passée dans cette bête ? How do you know but that your father's soul had passed into that creature ?

Que, beginning a sentence of interrogation, and followed by the negative ne only, stands for pourquoi (why) : as, Que ne parlez-vous ? Why do not you speak ? Que ne lui dites-vous cela ? Why do not you tell him that ? And when que is followed by the double negative ne and pas, it stands for quelle chose (what or what thing) : as, Que ne fait-il pas pour s'enrichir ? What thing does he not do to grow rich ? Que ne lui dites-vous pas pour l'en détourner ? Is there any thing but you told him to deter him from it ?

Que, in the beginning of a sentence of exclamation, and followed by ne denotes only a wish and a great desire : as, Que ne suis-je déjà aux portes de Valence ! Would I were already at the gates of Valencia !

Que, in the middle of a sentence, but preceded by ne with some words between, signifies seulement (only, but, nothing but, &c.) as, Le Roi n'a en vue que le bien public ; The King has no other view but, or only aims at, the public good. And when que is preceded by the two negatives, and followed by a verb, it signifies à moins que (unless, but), and the verb must be put in the subjunctive with ne : as, Je ne sors point que je ne m'enrhume ; I never go abroad, but I catch cold.

Que, preceded by ne, and followed by the infinitive faire, without a preposition, signifies nothing ; or to need not, if faire is followed by another infinitive with de : as, Je n'ai que faire de cela, I have nothing to do with that ; Je n'ai que faire d'y aller, I need not go there. If faire is followed by the preposition à, it makes another idiom of a different signification : as, Je n'ai que faire à cela, I am not concerned with that.

Que, preceded by any tense of faire with the negative ne, and followed by an infinitive without any preposition at all, denotes only the continuance of the action signified by the second verb, and is englished by to do nothing but : as, Il ne fait que boire & manger, He does nothing but eat and drink.

Que, preceded by any tense of faire with the negative ne, and followed by an infinitive with the preposition de, denotes that the action signified by the second verb began some few minutes, a very little while, one moment before, that it does or did just or just now begin, and is expressed by just, or just now: as, Nous ne faisons que de commencer, We do but begin, We have but just begun: Il ne faisoit que d'achever, quand—He had just finished, when—

Que, besides these 38 significations, serves to form a great many idiomatical phrases, which must be learnt in my Dictionary, at this word.

§ VII. Of inseparable Prepositions.

Besides the prepositions that have been fully treated of, there are several particles in the beginning of words which are mere prepositions that have passed from the Latin Tongue into the French, wherein they signify nothing of themselves, without the words that are composed of them; and are therefore called inseparable prepositions. These particles are de, des, dis, é, ex, en, in, im, il, ir, ig, re, sur, which may deserve the following observations.

1^o. The particles de, des, and dis, usually serve, in the beginning of words, to denote the contrary of what is signified by the words which they compose, and have the same signification, as the English particle un in the beginning of words: as, défaire to undo, dédire to unsay, décamper to decamp, march off, déranger to put out of order, désarmer to disarm, déshabiller to undress, désunir to disunite, disgrâce disgrace, disproportion, disproportion, &c.—Sometimes also they only serve to extend more the signification of the simple: as, découper to cut (not in its common signification), to carve, démontrer to demonstrate, disperser to disperse, to scatter about, dissoudre to dissolve.

2^o. é and ex, in the beginning of words, sometimes denote privation and separation, or taking off: as, écervelé hare-brained, écrémer to take off the cream from the milk, effilé fringed (not in the common signification), essouffler to put out of breath, excommunier to excommunicate, exterminer to exterminate, destroy entirely, extraire to extract, draw, or take out. Sometimes they denote production of an action, and add to, or extend more, the signification of the simple; as ébranler to shake, échanger to exchange, échauder to scald, éprouver to try, exalter to exalt, extol, exhausser to raise higher, expliquer to explain, expound.

The particle en, in words compound, keeps pretty near the same signification which it has with the simple, when it has a separable preposition; and usually denotes either the action whereby a thing is in some manner put in another : as, enclorre to inclose, enchaîner to chain, embrasser to embrace, emporter to take away, enrôler to enlist, envelopper to fold up, involve ; or the impression by which a thing receives such or such a form, and becomes such or such ; as, encourager to encourage, enrichir to enrich, ennivrer to fuddle, engrosser to get with child.

in, in the beginning of words, has sometimes the same use and signification as en ; as in investir to invest, insister to insist ; but it has commonly a privative power, and denotes quite the contrary of the signification of the simple : as, inanime inanimate, inconstant inconstant, incivil uncivil, infortuné unfortunate, injuste unjust, inhumain inhuman, innombrable innumerable, invincible invincible, inutile useless, &c.

It is the same with these inseparable particles : im, in immodeste immodest, imprimer to print, imparfait imperfect ; il in illégitime illegitimate, illicite unlawful ; ir, in irrégulier irregular, irrésolu irresolute ; ig, in ignoble ignoble, base ; all which particles are but the same particle in, which changes its n into the initial consonant of the word to which it is joined, according to the Genius of the language.

re, in the beginning of words, usually denotes either reiteration and reduplication of the action denoted by the word ; as in refaire to make or do again, redire to say again, revenir to come back again ; or restitution and re-establishment into a former state, as in redresser to make straight again, rallumer to light again, réunir to re-unite, &c. Sometimes also it only serves to extend further the signification of the simple : as in réveiller to awake, reluire to shine, repâître to feed, radoucir to appease, to sweeten.

re, is found besides in the beginning of a great many words simple, without making a part of them ; as in recommander to recommend, renoncer to renounce, redoutable dreadful, se repentir to repent, &c.

The particle sur, denotes excess of the action signified by the simple : as, surabondance superabundance, surcharger to overcharge, surnaturel supernatural, surfaire to exact, survivre to outlive, &c.

§ VIII. Observations upon Proper Names.

Reason requires that proper names of places, as Kingdoms, Counties, Cities, and Towns, should keep the same appellations all over the world, without varying according to the diversity of the languages spoken by the several nations ; so that England and London, &c. should be called by the same name, by the French, Spaniards, Italians, Turks, Russians, &c. as well as by the English; yet custom has obtained among most, if not all nations, to adopt foreign names to the Genius of their own language. Thus England is called by the French l'Angleterre; London, Londres; Germany, l'Allemagne; Bohemia, la Bohème; Poland, la Pologne; Cracow, Cracovie; &c. but it is only the most renowned places whose names are liable to variation. The others keep their national appellation: as, Kent, Bristol, Breslau, &c.

Neither are foreign proper names of men subject to any alteration. The following observations are only upon ancient Latin and Greek Proper Names, that occur in History, to which custom has given a French termination.

1st, Latin names of men in a never change; Agrippa, Dolabella, Nerva, Galba, Sylla, &c. are the same in French as in Latin, except Seneca that is changed into Sénèque. But proper names of women in a take all a French termination: some ie, as, Julia Julie, Livia Livie, Octavia Octavie; and some ine, as, Agrippina Agrippine; Cleopatra makes Cléopatre, and Poppea Poppée.

2dly, Names of men terminating in as, change as into e not sounded: as, Pythagoras Pythagore, Anaxagoras Anaxagore, Mecenas Mécène, Æneas Énée; Except Léonidas, Pélopidas, Prusias, Phidias, Epaminondas, Josias, Ananias, and all Hebrew names, that continue the same; as likewise names of women, as, Olympias, Alexander's mother, &c. and s final is sounded.

3dly, Names in e, take some the accent acute over it: as, Daphné, Phryné, Circé, Thisbé, Hébé, Cloé, &c. others make that e mute: as, Calliope, Climène, Melpomène, Mnémosine, Amphitrite, Ariadne, Cybèle, Euridice, Pénélope, &c.

5thly, Names in es lose their final s, and the e is not sounded: as, Demosthenes Démosthène, Mithridates Mithridate, Arsaces Arsace, Isocrates Isocrate, Apelles Apelle, Aristides Aristide, &c. except Cérès, Artaxerxès, Xerxès, Péricles, Chosroès, Verrès, and all dissyllables, that continue the same; but their last syllable has the sound of è grave, and the second x in Xerxès, the articulation of s.

6thly, Names in is, and in al, continue the same: as, Adonis, Omphis, Memphis, Sisygambis, Thalestris, &c. Annibal, Asdrubal, &c. Except Martial, Juvenal, and Mathilde, from Martialis, Juvenalis, Mathildis.

7thly, Latin names in o, and Greek in ov, have the termination of o nasal: as, Cicero Ciceron, Corbulo Corbulon, Varro

Varron, Strabo Strabon, Dido Didon, Xenophon Xenophon, &c. Except Labeo and Carbo; Clio, Calypso, Erato, Echo and Sappho.

8thly, As to names in us, this distinction is to be made. Proper names of two syllables only: as, Brutus, Cyrus, Cræsus, Porus, Pyrrhus, remain the same; except Titus that makes Tite, and Plautus Plaute, and such names of saints as, Petrus, Paulus, &c. that have been entirely frenchified into Pierre and Paul. Those of three or four syllables, if they are much celebrated, take the termination of e not sounded; as, Tacitus Tacite, Plus tarchus Plutarque, Homerus Homère, Virgilius Virgile, Ovidius Ovide, Horatius Horace, Petronius Pétrone, Pompeius Pompée, Quintus Curtius Quint Curce, Julius Cæsar Jule César, Aulu-Gellius Aulu-Gelle, Paulus Æmilius Paul-Emile, Lucretius Lucrèce. Terentius is changed into Térence, and Antonius into Antoine. The others, that do not occur so much, keep the Latin termination, Fulvius, Proculus, Quintius, Virginius, as likewise Darius and Marius; and the names of Barbarians, Alaric, Chilpéric, Théodoric. We also say Les Gracques the Gracchi.

9thly, Proper names in ianus take the French termination ien, Quintilien, Tertullien, Cyprien, &c. We say also Chaldéen, Lerneen, Néméen. But anus, preceded by a consonant, is changed into an; as, Coriolanus Coriolan. We also say Trajan, Séjan, Titan.

Names of Sects terminate also most commonly in ien; as, Presbytérien, Luthérien, Nestoriens, Eutychéens, Sociniens, &c. Some few only are excepted; as, Calviniste, Anabaptiste, &c.

As to the other proper names, ending with one or more consonants: as, Agar, Cæsar, Castor, Jacob, Joachim, Minos, Béatrix, &c. they remain the same in French.

Mr. Menage has made complete lists of all Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and Gothic proper names, which change their termination in the French, as also those that do not. Those who are desirous to know more of this matter must consult him.

§ IX. Observations upon the Titles annexed by Custom to the divers Ranks and Stations of civil Life.

It is the custom in France to call any Gentleman Monsieur, any married Gentlewoman Madame, and any Miss, young Lady, as well as any unmarried Gentlewoman (though she is ever so old), Mademoiselle. We say in the plural Messieurs, Mesdames, Mesdemoiselles. If in a company of young Ladies, or unmarried Gentlewomen (Demoiselles), there is one married Gentlewoman only (une Dame), we say Mesdames in speaking of them; and not Mesdemoiselles. We say, in speaking of a woman, La Dame, or la Demoiselle dont je vous ai parlé; The Lady, or Miss, whom I told you of. But we do not say le sieur nor les sieurs. Le Monsieur, for the Gentleman, is very seldom used, and le Gentilhomme (in that sense) never. In public acts, and through contempt, or in a banter, we say le sieur un tel, instead of Monsieur (Master such a one) and although these words are composed of a pronoun, and we write in two words nos Dames, nos Demoiselles, yet we make but one word of Monsieur, Messieurs, Madame, Mademoiselle, Monseigneur, and even the pronoun possessive in Monsieur stands for nothing, when an adnoun comes before the word, so that the adnoun must be preceded by another pronoun thus, Mon cher Monsieur, Dear Sir. Yet we do not say Ma chère Madame, but Ma chère Dame, Ma chère Demoiselle, Dear Madam, or Miss; Mon cher Seigneur, My dear Lord.

In speaking to the King, we say, Sire, Votre Majesté, Sire, Your Majesty; to the Queen, Madame, Votre Majesté, Madam, Your Majesty. Then we use the personal and possessive pronouns of the third person relating to Majesté, instead of the personal pronoun of the second person: as, Votre Majesté ne peut montrer pour son peuple plus d'amour qu'elle ne fait. Your Majesty cannot show more love to your people than you do.

Votre Majesté a enfin triomphé de ses ennemis; & elle les convainc que, &c. Your Majesty has at last triumphed over your enemies, and you convince them that, &c.

The King's Children, and Grand-children, are called Enfans de France. His brother's children, when he has any, are called Petits-fils de France. The eldest Prince (le fils aîné de France) is called Dauphin. In speaking of him, we say Monseigneur only, and he is never called Royal Highness: as, J'aurai l'honneur de dire à Monseigneur que j'ai exécuté ses ordres. The other Princes, his brothers, have divers titles, according to their appendages: as, the Duke of Burgundy, the Duke of Anjou, &c. and they are called Monseigneur, with the title Altesse Royale.

The Princesses of France, the King's daughters, are called Mesdames de France, as soon as they are born: Madame de France l'aînée, Madame de France puisnée, Madame de France troisième.

The King's Brother is called Monsieur only, when he is spoken of; but when we speak to him, we say Monseigneur, Votre Altesse Royale.

Les Petites-filles de France have the title of Mademoiselle. If there is but one, she is called Mademoiselle only; if she has any sisters, they take besides the title of some appendage: as, Mademoiselle de Clermont, Mademoiselle de Charolois, &c. When we speak to them, we say Mademoiselle, Votre Altesse Royale.

The princes of the Royal Blood, but who are not Petits-fils de France, are called the first Monsieur le Prince, the second Monsieur le Duc; the others have the title of some appendage or other: and when we speak to them, we say Monseigneur, Votre Altesse Sérénissime. The late Regent of France, great-grand-father of the present Duke of Orleans (1790), was Petit-fils de France, being son to Gaston, Lewis the XIVth's Brother. The present Duke of Orleans is only the first Prince of the blood. The son of Mr. le Duc's title is Prince of Condé, and that of the Prince of Condé's son is Duke of Bourbon: The present Prince of Condé's son is Duke of Bourbon, as the late Duke of Bourbon was his father.

The Dauphin's Consort is called Madame la Dauphine, and those of the children, grand-children, and Princes of the blood, have the same title as the Princes their consorts.

When the King dies, his Queen is called la Reine Mère; and Madame la Dauphine, then Queen, is called la Reine. If there were more Queens, as we have seen lately in Spain, the next to the Queen Mother is called Reine-Douairière. The widows of the Princes of the Blood are also called Douairières (Dowagers).

As to the Princes that are not of the Royal Blood, they are called Mon Prince, Votre Altesse.

The Chancellor of France, the Keeper of the Seals, the Members of the Council, and the Four Secretaries of State, the Dukes and Peers, the Contrôleur Général, and les Intendans (the Lieutenants of the Counties), are called Monseigneur, with the title of Grandeur, when we speak or write to them: in speaking of them, we only say Monsieur le Chancelier, Monsieur de Maurepas.

The Marshals of France, Lieutenants-General, and Ambassadors' titles, are Monseigneur, Votre Excellence.

We say to the Parliaments, to the Chambres des Parlemens, (the Houses of Parliaments) and other sovereign Companies (collectively), Nos Seigneurs du Parlement. Nos Seigneurs de la Grande Chambre. To their Speakers (les Présidens des Parlemens) the Attornies-General of Parliaments, and other sovereign Courts (distributively) we say Monseigneur, Votre Grandeur. But les Avocats-généraux, les Substituts, les Conseillers and other Magistrates, are called only Monsieur.

The Consorts to the Chancellor, Marshals, les Présidens, and Ambassadors, as likewise those of Dukes, Counts, Marquisses, and Barons, are called Madame la Chancelière, Madame la Maréchale, la Présidente, l'Ambassadrice; Madame la Duchesse, la Marquise, la Comtesse, &c. with the titles of Grandeur and Excellence, if their husbands have them: but we do not say Madame la Chevalière.

The Bishop of Rome is called le Pape (Pope), with the titles of Très-Saint-Père, Votre Sainteté (most holy Father, your Holiness). His Legates, and Apostolic Nuncios, have the title of Excellence; the Cardinals, that of Eminence; and the Archbishops and Bishops, that of Grandeur; and in speaking to them we say: Monseigneur, vosre Eminence, vosre Grandeur. The direction of a letter, or of a Dedication to them, is A Son Eminence, Monseigneur le Cardinal. A Monseigneur l'Illustrissime & Révérendissime, Archevêque, or Evêque. We also write Au Roi, A Monseigneur le Dauphin.

Any other person of what condition or rank soever they are, as, Marquis, Comte, Baron, Chevalier, are also called Monsieur, the French having nothing to answer these petty English titles, Worship, Honour, Reverence, Esquire. But in speaking to them we say Monsieur le Comte, Mr. le Chevalier.

When we speak to one below us in the world, as a Gentleman to a Tradesman, we add his name to Mr. as, Monsieur Renaut, je suis content de vosre ouvrage, mais je trouve que vous êtes bien cher; Mr. Renaut, I like your work very well, but think that you are very dear. To a soldier we say Camarade; to a countryman, and others of the lowest class of people, we say: mon ami, bon homme, bonne femme.

I had almost forgot to say, that Lawyers at the Bar call one another Maître instead of Monsieur: as, Maître Patru, Maître Chevalier, &c.

The expressions of tenderness, used among the French, are mon cher, ma chère; mon ami, mon cher ami, ma chère amie; mon cœur, mon cher cœur; mon petit, ma petite. But we do not say, as the English, mon âme, ma chère âme, ma précieuse, ma chère précieuse, &c.

Children call their parents mon cher père, ma chère mère, mon frère, ma sœur, mon oncle, ma cousine: the pronoun possessive must not be left out, as in English, Father, Sister, Cousin, &c. They call their nurses mamie, ma bonne, (a contraction for mon amie, ma bonne amie): and they are called by them mon fils, ma fille, mon cher, mon poulet, ma poule.

School-boys call their master Monsieur, and they are called by him by their proper names, and never by the Christian one. Sometimes he calls his boys mon ami, petit garçon.

To conclude, the French language does not suffer many things to be called by their true names, either in conversation or writing, which can be expressed so in Latin, and other languages, without any indecency; but requires that they be expressed with Circumlocutions and Periphrases.

§ X. Observations upon the writing of Letters.

1°. Mr. Vaugelas pretends that a letter must not begin with Monsieur, Madame, Monseigneur, on account of these words being already at the top of the page. Indeed it is better to avoid the repeating of them, if possible; but, upon the whole, it is not so shocking as it seemed to our author.

2°. These same words must never be repeated in the same period, though it is ever so long; and the writer must endeavour to place them, either mediately or immediately, after the pronoun vous: as,

Il n'appartient qu'à vous, Monsieur, de, &c.

It becomes you alone, Sir, to, &c.

Pour vous dire, Madame, ce que je pense, &c.

To tell you, Madam, what I think, &c.

These honorary terms come also very properly after these conjunctions Copulative and Transitive, beginning sentences: as, Après tout, Monsieur, — Au reste, Monseigneur, — C'est pourquoy, Madame, — But,

3°. A special care ought to be taken, lest those terms should come in some part of the sentence, where they might cause a ridiculous equivocation, after a verb active; as,

Je ne veux pas acheter, Madame, si peu de chose à si haut prix;
I will not buy, Madam, so small a matter at so dear a rate.

Je ne doute pas que vous n'ayez reçu, Monsieur, ce que je vous ai envoyé;

I doubt not but you have received, Sir, what I sent you.

We write

Je ne doute pas, Monsieur, que, &c. Je ne veux pas, Madame, &c.

4°. If the letter is written to a King, a Prince, or a person of a distinguished rank, and is not a long one, the terms of Votre Majesté, Votre Altesse, Votre Excellence, Votre Grandeur, must be used with the pronoun elle instead of vous. If the letter is pretty long, vous may be used for variety (though not often); but it must always be attended by Votre Majesté, Votre Grandeur, &c.

5°. Never begin a letter thus: J'ai reçu la vôtre du premier du courant, ou du vingt-six du passé; I have received yours of the 1st instant, or the 26th part: or Vous verrez par celle ci, &c. You will see by this, &c. Celle-ci, la vôtre, le courant, and le passé, supposing always an antecedent, expressed before, to which they relate. However, as merchants do not scruple to write in this manner, those expressions may be looked upon as appropriated to trade and merchants' business; but quite banished from polite correspondence.

6°. Lastly, never end a letter, as in English, with a noun governed by a preposition. Therefore the ending of letters in the following manner will not do in French, and is contrary to the Genius of the language, inasmuch as the words are in a wrong order and false construction.

Permettez-moi de prendre le titre de, Monsieur, ou le titre, Monsieur de votre très-humble Serviteur; Permit me to take the title of, Sir, your most humble Servant.

Vous connoîtrez-dans peu que vous n'avez pas obligé un ingrat, en faisant un plaisir à, Monsieur, V. T. H. S. You will see in a short time that you have not obliged an ungrateful person, in doing a kindness to, Sir, Y. M. H. S.

Il n'y a point de service qui ne vous doive être rendu par Mons. V. T. H. S. There is no service but ought to be done to you by, Sir, Y. M. H. S.

Sachant bien qu'il n'y a rien que vous ne voulussiez faire pour, Mr. V. T. H. S. Knowing very well that there is nothing but what you would do for, Sir, Y. M. H. S.

Therefore nothing but a noun, expressing the subject or object of a verb can end a letter; thus,

J'ai l'honneur d'être, Mr. V. T. H. S.

I have the honour to be, Sir, Y. M. H. S.

Faites-moi l'honneur de me croire, Monsieur, V. T. H. S.

Do me the honour to believe me, Sir, Y. M. H. S.

§ XI. Of some Adnouns, whose Signification is different according to the different placing of them before or after some nouns.

These adnouns are fourteen or fifteen in number, which import, in the examples of the second column, an idea quite different from that which they do when considered as adnouns only, as in the first column.

honnête,	} Un honnête homme ;	Un homme honnête ;
		An honest man.
brave,	} Un brave homme ;	Un homme brave .
		An honest man, a gentleman.

gentil,	Un Gentilhomme ; A man nobly descended.	Un homme gentil ; A genteel man.
pauvre,	Un homme pauvre ; A poor man.	Un pauvre homme ; A man without genius or parts.
sage,	Une femme sage ; A sober discreet woman.	Une sage femme ; A midwife.
grosse,	Une grosse femme ; A big fat woman.	Une femme grosse ; A woman with child.
cruel,	Une femme cruelle ; A cruel woman.	Une cruelle femme ; A hard woman.
galant,	Un galant homme ; A clever well bred man,	Un homme galant ; One who runs after ladies.
plaisant,	Un homme plaisant ; A good, merry, facetious companion.	Un plaisant homme ; A ridiculous and impertinent fellow.
vilain,	Un vilain homme ; A disagreeable man.	Un homme vilain ; A niggardly fellow.
furieux,	Un furieux animal ; A huge creature.	Un animal furieux ; A fierce creature.
certain,	Une nouvelle certaine ; True or sure news (the certainty whereof cannot be questioned).	Une certaine nouvelle ; A certain piece of news (but which requires confirmation.)
grand,	Avoir l'air grand ; To have a noble aspect, to look grand.	Avoir le grand air ; To copy after great folks, to make a great figure, to live grand.
	Un grand homme ; A great man.	Un homme grand ; A tall man.

Again, Grand, speaking of a man, is said with respect to his merit, parts, and stature ; whereas, speaking of a woman, it is said with respect to her stature only. Thus un grand homme may equally well signify a tall man, and one of great parts and merit : but une grande femme signifies only a tall woman.

These five, used only in the following ways of speaking, are taken adverbially, and, as such, are indeclinable. (See also page 349.)

court.	Ils sont demeuré court.	Elles sont demeurées court ;
	They were mum, or	They were at a stand.
fort,	Il se fait fort de, &c. Elle se fait fort de, &c.	Ils se font, &c.
	He takes upon him to, &c.	She takes, &c. They, &c.
haut,	Vous êtes assise trop haut,	You sit too high, } said of a
bas,	Elle est assise trop bas,	She sits too low, } woman.
bon,	Des deniers revenant bon,	So much money good, the remainder of a sum of money.

Feu, feue (late), is an adjective without plural, and even without feminine when it is placed before the article, and we say:

Feu la reine, } the late queen.
La feue reine, }
